DAWN OF MAN'S SOUL PICTURED BY DR. BREASTED

2000 B. C. the Time, Egypt the Place.

BY JOHN BOETTIGER.

The dawn of character in man, and conscience, when he first began to appreciate the values of the world within himself, and to worship less the material world outside, was sketched vividly yesterday by Dr. James Henry Breasted in his address at the dedication of the new Oriental Institute at the University of Chicago.

Dr. Breasted defied the claims of those he called the "old school theologians," who would have it that man's conscience and character were produced by divine revelation or inspiration.

"It was the outgrowth of man's own social experience," the noted archeologist proclaimed, from out of his half a century of searching in the dead worlds. "It sprang out of his own soul and no outworn theological doctrine of inspiration, no conception of a spotlight of Divine Providence shining exclusively on Palestine, shall dispel man of this crowning glory of his life on earth, the discovery of character."

Traces the Rise of Man.

The date of this memorable human achievement was fixed by Dr. Breasted as 2,000 years before the birth of Christ, and the place in which it transpired was Egypt, perhaps in the shadows of the great pyramids.

Addressing a few hundred distinguished guests who came to witness the dedication of a building which is now the greatest headquarters for ancient research in the entire world, and of which he is the director, Dr. Breasted traced through the ages what he called, "The Rise of Man."

He took man as Darwin pictured him, then found him again in the Stone age and described his crude implements, some of which may be seen in the galleries of the institute's museum halls. Then the scientist took his listeners through the Bronze age, and up into the first great civilizations of the Egyptians.

Order Comes Out of Chaos.

Dr. Breasted told how laws and business methods came to succeed the earlier chaos of economic relationships, and of the advances of the ancients in art, literature and science. A treatise on surgery was written in Egypt nearly 5,000 years ago.

The ancient astronomers set down an eclipse of the moon in 2283 B. C. Later they measured the annual movements of the sun and moon with such breath taking accuracy that they erred only by one second in a year's revolution.

The old Egyptians built huge palaces and climaxed their material triumphs with the great pyramids. Dr. Breasted told of the architect Khufu-onekh, who built the Pyramid of Gizeh, and whose name means "Khufu lives," or in the Greek form, "Cheops lives," certainly a significant name, said Dr. Breasted, for the builder of a pyramid which is still the greatest of all masonry buildings.

Historical Document in Stone.

"The Great Pyramid of Gizeh," the scientist continued, "is a document in the history of the human mind. It clearly discloses man's sense of sovereign power in his triumph over material forces.

"For himself and for his sovereign the pharaoh's engineer was achieving the conquest of immortality by sheer command of material forces—an immortality that consisted in survival of the king's body, sheathed in an impenetrable husk of masonry.

"Here, then, was a man still under the tremendous impression of the physical world, the world about him, but not yet aware of the world within him. When five or six hundred years of desert storms had buffeted the Great Pyramid of Gizeh and its companions on the Sahara plateau, a thoughtful Egyptian looked up at the pyramids and sang of the colossal futility of merely physical survival of the body.

First Age of Disillusionment.

"The human soul had entered the first great age of disillusionment. We begin to hear remote voices that proclaim the utter futility of material conquest. As if through the dust and smoke of an engrossing conflict man for the first time caught something of the veiled splendor of the moral vision.

"He began to hear the voices within himself, and out of the conflict of social forces he gradually became conscious of the inner values. Thus the Egyptians were the discoverers of character.

"Not projected from the outside into

LEADERS UNITE TO PUT SPEED IN REVENUE RELIEF

Joint Legislative Committee Urged.

Pay Teachers First

Teachers were assured a month's pay before Christmas yesterday with the announcement that the first money raised in the tax warrant sale campaign would go to them. Details on page 25.

BY PARKE BROWN.

Impetus was given yesterday to the plan for the creation of a joint committee of the two houses of the legislature to formulate and support a definite program of financial relief for the local governments of Cook county.

The plan was approved informally at a conference held in Mayor Cermak's office by his invitation. More than fifty persons attended, including legislative leaders, local officials, representatives of Gov. Emmerson's tax conference, and spokesmen for civic organizations.

No definite action was taken on any pending legislation, but the general opinion was that the joint committee should be created and should work in "continuous session" with the local officials to clarify and speed up the work of the special session of the assembly.

Plan First Advanced By Igoe.

The proposal for this form of cooperation between the two chambers at Springfield was advanced two weeks ago by Representative Michael L. Igoe, minority leader of the house, but it was not well received by senate leaders and the house then created its own special steering committee.

After two hours of discussion in the mayor's office, discussion that jumped here and there, President L. E. Myers of the school board revived the cooperative idea as the only method by which real advance would be possible.

Later, before the conference closed, Mayor Cermak pressed for an agreement on the plan and it was tacitly given by legislative leaders.

It was agreed also that Mayor Cermak, President Emmett Whealan of the county board, President Myers, and President T. J. Bowler of the sanitary district, accompanied by a large number of aldermen and officials would go tomorrow to Springfield where on Tuesday and Wednesday they will be heard in joint sessions of the two houses.

Relief Needed Now—Cermak.

"I don't believe the talk that the legislature will adjourn without accomplishing anything of a substantial nature," said the mayor at the beginning of the conference. "That would mean just another session in the near future, for relief must be supplied."

"How far could you go without relief?" asked Senator Harold Kessinger of Aurora.

"Not at all," answered the mayor emphatically. "We're all through now."

A few minutes later, Mr. Cermak brought up the subject of the income tax bill.

"As I understand it," he said, "there is no chance for the income tax."

But before the meeting adjourned Senator Kessinger and others were arguing that the income tax bill should be passed with an emergency clause so that it would take effect immediately. Senator Richard J. Barr of Joliet said he thought it would pass the upper chamber and had a chance in the house.

Voices Legislators' Fear.

This part of the discussion brought from Speaker David E. Shanahan of the house a statement that what is in the hearts of many members of the legislature who are up for reelection is a fear they will be charged with raising taxes if they vote for the bills sponsored by the governor's tax conference. Later representatives of the conference explained their plan of requiring that all new revenue must be used to reduce existing taxes.

Minority Leader Igoe recalled what Melvin A. Traylor, president of the First National bank, told the assembly last week—that public credit cannot be restored until the people pay their taxes. Speaking of the tax suit before County Judge Jarecki which attacks the legality of the assessment rolls of 1928 and 1929, Mr. Igoe expressed pessimism.

"I don't believe the case will be decided in favor of the assessment rolls," he said.

Schnackenberg More Hopeful.

"I cannot believe the 1928 and 1929 rolls will be invalidated," said Repre-

Hand Trapped in Door of Bus, Woman Killed

Miss Irene Tepe, 29 years old, 862 Lakeside place, was fatally injured yesterday afternoon when her hand was caught in the door of a crowded motor bus at State and Washington streets, and she was thrown beneath the wheels. Hundreds of men and women witnessed the accident.

The young woman was taken to the Iroquois Memorial hospital, and then removed to the Columbus Memorial hospital, where she died two hours later.

Witnesses told the Central police that Miss Tepe had placed one foot on the step of the bus when the driver, evidently believing that every one was aboard, closed the pneumatic door. The young woman's hand was caught and she was thrown from the step. When the bus started the jerk freed her hand, but she fell to the street and rolled beneath the rear wheels.

Another version of the accident is given by the coach company. According to Hal Andrews, publicity manager, officials of the company questioned six witnesses, who told them that Miss Tete either stepped or was pushed by the crowd of shoppers off the high curbing at the corner and fell under the rear wheel, which passed over her.

The bus driver, John Oman, 25 years old, 4946 Sheridan road, was questioned by police and ordered to appear at the inquest. He said that because of the crowd he had been unable to see the door. He stated he had closed the door and started the machine in the belief that all the passengers were aboard.

BANDITS PUCKER THEIR VICTIM'S LIPS WITH ALUM

Boxford, Mass., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—Five bandits, who blocked off alarms by cutting the main telephone cables out of Boxford, tonight forced an aged victim to drink alum water to pucker his lips and prevent an outcry, nailed his family up in a closet, ransacked the house and escaped in an auto.

The bandits entered the house, knocked down John S. Dorman, 72, shoved him into the living room and forced him to drink the alum water to prevent his warning the rest of the family. They then forced other members of the household into a closet and nailed the door shut.

Unidentified Man Jumps from Bridge and Drowns

An unidentified man about 40 years old committed suicide yesterday afternoon by leaping into the river from the Division street bridge. The body was recovered.

WATER MAIN BREAKS AND NEW YORK CITY STREETS ARE FLOODED

New York, Dec. 5.—[Special.]—A 48 inch main burst under the macadam in the center of the intersection of Madison avenue and Seventy-third street this afternoon. The heavy paving was broken and hundreds of gallons of water per minute poured into nearby streets for two hours. For blocks the street suggested the canals of Venice.

Traffic was cut off, lights went out and motors stopped on Madison avenue surface cars, hundreds of persons were penned into their dwellings, or barred from them by a swirling torrent, and basements of residences and churches were turned into cisterns with debris floating about in the darkness.

The flood waters extended into fashionable Park avenue, flooding several basements before the main could be turned off.

Shoots at Bird and Hits Girl; She Loses an Eye

Robert Wurtman, 391 Calumet boulevard, Harvey, fired a .22 caliber rifle at a sparrow on a tree in his yard yesterday. His bullet ricocheted from a limb and struck Doris Luke, 9 years old, 397 Calumet boulevard, in the right eye. Physicians at the Ingalls Memorial hospital, Harvey, found it necessary to remove the eye.

Society Folks Hunt Live Fox; Sheriff to Act

Sheriff Lester Tiffany of Lake county, announced last night that he would visit the fashionable Onwentsia Hunt club at Milburn, at 11 o'clock this morning to observe the opening of the Sunday fox hunt.

His contemplated appearance is the result of a complaint that four live foxes will be used in the chase. The complaint was also made to George Scott, treasurer and operating director of the Illinois Humane society, 1145 South Wabash avenue, and to Ida Himmelreich, of Waukegan, Lake County Humane society officer.

Jane Morton Protests.

The protests against the use of live foxes came from Miss Jane Morton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mark Morton, 430 Washington road, Lake Forest. Miss Morton also protested against last Sunday's chase in which, she said, a captive fox was released to be run down by hounds and killed. She branded that hunt as "inhuman treatment of a more or less tame fox."

Not in recent years, if ever, had a live fox been used in a local chase until last Sunday, it was said. The practice has been to mark a trail with a scented bag which is taken up by the hounds. This is the usual substitute for live animals in areas where there are no wild foxes.

Charges Use of Tame Fox.

Miss Norton declared last night that employment of a comparatively tame fox was not sportsmanship. Therefore, she said she refused an invitation to attend today's hunt. The fox used last week, she understood, had been captive for some time in a kennel near the hounds. When the fox was released, it was bewildered, she asserted, and was able to keep ahead of the hounds only a short distance.

"Chasing that fox was the same as shooting a barnyard duck," said Miss Norton. "I wouldn't participate in such a hunt."

Against Law, Claim.

Miss Morton first complained to Lake Forest police, and was referred to the Waukegan humane officer who in turn advised her to communicate with Mr. Scott. Mr. Scott later advised the sheriff. According to the Illinois Humane society, the killing of a fox by dogs is considered inhumane as defined in anti-cruelty laws.

Efforts to reach officials of the Onwentsia Hunt club were unsuccessful last night. Austin H. Niblack, master of the hunt, is out of the city. Joseph Jasper, the huntsman, is ill. Miss Morton does not belong to the club. Her father is a brother of Joy Morton, merchant, and a member of Joy Morton & Co.

Bayles Falls While Trying for New Mark

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 5.—Lowell R. Bayles, famous racing pilot of Springfield, Mass., was instantly killed this afternoon when his plane crashed and burst into flames at the Wayne county airport while he was attempting to break the world's land plane speed record.

Bayles was flying the measured 3 kilometer course. In accordance with the rules, he dived his plane from an altitude of about 1,500 feet at one end of the course, straightened it out at about 150 feet, and was tearing across the sky at that height when one wing dipped, the plane jerked violently around three times and dived into the ground.

Something had happened to throw the plane out of control momentarily. The moment was enough to send it crashing into the earth, as Bayles was flying at an estimated speed of more than 300 miles an hour.

World Record Within Grasp.

Last Tuesday Bayles attempted to break the world land plane speed record, but failed because his average speed in four dashes over the course fell just short of exceeding the existing record of 278.48 miles an hour by the required 4.97 miles an hour. This afternoon he was trying his plane out in preparation for another official attempt at the record.

Bayles held the American land plane speed record by a large margin, although it has not been made official as yet. The previous record of 266.59 miles an hour was established by Lieut. Alford J. Williams of the navy on Nov. 4, 1923. Bayles had flown at speeds of 300 miles an hour several times, and undoubtedly had flown faster than any other man in a land plane.

Bayles was 31 years old and a native of Newton, Ill. He once worked in southern Illinois coal mines, but learned to fly and barn-stormed the country in an old "Jenny," wartime model plane. He was bashful to an extreme. In the last two years his rise to fame was meteoric as the pilot of Gee Bee racers, manufactured in Springfield, Mass.

Flying a Racing Plane.

This afternoon Bayles was flying the Gee Bee super sportster racing plane, powered by a Wasp motor supercharged to more than 700 horsepower, in which he won the Thompson trophy race at the National Air races in Cleveland three months ago at an average speed for the 100 miles of 236 miles an hour. That race is the world's land plane speed classic.

Following the air races Bayles flew his plane to Springfield where the 535 horsepower Wasp Jr. motor was replaced by the more powerful Wasp motor.

Less than one month ago, on Nov. 8, Bayles flew his racing plane to Chicago to appear in the charity air show over Grant Park. Flying along the lake front he attained a speed of more than 300 miles an hour in sight of more than 100,000 Chicagoans.

One Killed, Four Hurt.

Kewanee, Ill., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—One woman is dead and another critically injured following the crash of a Braniff Airways transport plane carrying six persons into the side of a corn crib beside the airport here this afternoon at 5:30 o'clock. Two others passengers were injured, but the pilot and an employé of the line were uninjured. The woman killed was Mrs. Myrtle Messenger, 23, 194 Broadway avenue, Denver, Colo. She died of her injuries at 7:45 p. m. in Kewanee Public hospital, where all the injured were taken.

Those who were injured were:

MISS ALMA DUNCAN, 24, Commodore hotel, Kansas City, Mo.; has a broken pelvis and several fractured ribs. Her condition is critical.

C. H. KIMBALL, 30, 145 North Washington circle, Lake Forest, Ill. He is sales manager for the Old Ben Coal corporation, 232 South Clark street, Chicago, and had been in Kansas City on business.

MRS. CHRIS GUNDERSON, 25, 1067 Argyle street, Chicago, whose injuries are unknown.

The pilot was Jack Ayres, 30, of Kansas City. He and F. E. Quinby, 30, assistant traffic manager for the Braniff Airways in Chicago, the fifth passenger in the plane, were unhurt. The transport plane, a Lockheed Vega powered by a Wasp motor, was en route to Chicago from Kansas City, Mo.

2 'Horned Rabbits' Killed by Minnesota Hunters

Minneapolis, Minn., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—Rabbits with deer horns protruding from their heads are scampering through the woods in Minnesota these days. Two of them have just been bagged. Francis Johnson, son of former United States Senator Magnus Johnson, shot the first one while hunting near Kimball, Minn. The horns are an inch in diameter and two inches long.

CONGRESS WILL HAVE FIGHTS ON MYRIAD ISSUES

Party Clashes to Mark Session.

Democratic members of the house, meeting in caucus, selected John N. Garner of Texas for speaker and Henry T. Rainey of Illinois as floor leader.

The Republican minority ended their civil war. Bertrand H. Snell of New York will be candidate for speaker and, if beaten, will become minority floor leader, as John Q. Tilson withdrew from the race.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—With the federal treasury facing a two billion dollar deficit this fiscal year on top of a 900 million deficit last year, with the country still in the grip of the worst business depression in fifty years, and with the people staggering beneath a crushing burden of taxation, the Seventy-second congress which assembles for the first time on Monday will be confronted with the most serious peace time crisis in a generation or more.

The new congress will address itself to the solution of a multitude of critical problems of government with the house controlled by the Democrats and the senate only nominally controlled by the Republicans, a reflection of the popular reaction against the party in power manifested in the 1930 and 1931 elections. With the regular Republicans in the minority in both houses, the history of the 72d congress is likely to be a chronicle of constant warfare between capitol and White House.

Presidential Election Nears.

Nor is this all of the picture. The first session of the new congress will be held on the eve of the presidential election of 1932 in which President Hoover presumably will be the Republican candidate against a Democratic opponent whose candidacy is not unlikely to present the most formidable challenge to Republican supremacy since the Wilson administration.

The chambers of the senate and house will be the scene of the maneuverings of both parties for tactical advantage in the approaching mighty struggle for the presidency, with rival policies presented, attacked and defended, with party promises paraded to the electorate, with every conceivable vote catching device given its trial and with oceans of oratory spilled by politicians with an eye to the main chance. It will be a congress made notable by many votes, much talk and probably little accomplishment for the public good.

New Speaker on Job.

There will be evidence of a changed order on every side. On the speaker's rostrum in the house will be democratic Jack Garner, the weather-beaten Texas cowboy, in place of his late crony, the urbane, modishly garbed Nick Longworth—Jack the best poker player, as Nick was the best story teller, in congress. In the senate some old timers will be back, among them James Hamilton Lewis of the famous hirsute oriflamme of pink, and blind Tom Gore of Oklahoma. Heflin and Blease will be missed but not entirely, for Huey Long of Louisiana will be on his way to take his seat in February.

Of great historical interest in the senate scene will be the appearance to take the oath of Senator Hattie W. Caraway [Dem., Ark.], who, by virtue of appointment to fill the vacancy caused by the death of her husband, Senator Thaddeus H. Caraway, will be the first woman to hold a seat in the senate for more than the two complimentary days accorded Mrs. Rebecca L. Felton of Georgia, on Nov. 21 and 22, 1922, and by virtue of her recent nomination by her party, which is equivalent to election, will be the first woman elected to the upper house.

If the Democrats succeed in organizing the house on Monday the President's message will be received on Tuesday and the legislative machinery will begin grinding. Mr. Hoover has completed his message which is understood to deal with more subjects and at greater length than usual. Its most important recommendations have to do with raising of additional revenue to meet the deficit and with policies for alleviating the business depression and unemployment.

Deficit Big Problem.

The more important legislative matters to be dealt with by the new congress may be summarized as follows:

1. Deficit—The administration will propose to meet the deficit partly by further borrowing and partly by increased income taxes and a sales tax on luxuries. Numerous other plans will be presented, among them a proposal to legalize light wines and beer and impose stiff excise taxes thereon, to suspend the sinking fund for public debt retirement and abolish superfluous activities of the government.

2. Moratorium—Congress will authorize the Hoover moratorium on reparations and war debts payments, but possibly with a proviso that it does not imply approval of cancellation or reduction of war debts due the United States.

Relief Battles Brewing.

3. Depression—A multitude of bills for various forms of aid to victims of the depression will be considered, but the big fight will be over measures to procure appropriations of several billions of dollars for public works construction to relieve unemployment and other measures to appropriate federal funds directly to "feed the hungry." The latter class of measures will be resisted by the administration as a form of the "dole."

4. Farm board—Whether the farm board is to be continued, abolished or restricted in its future operations hangs on the outcome of legislation that will be moved by numerous interests dissatisfied with the present experiment in farm relief. Farm organizations will seek the retention of the board with the additional power to employ the equalization fee or the export debenture in surplus crop control.

5. Prohibition—With wet strength in the house increased to 170 members the anti-prohibitionists will endeavor to force the fighting on various measures to repeal or modify prohibition, to legalize beer and light wines, to hold a national referendum on the issue, and to reduce appropriations for enforcement.

Tariff Fight Predicted.

6. Tariff—Democratic control of the house will open the way to consideration of bills to reduce the protective tariff rates of the Smoot-Hawley act which all Democratic leaders have denounced as largely responsible for the depression. Such bills, if passed, undoubtedly would be vetoed and few if any of them could be passed over vetoes.

7. Banks—The president will ask congress to establish a system of home loan discount banks and to expand the credit facilities of the farm loan banks by increasing government subscription to their capital. He will also recommend the broadening of the rediscount eligibility provision of the federal reserve act.

8. Railroads—There will be numerous measures submitted for relief of the railroads, among them bills for regulation of bus and truck competitors, for repeal of the recapture clause, and for removal of other restrictions.

Trust Laws Coming Up.

9. Trusts—Proposed revision of the anti-trust laws will come before congress with the backing of the American Bar association and other influential bodies and will be considered in the light of new conditions such as those produced by the curtailment of oil production by the oil states.

10. Economic planning—Hard times have brought to the fore the Swope and other plans for minimizing the effects of industrial depression. A measure now being framed by the senate committee on manufactures proposes the creation of a national economic council of 15 members to study economic trends and recommend legislation to avert depressions.

11. National defense—President Hoover's curtailment of army and navy appropriations will be a bone of contention, with congress committees surveying the extent of our failure to build our navy up to parity with Britain's and inquiring particularly into the row between the President and the Navy league.

World Court an Issue.

12. World court—Mr. Hoover will press for ratification of the Root formula modifying the senate reservations to our adherence to the world court portocol, but with doubtful prospects of success because of increasing evidence, such as that of the Austro-German decision, that the court is the political puppet of the league of nations.

13. Philippines—As a result of growing pressure from agricultural interests in competition with the Filipinos' sugar and cocoanut oil, congress is likely to pass a bill providing for the liberation of the Philippines from American rule at no distant date.

14. Speculation—Consideration will be given to bills to limit short selling of stocks and agricultural products, in connection with which committees will investigate the stock market crash of 1929 and bear raids on stock, grain, and other produce exchanges.

Then there will be a multitude of other measures, such as unemployment insurance, remonetization of silver, policies to be pursued in time of war, particularly with regard to conscription of private property; recognition of Russia and methods of coping with soviet dumping policies; further restriction of immigration and admission of Japan to the quota privilege, and the disposition of Muscle Shoals, a perennial topic.

HELD AS EVANSTON ROBBER.

Arthur D. Martin, 27 years old, 18 East Chicago avenue, who was captured by police when he tried to rob George Theters, 722 South Halsted street, in front of 800 Chicago avenue, Evanston, was held to the grand jury in bonds of $5,000 by Magistrate Porter in Evanston yesterday.

A CLOSEUP VIEW OF GARNER, NEXT HOUSE SPEAKER

He's a Fightin' Democrat and Proud of It.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—"He's a Democrat and loves a fight. He is vehemently partisan and his delight is in sending stinging retorts across the aisle into the Republican ranks. He is explosive toward his foes, exuberant toward his friends. He has the gift of calling it quits when the whistle blows and of walking out arm in arm with the gentleman he was just lambasting.

He is John Nance Garner of Uvalde, Tex., "Jack" Garner to his cronies, Tio Juan to his Mexican contituents back home, and to the next congress—unless something intervenes—he will be speaker of the house of representatives.

He's Shrewd, Too.

They'll tell you he is shrewd and an excellent political prognosticator. Try and get him to say what his program is going to be before Mr. Hoover tells congress what the administration's program is going to be, and you'll get this for an answer:

"Look up my record for the last 28 years."

They tried to get him into the speaker's chair the other day to have his picture taken as he will look with the gavel in his hand.

He balked. They weren't going to get him into that chair unless the 219 house Democrats had beaten the 214 house Republicans in fair vote and put him there officially.

He is politically canny, but there are those who point to that record to which he refers and who claim that he hasn't always been consistent.

Wet or Dry? Who Can Tell?

If he's a dry—and nobody knows for certain—there's that vote against the 18th amendment. If he's a Democrat—and there's nobody in congress who will fight harder for his party—there's his record on the tariff; he's a modern Democrat who believes in taking care of the folks back home.

Famous is the time Representative J. Hampton Moore of Pennsylvania discovered that Garner had succeeded in getting a tariff on the mohair produced by his Texas district, despite the fact that there was no tariff on wool. Setting his accusation to rhyme, Mr. Moore read into the record, "Garner's Goat of Texas." Whereupon Garner grinned and replied:

"Hampy Moore is a helluva pote;
He don't know the difference
Between a sheep and a goat."

And if he's a true Jeffersonian, believing, as he has said, that the federal government usurps too many of the powers that should be left back home, there is his vote to put the government into business at Muscle Shoals to wonder at.

Recent entries in his record show that he voted for the bonus bill over the President's veto, but would have preferred a cash payment of the face value of the bonus certificates. He was a leader in the fight for drought relief. He opposed further restriction of immigration, voted for the bill to place a tax on colored oleomargarine, and for an amendment to the naval appropriation bill to recall the marines from Nicaragua.

A Native Texan.

One of his pet aversions is the method of granting tax refunds by decision of the treasury department. He has fought Secretary Mellon, whom he calls "Uncle Andy," almost as stridently and as strenuously as Senator "Jim Couzens of Michigan."

One of his pet desires has been to see the debenture plan of farm relief adopted.

The short, compact man with the weathered, ruddy face, narrow mouthed, thin nosed, with blue eyes darting out from beneath thick white eyebrows, was born in Texas' Red river country 63 years ago. At 19 he was threatened with tuberculosis and moved to his present home at Uvalde, where he has a small farm and pecan orchard.

John Garner punched cows, studied law, edited a paper. He became county judge and then state legislator. He first came to congress in 1903, the same year that his good friend, Nick Longworth, whose place Garner will fill, entered the house.

Garner's sociability is Jacksonian. He gets a new suit when his wife makes him; when strategy fails him, he resorts to rule by coercion. He dislikes the sort of society that is spelled with a capital S. He likes farming, hunting, fishing, and a game of poker or bridge. Talk of precedence annoys him; he holds by the ancient western invitation, "Light, stranger, and pull up a chair."

Reduced rates and short R. R. trip make Pinehurst vacations inexpensive and most enjoyable method of keeping fit.—Advt.

HOOVER PUTS FINAL TOUCHES ON HIS MESSAGE

Washington, D. C., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—President Hoover today added the final touches to his annual message to congress and settled back to wait with the rest of official and unofficial Washington for the whacks of the senate and house gavels which will call the 72d congress into session.

Capital residents exhibited more advance excitement over the convening of congress than usual, due partly to the growing strength of the Democratic party.

The action of the President in withholding his message from the press much longer than is usually customary before the convening of congress aroused much speculation today regarding its contents.

Most of the presidential cures for the business depression will be found in the annual message which will be ready Tuesday or Wednesday, depending on when congress is organized.

Ogden Mills, undersecretary of the treasury, and Eugene Meyer, governor of the federal reserve board, conferred with the President on his new finance plan this morning.

GARNER NAMED BY DEMOCRATS TO RULE HOUSE

Full Party Force Is Ready to Act.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—There wasn't a member missing when the house Democrats met in secret caucus today to nominate Representative John Nance Garner of Texas for speaker and to choose Representative Henry T. Rainey of Illinois as their floor leader.

The full Democratic roster of 219 members was present. That only 218 were able to vote was due to the fact that Percy H. Stewart, the wet who a few days ago took over the formerly Republican and dry seat from New Jersey's Fifth district, hadn't yet received his certificate of election.

He will have it on Monday when congress convenes, however, and unless fate turns a handspring, the Democrats are sure to control.

G. O. P. Avoids Warfare.

While the house Democrats balloted, the house Republicans learned that their ranks would not be divided by a civil war between the supporters of Representative Bertrand H. Snell of New York, nominee for the speakership, and Representative John Q. Tilson, holdover choice for floor leader. Both have claimed the Republican leadership in case of the probable Democratic victory. But today it was learned that Mr. Tilson will withdraw rather than promote further civil discord.

In the senate, both parties engaged in an effort to smooth the way on opening day. It is virtually certain that no attempt will be made to oppose the seating of Senators Elect Bankhead of Alabama and Bailey of North Carolina, and leaders of both sides were virtually agreed that the pending contest over the office of president pro tempore now held by Senator George H. Moses [Rep., N. H.] should be postponed until Tuesday.

A Changed House.

The house adjourned last March as a Republican controlled body—Republicans, 265; Democrats, 165; Farmer-Laborite, 1, and four vacancies.

The house that meets next Monday will wear a different political complexion, with that comfortable Republican majority of 100 melted away and a Democratic majority—a slim one, it is true, but a majority—set up in its place. The lineup, as the gavel in the fist of William Tyler Page, clerk of the house, calls the assembly to order, will be:

Democrats, 219; Republicans, 214; Farmer-Labor, 1, and one vacancy.

VOTE ON WORLD COURT IS SURE, BORAH SAYS

Washington, D. C., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—All doubt about action on the world court at the coming session of congress was eliminated today with the declaration by Senator William E. Borah [Rep., Idaho], chairman of the senate foreign relations committee, that a vote certainly would be taken. He said that the question of American adherence to the court would come up at the second meeting of the committee, and that as soon as pressing domestic problems were out of the way the world court question would be reported to the floor.

Senator Borah and others who oppose world court adherence are united in predicting the defeat of the protocol.

GLENN AND LEWIS TELL STAND ON CONGRESS ISSUES

Both Hit Dry Law and Ask Job Relief.

Replies of the two United States senators from Illinois, Otis F. Glenn and James Hamilton Lewis, to a questionnaire concerning the issues before the new congress were made public yesterday by the Associated Press.

"The most important matters confronting the 72d congress are those growing out of the present economic and financial crisis of the nation," said Senator Glenn. "Among these the most immediate need is that of unemployment relief.

"I think the various localities—municipalities and states—and their citizens should exhaust every reasonable effort to take care of their own destitute before passing their respective burdens along to the national treasury.

For Unemployment Insurance.

"I shall oppose a government dole but shall support steps to encourage and perhaps to compel capital and labor to institute unemployment insurance systems.

"The federal deficit is enormous and is increasing rapidly. No new tariff bill is expected in this session. With incomes reduced one-half, the congress is faced with the necessity of increasing the amount collected from income tax. Probably inheritance and gift taxes will be substantially increased.

"Prohibition is certain to be much before congress. Fence sitters in congress will have to be more specific in this session. Wet drinking, dry voting congressmen are destined to be less popular. Advocates of a change in the liquor laws have gained substantially in number, but I look for no liberalization of such laws at this session."

Lewis Opposes New Taxes.

Senator Lewis' statement read in part as follows:

"There should be no further taxation of any kind laid by the federal government on the people. The proposed undertakings calling for unlimited millions should at once be postponed to a fitting future.

"To give employment to unemployed, let the government arrange a credit pool for merchants and manufacturers to even losses.

"To meet the taxes now due the nation and pay the $2,000,000,000 deficit, return the national prohibition enforcement to the home governments. Allow each state to levy such local revenue on the described beverage, while the national government lays the former excise tax, as internal revenue, which in all brings forth the whole sum now due as taxes, but which is collected and pocketed by the booze bandits and lawless elements."

31 IN SENATE, 185 IN HOUSE FOR RUM TEST

Gain of 125 Is Claimed Over Last Congress.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—The 72d congress will contain 31 senators and 185 representatives who have declared themselves in favor of outright repeal of the 18th amendment or for submission of the amendment to the people for repeal, the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment claimed today.

The association contrasted its present figures with those for the last congress in which it declared only 14 senators and 77 representatives were in favor of similar legislation. Today's list add four senators and 15 representatives to a list published by the association last month.

Dry League Aroused.

At the same time a statement issued by the Anti-Saloon league waved the club of dry disfavor over congress, threatening to evict from the fold any member who sought to let the people express their wishes by voting for a resubmission of amendment.

"The league will consider any vote for a resolution to repeal the 18th amendment as a step toward legalizing liquor and therefore as a wet vote," read the league's manifesto. "The league does not accept the theory that a vote to resubmit the 18th amendment is a neutral vote."

Association's New List.

The latest list issued by the association Against the Prohibition Amendment is as follows:

Senators who have declared for submission or repeal:

Republicans — Bingham [Conn.], Walcott [Conn.], Glenn [Ill.], Couzens [Mich.], Schall [Minn.], Oddie [Nev.], Barbour [N. J.], Kean [N. J.], Cutting [N. M.], Frazier [N. D.], McNary [Ore.], Metcalf [R. I.], Hebert [R. I.], Dale, [Vermont], Blaine [Wis.], La Follette [Wis.].

Democrats—Lewis [Ill.], Broussard [La.], Tydings [Md.], Walsh [Mass.], Coolidge [Mass.], Hawes [Mo.], Wheeler [Mont.], Pittman [Nev.], Copeland [N. Y.], Wagner [N. Y.], Bulkley [O.], King [Utah], Dill [Wash.], Kendrick [Wyo.].

Farmer-Labor — Shipstead [Minn.]. Total—31.

Senators Couzens, Schall, Shipstead, Oddie, Frazier, McNary, King, Dale, Dill, and Kendrick are starred as being for submission, but not necessarily for repeal personally.

Additions in House.

To the former list of representatives, the new members for repeal or submission are as follows: For repeal—Stewart [Dem., N. J.] and Kleberg [Dem., Tex.]; for submission—Owen [Dem., Fla.], Canfield [Dem., Ind.], Woodruff [Rep., Mich.], Christgau [Rep., Minn.], Clague [Rep., Minn.], Andresen [Rep., Minn.], Nolan [Rep., Minn.], Knutson [Rep., Minn.], Selsig [Rep., Minn.], Kvale [F.-L., Minn.], Snell [Rep., N. Y.], Garner [Dem., Tex.], Lankford [Rep., Va.]. The New Hampshire vacancy, to be filled Jan. 5, is also counted by the association, since both candidates have declared either for repeal or submission.

HOOVER RIGHT IN POWER ROW, COURT DECIDES

Washington, D. C., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—Justice Peyton Gordon of the District Supreme court, threw victory President Hoover's way today when he denied the senate's application for a writ of quo warranto to oust George Otis Smith from his office as chairman of the federal power commission.

The controversy thus decided was begun during the last congress, when the senate first confirmed Dr. Smith's appointment by the President, then sought to retract its action following the commission's dismissal of two employés who had won the favor of the senate "progressives."

Following Justice Gordon's decision, Senator Thomas J. Walsh [Dem., Mont.], who led the fight for reconsideration of Dr. Smith's confirmation, announced that an appeal would be taken, but declined to comment further.

Justice Gordon held that President Hoover was entitled to make the appointment after receiving notification that the senate had given its approval to the nomination and as Dr. Smith had received the appointment to the office with the advice and consent of the senate he might not be removed therefrom except by executive order.

WILMETTE VOTES $600,000 FOR OWN WATER SUPPLY

Voters of Wilmette yesterday, at a special election, approved the issuance of $600,000 in bonds to construct a water supply plant. For the project 2,145 votes were cast; the opposition polled 1,426.

Since 1892 Wilmette has been purchasing water from Evanston at a price of 7 cents a hundred cubic feet. The contract expired in 1917 and was not renewed, but purchase of the water supply continued at the old rate.

Members of the Wilmette village board said they had gathered figures to show that by operating its own plant a saving of $41,000 a year could be made at the 7 cent rate. The bonds are to be amortized in forty years.

1,100 WITNESSES IN CANAL TRIAL NAMED BY STATE

Many Are Politicians and Labor Leaders.

JOHN E. NORTHUP.

A list of more than 1,100 witnesses was furnished to the defense yesterday by First Assistant State's Attorney John E. Northup, who is conducting the sanitary district graft conspiracy prosecution. The trial will start tomorrow morning before Chief Justice Harry Fisher of the Criminal court.

The witness list names many political and labor representatives of all parties and factions in the city. Members of both the Democratic and Republican parties are called to appear and give testimony against Timothy J. Crowe, former president of the sanitary district board, and the eight other defendants.

Political leaders' and labor leaders' names predominate on the list, although business men and semi-professional ball players also are named.

Plans to Compel Testimony.

"I have been besieged by political leaders and business men who want to get certain names off the list," said Prosecutor Northup in making public the names. "I do not care if the woman is the queen of England or the man the king of Siam, they must testify in this case.

"I am going to play no favorites. Everybody who has information is going to take the witness stand and testify to the truth or else suffer the consequences.

"Most of the witnesses already under oath have given their testimony before grand juries. They must repeat their stories to the judge or I will take summary action."

Among the Witnesses.

Among the more prominent witnesses named by the prosecutor are Mrs. Elizabeth Conkey, Democratic national committeewoman of Illinois; Municipal Judge Thomas Green. Thomas Maloy, business agent for the motion picture operators' union; E. J. Kelly, president of the south park board and chief engineer of the sanitary district; his wife, Mrs. Margaret K. Kelly, and Joseph W. Serhant, partner of Mayor Cermak in the real estate and banking business.

Maclay Hoyne, former state's attorney and later head of the sanitary district law department; Arthur (Prince Arthur) Quinn, near north side political leader; City Clerk Peter Brady, and former Judge William J. Uhlir are other political headliners appearing on the list.

James (Jim) Vaughan, former major league baseball star and now a local semi-professional baseball player, and Louis Gertenrich, also a semi-professional ball player, are others who will be called to the witness stand. They were among the members of Crowe's baseball team during the whoopee era of 1927-1928, it is reported. It is charged that they received money from the public treasury for playing baseball.

Charges of Pay Roll Padding.

A majority of the witnesses will be called to testify on the charge of pay roll padding contained in the conspiracy indictment. The list as given to the defense, however, does not separate the witnesses in regard to the various angles of the case.

The names of political leaders named in the list in addition to those already mentioned are as follows:

Adolph Radnitzer, former state representative; A. J. Layden, Democratic ward committeeman; Oscar De Priest Jr., son of Congressman Oscar De Priest; Frank E. Manning, a Democratic ward committeeman; Bartley Burg, a former county commissioner; George German Jr., son of a former first assistant state's attorney; James McSweeney, state representative, and Alexander Brodie, chief clerk of the coroner's office.

Other Defendants in Case.

The defendants in the case besides Crowe are James J. Touhy and James M. Whalen, present trustees; Frank Link, August Miller, and John K. Lawler, former trustees; John T. Miller, former manager of the permanent plants and structures department of the sanitary district; Martin Edelstein, former real estate agent for the district, and Timothy Connolly, former purchasing agent, who has been a fugitive for several years.

The defendants have announced that they will waive a jury and submit the case direct to the judge. Judges John Prystalski and James J. Kelly will sit with Chief Justice Fisher in an advisory capacity.

LOWELL BAYLES DIES AS SPEED PLANE CRASHES AT DETROIT

Bayles' plane is in flames at right and Bayles' body, which was thrown from wreckage, is indicated by arrow. At left is car of photographer, who narrowly escaped death. The crash occurred as Bayles swept down to 150 feet from the ground to start race on the measured course.

EDDIE 'IMMUNE' JACKSON, NOTED PICKPOCKET, DIES

Eddie (The Immune) Jackson, notorious pickpocket, died in the county hospital shortly after 1 o'clock this morning. In contrast to his old days of alleged illicit affluence, he was "down and out."

Only his sister, Mrs. Emma Olson, was at his bedside. None of his old pals was near. Nor had any visited him since he entered the hospital Nov. 28. At the time he told Dr. O. C. Nelson that "bad booze got me." The booze resulted in a cerebral hemorrhage, the immediate cause of death.

Jackson's real name was Oscar Jacobson. His descriptive title of "The Immune" was won through his consistent defeating of criminal charges. For forty years, police said, he operated as a pickpocket. With one or two exceptions he managed to squirm out of all his entanglements with the law.

Pretends He Is Injured; Holds Up 2 in Hospital

Holding a handkerchief to his face as though in pain, a young man walked into the lobby of the Woodlawn hospital at 62d street and Maryland avenue late last night. As Alvin H. Johnson, 643 Dewey place, the night clerk, looked up the man dropped the handkerchief and drew a gun. He forced Johnson and the latter's friend, Thomas Ryan, 6119 Ellis avenue, into another room, took $18 from the cash drawer, and fled.

FIND BODY OF TRAIN VICTIM.

The body of John Markereit, 27 years old, 7520 Colfax avenue, was found beside the suburban tracks of the Illinois Central railroad at 78th street and Exchange avenue last night. Apparently he had been struck and killed by a train.

REICHERS FAILS TO BREAK HAWKS' MARK, HAVANA TO NEW YORK

New York, Dec. 5.—[Special.]—Lou Reichers, personal and racing pilot of Bernarr MacFadden, missed the record set some time ago by Capt. Frank M. Hawks between Havana and New York today. Flying against headwinds most of the distance, Reichers took seven hours 34 minutes and 45 seconds for the trip. Hawks' time was 7 hours 30 minutes.

Reichers left Havana this morning at 9:09 o'clock and stopped at Miami for fuel. His wheels touched at Newark at 4:43:45 p. m. On Tuesday he lowered Hawks' record for the reverse trip by 16 minutes, making the trip in 6 hours 47 minutes. It was pointed out, however, that when Hawks made his records both ways he completed the round trip in the same day last July.

Reichers had a passenger with him on both trips. He was T. O. Warfield of the MacFadden publications.

RESOLES OLD SHOES FOR 8C EACH.

KIDNAP, DRUG AND BEAT CIGAR DEALER; MAY DIE

A strange case of kidnaping, drugging, and beating was revealed early this morning when James Clark, 35 years old, owner of a cigar store at 2536 Sheffield avenue, was found unconscious on the rear porch of his home at 3339 North Western avenue. He was suffering from a skull fracture and was taken to the Belmont hospital.

After being revived at the hospital he told Sergt. Paul Mielke of the Sheffield avenue station of his experiences. He was walking in Wrightwood avenue near Sheffield avenue, he said, when two men forced him into a car. They gagged and blindfolded him, then took him into a house. There they compelled him to take two pills, which caused him to become drowsy. He resisted at first and was beaten, he said. He knew nothing more until he entered the hospital.

Police learned that the abductors took $257 which Clark carried. While robbery was committed, it probably was not the only motive or the main motive, they theorized.

WHITE SLAVERS' MART RAIDED; 1 SHOT, 10 HELD

Letters Show Widespread Traffic of Ring.

Police of the Wabash avenue station late yesterday raided a beauty parlor at 2125 South Michigan avenue, alleged to have been the headquarters of a white slave trade extending over the middle west. The raiders arrested three men and seven women and seized a quantity of records bearing on the traffic.

Charles White, said by the police and agents of the federal department of justice to be the active head of the illegal business, attempted to escape and was shot in the right leg by Sergt. Arthur Hagerson as he fled across a vacant lot. He was taken to the Bridewell hospital.

Plans were being made last night to prosecute White and some of his fellow prisoners on charges of violating the Mann white slave act. Several of the girls in custody were brought here from other states, and letters found in the rear of the beauty parlor indicated that widely scattered disorderly houses recruited their girls through this agency.

Girl Gives First Clew.

An investigation of the ring has been conducted by the federal men and Assistant State's Attorney Harry Gabel for more than a week. A 16 year old girl, Josephine Wade, who was found on the street, furnished the first clew. She said that a woman known to her as Virginia Beason had brought her here from Detroit and introduced her to White.

Later Drucilla Reeder, 20 years old, of Cleveland, arrested in the house of Vivian Pallas at 4840 Magnolia avenue, told a similar story of being enticed into prostitution. Both the girls came to Chicago, expecting to find work, they said.

White and his accomplices, according to Capt. John Stege, placed advertisements in papers all over the country, offering seemingly legitimate jobs to girls who would come here, and even in some instances paying their railroad or bus fares.

Victim Arrives During Raid.

While the raiders were in the beauty parlor one of the alleged victims, Mary Slater, 22 years old, of Argentine, Kas., arrived carrying a suit case. She asserted she had come to Chicago on the promise that a good job was awaiting her. She was held as a witness.

One of the letters found was from a man in Peoria, who asked that White send him two girls at once, "medium sized blonds preferred."

On the information gathered by the police the Beason woman and two other persons, Mary Lewis and William Lewis, have been arrested in Detroit. Eight Negro members of the organization have been arrested here and it is reported that charges are to be placed against a policeman in the Summerdale station, who is alleged to have been taking bribes from owners of disorderly houses.

WIFE CHARGES OGLESBY'S SON WITH BIGAMY

Says He Was Married to Other Woman in 1920.

Seeking a bigamy indictment against her husband, Mrs. Maude Oglesby of Elkhart, Ill., wife of Jasper Oglesby, a son of Illinois' civil war governor, conferred in Crown Point yesterday with John Underwood, assistant prosecuting attorney of Lake county, Ind. He promised to present her case to a grand jury Wednesday.

Mrs. Oglesby's case against her husband is based principally upon the records of the county clerk, which reveal that a man giving his name as Ernest Oglevee married Myrtie Nicholson of Dexter, Kas., on June 28, 1920, which was shortly after the time that her husband abandoned her, the wife says. They had been married eight years at that time, she said, and had two children, both now living with her in straitened circumstances close to the large estate of her husband's family, which is headed by his brother, John G. Oglesby, a former lieutenant governor.

Accuses Mate of Bigamy.

"Jasper Oglesby and the woman he married bigamously lived in Elkhart for years," Mrs. Oglesby told Mr. Underwood. "They had two children—Emma, 7 years old, and Edward, 4 years old—but he has disappeared now. He owes me more than $4,000 in payments granted by his mother's will and also by a court order to support and educate my boys."

Mrs. Oglesby's lawyer, Branko Steiner of Barratt O'Hara's office, showed Mr. Underwood that when "Oglevee" applied for the marriage license in 1920 he gave his father's name as Richard and his mother's as Emma, those of Jasper Oglesby's parents. The ceremony was performed by the then pastor of the Crown Point Methodist Episcopal church, the Rev. J. A. Ayling, who has since died.

Charges Failure to Pay.

Mrs. Oglesby said the situation created by her presence in the same village with her husband's "bigamous" wife was one of constant embarrassment for her. To add to that, she said, she is almost penniless, due to her husband's failure to make his payments. She obtained a writ of attachment against him on Nov. 5, but it has not been served. She does not know his present whereabouts but believes he may have gone to Italy where a sister, the Countess Cenci, lives.

With her yesterday was her father, D. B. Byrum of Chicago. He will also go before the grand jury on Wednesday, he said.

MAYOR UNVEILS GIANTS IN LOOP

THRONGS WATCH UNVEILING OF STATE ST. GIANTS

Thousands of Chicagoans surged into State street yesterday morning to watch the unveiling of seventy huge grotesqueries constructed on the lamp posts between Lake and Van Buren streets by leading merchants of the street. Traffic along one of the world's busiest shopping streets was tied up for an hour.

Confetti, ticker tape, and noise filled the air as the canvas coverings fell away from the large plaster casts at 10:30 o'clock at a signal from Mayor Cermak, standing in the center of State and Madison streets. The long row of fantasies with their blinking electric eyes stood revealed.

Both sidewalks were crowded with adults and children the length of the loop. For several blocks both north and south of Madison and State the crowds filled the middle of the street as well. Street cars and automobile traffic were rerouted around State street. Busy shoppers and office workers stopped to watch as the holiday spirit was ushered into the loop with bands blaring under a darkened sky.

The ceremony was opened with a formal guard mount parade from Van Buren street north along State. In the parade were mounted police, the Harrison High school band, the Boy Scouts' championship drum and bugle corps, and a corps of Boy Scouts and Sea Scouts, who dropped off in pairs as each light standard was reached by the marching column, to release the canvas coverings at the mayor's signal.

Mayor Cermak was received by a reception committee of prominent merchants at State and Madison streets.

LAUNCH BATTLE TO END SCOURGE OF DIPHTHERIA

Seek to Save 500 Lives of Chicago Children.

The lives of 500 children of Chicago are at stake in a new campaign to be put under way today by Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, commissioner of health.

It is a battle to end the scourge of diphtheria in this city, where child deaths from that disease total nearly 500 a year.

Unless the spread of the disease is broken this year, not only will 500 child lives be lost, but 6,000 more children will contract the disease. Some of these 6,000 children will recover and have no serious after effects, but many of them will suffer from temporary paralysis, and many will have heart and kidney weaknesses for life.

"All Can Be Prevented."

"These statistics are the more appalling," said Dr. Bundesen yesterday, "because every case and every death could have been and should have been prevented.

"No child should ever have diphtheria. There is absolutely no excuse.

"Diphtheria is absolutely preventable by the simplest methods, and any parents who fail to safeguard their children against it should themselves be held responsible when their babies suffer and die with it."

The health commissioner outlined the scope of the campaign which is launched today, and which he said would be the most intensive battle against a disease ever waged in Chicago.

The mother of every child in Chicago will be asked personally to see that her baby is given the simple preventive against diphtheria.

The radio will play a part. Dr. Bundesen will speak at 4:15 this afternoon over station WENR.

Appeal on Water Bills.

Every water bill sent out by the city will carry with it a plea to householders to use their influence in seeing that every child within their ken is immunized.

The entire campaign, said Dr. Bundesen, will be waged without a penny's extra expense to the city. All the materials and all services not included in the regular work of the health department will be donated.

The bulletin explains that science has discovered that the administration of toxin-antitoxin in children over 6 years of age, and toxoid in children under that age, is a safe and prove preventive against diphtheria.

"Toxoid has been given to hundreds of thousands of children all over the country," the bulletin states. "No harm has ever come from its use, and there has been a great reduction in the amount of diphtheria wherever toxoid has been widely used.

"The method of giving toxoid to prevent diphtheria is simple and harmless. The effects are hardly noticeable in the young child. He goes about his play as usual. There is no need for him to spend a day in bed because of the doses. The doctor usually gives only two tiny doses—one week apart—to make the child safe for life from this killing and crippling disease."

The parents are urged to consult their family doctor, or if they cannot afford to call in a private physician, to take their children on any Saturday morning to any one of a list of 48 stations maintained by the health department and the Infant Welfare society in neighborhoods all over the city. The toxoid will be given free in these stations.

MILK DRIVERS' UNION WILL OPPOSE WAGE CUTS, LEADER WARNS

If Chicago and its suburbs expects a reduction in milk prices, the cut will have to be assumed by the farmers or the dealers or both.

This was the ultimatum given out yesterday from the headquarters of the Milk Wagon Drivers' union, local 753, at 220 South Ashland avenue. Robert C. Fritchie, head of the drivers' organization, said his group was not considering any change in the wage scale, either now or at the expiration of the five year contract with Chicago milk dealers next May.

"We don't intend to work for $30 a week," was Fitchie's comment when asked if the drivers were considering any change if the present retail price of milk, now 13 cents a quart, should be lowered a cent. The drivers on their present agreement are getting a minimum of $50 a week, with extra pay for loads above a fixed amount.

A committee of milk dealers is scheduled to meet tomorrow with officers of the Pure Milk association, the farmers' bargaining organization.

POISON FOUND IN BODY; HEIR UNDER ARREST

$200,000 Will Contest Is Reopened by Kin.

BY WALTER TROHAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Kalamazoo, Mich., Dec. 5—[Special.]—Three months of secret investigation into the deaths of an eccentric roofer and his spinster aunt was brought to light today following a series of dramatic revelations. Howard Miller, 28 year old roustabout and heir to a $200,000 estate through their deaths, is under arrest.

The arrest was preceded by the filing of a petition to reopen a contest of the spinster's will, which charged undue influence by Miller and hinted at "mysterious circumstances" surrounding the deaths. Simultaneously came the announcement of the discovery of poison in the body of the roofer and the exhumation, by court order, of the body of the aunt for a similar examination.

Aunt Dies Suddenly.

The roofer, Charles Hazard, 61 years old, died suddenly on Nov. 8, 1930, less than a month after his aunt, Miss Arvilla Parker, 81 years old, executed a will under which he was to receive one-third of her estate if he survived her. The will left two-thirds of the estate to Miller, also a nephew, though the petition disputes the relationship, and provided he receive Hazard's share in the event of the latter's death. Miss Parker died suddenly in Clearwater, Fla., Jan. 31, during a visit there with Miller.

Miller was arrested in his home at Battle Creek, Mich., by Sheriff Charles W. Struble. He was questioned by Prosecutor P. M. Tedrow of Kalamazoo county. Tedrow declined to discuss the questioning. He said Miller is being held without formal charge. The prosecutor hinted other arrests may follow. Miller's wife, Mrs. Beulah Alward Miller, nurse to Miss Parker in Florida, was not held.

Elgin Woman Reopens Contest.

The action to reopen the will contest was brought by Mrs. Grace Hazard Brown of Elgin, Ill., through Attorney Henry M. Kimball. Mrs. Brown lost a similar action last March, which was brought only on grounds of coercion. In the petition she states many new facts have been brought to her attention.

Another action contesting the will, brought by the Kalamazoo foundation, a charity holding corporation, which produced a will under which the entire estate was left to the organization, was decided in Miller's favor last week.

The petition describes Miss Parker as a parsimonious spinster who delighted in harassing neighbors in frequent lawsuits. Her affection for Hazard, by an oddity of her nature, was traced by friends to his bitter legal battle over the estate which she received from her father, H. S. Parker, pioneer shoe merchant.

Son Is Disinherited.

The Parker family is one of the oldest in this area. The elder Parker operated his store jointly with the haberdashery of his friend and later brother-in-law, A. A. Hazard. Parker left the estate to his daughter, disinheriting a son, Charles, because of the latter's habits. This son, Miller claims as a father by a marriage with a Beulah Parks in 1903, which ended in a divorce in 1904.

Miller has explained the abandonment of his rightful name by the fact he was raised by a Miller family in Battle Creek. The petition is accompanied with a certified copy of a birth certificate which shows him to be 27 years old and the son of a Howard Miller and Dora Miller of Battle Creek.

Miller, according to the petition, has led a checkered career. The petition cites his courtmartial for desertion from the United States Coast Guard and another courtmartial during service in the army. The petition also cites arrests at various times in several cities for various misdemeanors. Until recently, the petition avers, Miss Parker denied his kinship.

Pearl Culler, former housekeeper for Miss Parker, described Miller's appearance as a prodigal nephew at the Parker home Labor day, 1930.

"Miller came in looking like a tramp," she said. "He said he had hitch hiked from New York. In a short time he made his way into the affections of Miss Parker. He obtained money from her and he told me that he didn't intend to stick around unless she made a will in his favor."

The housekeeper told of Miller's obtaining $2,000 from the spinster to buy an automobile. She described the spinster's fury when she discovered Miller was making home brew in the home.

The petition charges that Miller removed furniture and took jewels from Miss Parker with the explanation he was storing them. It adds that he induced her to remove securities from a safety deposit box to another in Battle Creek. He also brought an attorney, Gerard Bristol, from Battle Creek to prepare a will for his aunt, the petition states.

Charge Woman Incapacitated.

The housekeeper was replaced by another, a Mrs. Immes, selected by Miller according to the petition. Subsequently the will was drawn and signed. Relatives insist Miss Parker was not in full possession of her faculties at that time, being incoherent in speech and mentally unable to dictate terms of a will.

The petition states that Charles Hazard died Nov. 8 under circumstances indicating poison. The petition adds that Howard Miller was constantly in attendance upon Charles Hazard during his long illness and death.

Hazard's death was attributed at the time to heart disease though relatives said he died in convulsions. He was buried in the family lot in Mountain Home cemetery, where his body was exhumed eight weeks ago for an autopsy. Authorities at the University of Michigan today released a report disclosing a quantity of arsenic was found with evidence of strychnine.

Urges Trip to Florida.

Following Hazard's death, Miller is said to have begun urging his aunt to take the trip to Florida by automobile. Relatives and friends declare she opposed the trip.

"After arriving in Florida," the petition states, "the said Arvilla Parker while in the personal care of said Howard Miller suffered a severe accident and a broken leg and soon thereafter sickened and died."

Reports from Florida stated Miss Parker was thrown from her wheelchair as it passed over soft ground while she was being propelled by Miller. She was apparently recovering when she was taken ill suddenly and died. Prosecutor Tedrow has applied for a copy of her death certificate. The body was brought to Kalamazoo for burial in the family lot at Mountain Home cemetery.

Miss Parker was attended by Miss Beulah Alward, a trained nurse employed by Miller. On her death he and Miss Alward were married. He returned to Kalamazoo for the funeral and later moved with his wife to Battle Creek.

HINT MICHIGAN MAN VICTIM OF POISON; EXHUMATION ASKED

Lansing, Mich., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—A murder mystery, having ramifications extending from the California coast to Michigan, was hinted here today when Roy Sadler, local traveling salesman, applied to Eaton county authorities for permission to exhume the body of his father, John F. Sadler, former Lansing merchant, who died several weeks ago in Santa Barbara, Cal.

While the younger Sadler would not divulge details he admitted to local authorities, to whom he first applied for the permit, that there is suspicion on the part of the family that his father died by poison or foul play of some sort. The body was shipped here from the west for interment. Burial was in a cemetery which lies just over the Ingham county line in Eaton county so it was necessary to obtain permission for exhumation from the prosecutor at Charlotte.

Mr. Sadler was a pioneer business man here, reputedly wealthy. He sold his interests here several years ago and moved to the Pacific coast where he had been living in retirement up until his death.

East St. Louis, Ill., Dec. 5.—(AP)—Mrs. Irene Ploudre, 30, East St. Louis, mother of a 11 months old child, has been placed on probation for two years on her plea of guilty to selling liquor provided by her husband, who she said had threatened to kill her and the baby if she reported him.

CHICAGOLAND GOT START IN OLD VIRGINIA

And So We Should Visit Monticello.

BY JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT.

(Pictures in Rotogravure Section.)

Charlottesville, Va., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—Here is the homeland of the first Chicagolanders. Here dwelt and worked and maneuvered six men who saw and who shaped the destiny of our city and of the imperial hinterland whose capital it is.

STUART G. GIBBONEY.

Only three of these empire builders ever beheld Chicagoland, but all of them had the vision of it, and all of them, either by their initiative or diplomacy or by their battles and explorations, wrought that vision into majestic reality.

This beautiful Albemarle county in central Virginia is of an area of only seven hundred square miles, but in thirty-one years of the eighteenth century it bred conquerors and founders and explorers of a domain extending from Pittsburgh to the Rockies.

Here, in history's most spacious and valid sense, we were given our start.

Here, amid the plains sloping away from the Blue Ridge and the Ragged mountains, our background lies.

Monticello Now the Nation's.

For here was born Thomas Jefferson, who bought from Napoleon the vast Louisiana territory which now is our hinterland, and here his beloved Monticello, for half a century his home, has been thrown open as a national shrine whither came last year sixty-three thousand pilgrims from many parts of the world to see one of the most interesting houses in the world.

American school children by their gifts of pennies and dimes helped to create the fund of half a million dollars by which the mansion became a national possession under the care of the Jefferson Memorial foundation. Under the direction of Stuart G. Gibboney of New York City, the foundation's president, and of Thomas L. Rhodes, for nearly half a century devoted superintendent of the estate under private and public ownership, the sum of $92,000 has been spent in judicious restorations. Today Monticello, cleared of mid-Victorian clutter, has regained the stateliness and dignity of the great days when Thomas Jefferson was its master and princes, statesmen, and philosophers were his week-end guests.

Neighbor Monroe's Ash Lawn.

At the foot of the lordly heights on which Jefferson built his mansion rises the modest cottage—"cabin," he called it—where James Monroe, who helped Robert Livingston make that stupendous Louisiana Purchase treaty, lived during twenty-six years, and whence he rode away to Washington in February, 1817, to take the oath as fifth President of the United States.

In front of the house is the stone "upping block," as they called a horse block then, at which he mounted his horse for that memorable ride, and, modest though the actual dwelling is, its dooryard is adorned with boxwood hedges of Monroe's planting which have taken more than a century to reach their present beauty and opulence and to see which horticulturists come from remote states.

Winston Johns' Service.

So, not only for the sake of wise James Monroe, whose happy presidency was called "the era of good feeling," but also for its beauty, Ash Lawn is, like Monticello, a place of pilgrimage.

And through the generosity of J. Winston Johns of Pittsburgh, who bought the property in 1930 and rescued it from ruin, it is also in effect a national possession. Mr. Johns has thrown it open to the public and he is acquiring authentic furniture, books, and documents which belonged to Mr. Monroe, and he is thus restoring a charming aspect of livability to the house. Here, as at Monticello, visitors are charged a moderate admission fee, but all that money—and much more—is spent on care of the place.

Countryside tradition has it that the two founding fathers of the republic used to wigwag good mornings to one another from their houses—a pleasantry which brings nearer to us Chicagolanders the two statesmen who effected the negotiation that gave us the inheritance which Jefferson, with his genius for spacious phrases, once described as "such an empire for liberty as she has never surveyed since the creation."

And the Illustrious George Clark.

But to secure parts of our empire—and those the parts which most closely neighbor us — statesmanship did not suffice.

There had to be fighting.

Prolific Albemarle county met the demand.

For, almost within rifle shot of Monticello, was born George Rogers Clark, "the Hannibal of the West," as his wondering contemporaries called him, who in 1778 at the behest of Governor Patrick Henry of Virginia began at the age of twenty-six and with 200 soldiers the amazing campaigns that wrested the old Northwest Territory from the British and saved to the young republic in one of its most parlous hours principalities which now are the states of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, and Minnesota in part.

In the waging of those campaigns Jefferson, who succeeded Patrick Henry as governor in 1779, supported General Clark in the face of objections by purblind seaboard patriots who declared then, as they did later in the matter of the Louisiana purchase, that all "out yonder" was only "a worthless wilderness"—meaning our present homeland. But Jefferson was a westerner in his soul. He saw.

And They All Skedaddled.

Henry himself was not an Albemarle man, having been born in Hanover, the next county to the southeast save one, but when the Virginia legislature adjourned from Richmond to Charlottesville in 1781 to get out of the way of Benedict Arnold's British hoodlums, who were a ruthless crew under a wicked commander, Henry did considerable official work in this city as a member of the fugitive body.

Today one of the raciest traditions of the Albemarle countryside concerns Henry's prompt action in saving his own skin when Tarleton's raiders descended upon the legislators in Charlottesville. Then golden-tongued Patrick Henry, the man whose oratory had twice set the colonies aflame and the executive who had sent forth George Rogers Clark on campaigns which for celerity and for results rank with Cæsar's most brilliant exploits, was much more intent upon seeking liberty than finding death. Like Jefferson, who also took to the hills on that day of flight, he was a practical man as well as a seer.

"Old Pat Henry" Seeks Food.

Venerable Mr. Marshall — kinsman of Circuit Court Judge Lemuel Smith of Charlottesville, who, with his mother, brothers, and sisters, is the present owner of the Jefferson birthplace farm—told me the Albemarle county tradition of the flight while we were tramping over the farm, and when he told it he spoke of immortal Henry as if he were a politician of our time. "Old Pat Henry," he said, "who had made quite a name for himself in the legislature, was one of a party of members fleeing from Tarleton's raiders. The other three were Benjamin Harrison, Col. Christian and John Tyler, father of the future President. They halted at a small farm and asked for food. Told that they were members in flight as a result of Tarleton's raid on Charlottesville, the woman of the house raked 'em over. 'O,' says she, 'if brave Patrick Henry had been there you wouldn't have done this!'

"'Well, ma'am, he was there and he is here,' says Tyler—and the party was fed."

Thus, after 150 years, did I learn history in one of its intimate aspects.

Intimacies All the Way.

At nearly every turn of the road I encountered these intimacies and from many a friendly resident of the shire I received them, and they gave a peculiar charm to my pilgrimage, for they made so real to me those stalwart men who were in spirit and initiative the first Chicagolanders.

In my wanderings this morning I was guided by Mr. Thomas L. Farrar, of the American branch of the English family which produced the great Dean Farrar of Canterbury, to the veritable site of the cabin in which George Rogers Clark was born 179 years ago. The site is indicated by a blotch of red sandstone halfway up a hillside pasture on Mr. Farrar's country place a mile and a half east of Charlottesville. There a bronze tablet was erected by the D. A. R. and thus it reads:

> NEAR THIS SPOT WAS BORN, IN 1752, GEORGE ROGERS CLARK, HERO OF VINCENNES, WHO, AS A COLONEL IN THE VIRGINIA MILITIA, IN 1777-'79, CONCEIVED, PLANNED, AND ACCOMPLISHED THE CONQUEST OF "THE ILLINOIS COUNTRY."
> ERECTED BY ALBEMARLE CHAPTER, DAUGHTERS OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION, 1925, IN RECOGNITION OF THE INITIATIVE, COURAGE AND BRILLIANT ACHIEVEMENT OF THE GREAT
> SOLDIER-SON OF ALBEMARLE.

The Negroes of the countryside call the tablet and the granite bowlder on which it is mounted "the memory stone." To it and to the true cabin site a delegation of Indiana notables came in 1927 to pay their respects to the memory of "the hero of Vincennes."

From the bowl of hills which holds the Clark site Jefferson's Monticello is plainly visible. Over the brow of that hill lies Monroe's Ash Lawn, and Mr. Farrar's home, from the back dooryard of which you are looking, was built more than a century and a quarter ago by Benjamin Franklin's grandson, William Bache, who said he wished his sons to grow up under the influence of Jefferson. The place is still called "Franklin," and playing in the dooryard was a friendly English setter named "Ben Franklin."

Jefferson, Monroe, Clark! Monticello, Ash Lawn, the cabin site, and "the memory stone"! Where else in rural America is so much vivid historical association within the limits of a morning's stroll I know not.

Explorer of Our Hinterland.

Nor do those names complete the list of Albemarle men who, having the vision of the west, made their vision a reality.

For in this county, too, was born in 1774 Meriwether Lewis, one of the greatest of them all. Mr. Jefferson called him "one of his country's most valued citizens" and said that he was "one whom posterity will declare not to have lived in vain."

No sooner had the vast Louisiana purchase been completed than Jefferson, then President of the United States, instructed Meriwether Lewis to explore and report upon the acquisition. Those instructions, at once exact, detailed, and rich in suggestion, show that the great President would have made a great managing editor. As a perfect specimen of assignment-giving they reward study to this day, and they may be studied either in Jefferson's works or in the fifth volume of "Harper's Encyclopædia of American History," where they are incorporated in the sketch of Meriwether Lewis.

Jefferson knew his man, for Lewis had been his private secretary for two years, and he trusted him implicitly. That confidence the young man never failed to justify.

An Epochal Assignment.

In 1803, when not yet 30 years old, he started on his epochal assignment. With him went George Rogers Clark's youngest brother, William, as second in command. They were gone more than three years. What they accomplished is eloquently imparted by the inscription on the bronze memorial to the explorers by Charles Keck which Paul Goodloe McIntire has presented to Charlottesville. It reads:

> 1774-1809.
> WILLIAM CLARK,
> 1770-1838.
> Bold and farseeing pathfinders who carried the flag of the young republic to the western ocean and revealed an unknown empire to the uses of mankind.

They were the first explorers to reach the Pacific by crossing the continent north of Mexico. They returned to Washington with invaluable records of their observations, and throughout the long journey through unmapped wilderness and amid savage tribes they had lost only one man of their party of 45 soldiers, voyageurs, guides, and interpreters.

They Return in Triumph.

Their homecoming was a triumph. The nation—even the seaboard Yankees of Massachusetts who had opposed the Louisiana purchase—began to see the vision of our great west with the eyes of Jefferson and Monroe. The people listened eagerly and joyfully to the story of the young explorers and congress bestowed military promotions, governorships and grants of land upon them. They became the first proconsuls of the west. They became and they still are the two figures at once the most romantic and the most practical in the annals of our country's development, and their names are ever linked. In the sketch, a classic of biography in little, which Jefferson wrote of him four years after his early death he paid this tribute to Meriwether Lewis of Albemarle:

> Of courage undaunted; possessing a firmness and perseverance of purpose which nothing but impossibilities could divert from its direction; careful as a father of those committed to his charge, yet steady in the maintenance of order and discipline; intimate with the Indian character, customs, and principles; habituated to the hunting life; guarded, by exact observation of the vegetables and animals of his own country, against losing time in the description of objects already possessed; honest, disinterested, liberal, of sound understanding, and a fidelity of truth so scrupulous that whatever he should report would be as certain as if seen by ourselves—with all these qualifications, as if selected and implanted by nature in one body for this express purpose, I could have no hesitation in confiding the enterprise to him.

Specifically that enterprise was to explore the Missouri river and its tributaries as to their possibilities in providing "water communication across the continent for the purposes of commerce."

Napoleon in a Rage.

But in effect the scope of the mission was imperial. It gave the delighted people their first systematic survey of the resources of their new domain. They had paid $15,000,000 for it. Some had thought the price too high for what they again called "a worthless wilderness." Napoleon Bonaparte's brothers, Lucien and Joseph, thought the region an irreparable loss to France at any price, and while the First Consul was in his bath they went storming in upon him to protest the sale. But the future emperor saw further than his critics and his brothers did. He knew that when inevitable war with England came he would not be able to hold Louisiana territory for two months.

Besides, he wanted those fifteen millions.

Still the brothers stormed. Napoleon told them to get out and drenched them with bath water. Lucien, next to Napoleon the cleverest and most audacious of the family, lingered, dripping and still protesting. Napoleon, dashing his snuffbox on the marble floor, said, "Get out and cease to oppose me or I will break you as I broke that!" Lucien got.

The battle for an empire had been lost and won.

So Ends Albemarle's Epic Vision.

What we won was incredible—even to Jefferson. It comprises today the seven states of Iowa, Wisconsin, Arkansas, South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, Oklahoma, and the larger portions of the six states of Louisiana, Minnesota, North Dakota, Colorado, Wyoming, and Montana. Long before the waning of the century in which the purchase was made the farm lands alone of this empire were prosperously settled and were valued at seven billions.

And the men of little Albemarle county, from George Rogers Clark to Meriwether Lewis, had once more been justified of their faith in the destiny of the great West.

JAPANESE ARMY ORDERED TO OPEN DRIVE ON CHINESE

Will Launch War Toward Chinchow District.

BULLETIN.

TOKIO, Dec. 6 (Sunday).—(AP)—A Rengo dispatch from Mukden today said there was an unconfirmed report from a Chinese source at Peiping that Gen. Honjo, Japanese commander in Manchuria, had served final notice on Marshal Chang Hsueh-Liang, deposed Manchurian governor, to withdraw his Chinese troops west of Chinchow immediately on the ground that massing of Chinese east of Chinchow signified an aggressive attitude against the Japanese.

BULLETIN.

TOKIO, Dec. 6, (Sunday.)—(U. P.)—Chinese troops were reported to have approached the Hopei railway station, opposite Yingkow, in extreme southern Manchuria today, completing occupation of the west bank of the Liaho river. Yingkow is a terminus of the South Manchuria railway, owned by Japan.

TOKIO, Dec. 5.—(AP)—Japanese authorities announced today that a new drive will soon be launched against bandits in the vicinity of Hsinmintun.

The new military operation was decided on after reports had been received of bandit activity along the Peiping-Mukden railroad. Hsinmintun is west of Mukden on the road to Chinchow, toward which a Japanese offensive was started last week but was withdrawn on orders from Tokio.

Officials declared Chinese troops concentrated in the neighborhood of Tahushan and other places in the area were almost within striking distance of the South Manchuria railway.

Neutral Zone Called Off.

Nanking reports today declared that negotiations between Dr. Wellington Koo, Chinese foreign minister, and Japanese Minister Shigemitsu concerning the setting up of a neutral zone at Chinchow had been broken off. Fears were expressed by a spokesman at the Tokio foreign office that the Japanese government might not be able to keep the army in check.

"Dr. Koo's announcement that the Chinese will not evacuate Chinchow was most unfortunate," he said. "The Japanese army is bound to take it as a challenge.

"Army circles already were much aggravated, as they felt the army was tricked into a withdrawal a week ago by apparent promises of Marshal Chang Hsueh-liang that he agreed in principle, at least, to the evacuation of Chinchow and now, like a slap in the face, comes a definite opposition to the entire plan for a neutral zone and other plans of the league, as well as of Japan, to prevent a serious clash."

Chances for Explosion Increase.

[Copyright: 1931: By the New York Times.]

MUKDEN, Dec. 5.—This morning witnessed a great increase in the activity of Japanese scouting planes flying southwestward to survey the Chinese advance lines which, according to Japanese accounts, are rapidly approaching the Liaoho river at the edge of the South Manchuria railway zone. Japanese advices from Chinchow report the arrival there of Chinese planes, presumably a portion of a shipment of twenty-five which recently arrived at Chinwangtao.

All elements necessary to create an explosion are rapidly accumulating in this area, but the Japanese forces continue immobile except for aerial surveys. The troops are mostly resting in the barracks, with all arrangements concluded to meet any possible contingency.

Japanese Officer Insulted.

The truculent attitude of the Chinese at Shanhaikwan, where the Great Wall meets the sea, yesterday nearly precipitated a clash, according to Japanese reports. Chinese army shore guards are said to be posted to repel the possible landing of Japanese marines and taunts and insults are being hurled at Japanese civilian residents as well as members of the standing guard, which is less than one company maintained under the Boxer protocol.

The Japanese commanding officer yesterday attempted to pay an official visit to the Chinese police chief, but was stopped at the gate to police headquarters and was insulted and abused by police and soldier guards as well as a civilian mob. The incident resulted in a formal protest, addressed to the commander of Marshal Chang Hsueh-liang's 9th infantry brigade.

Chinese Kill Wounded Soldiers.

An incredibly cruel and savage type of warfare has developed in Manchuria. In conflicts between the Japanese army and Chinese regulars, a noticeable feature is the almost entire absence of prisoners taken in official accounts of all battles. Gen. Honjo's Japanese headquarters said today this was because the Chinese regulars and bandits almost invariably kill all their own wounded whose condition is considered hopeless before they retreat and hence Japanese official announcements concerning Chinese casualties always read "number of Chinese bodies left on field."

This action, the Japanese say, is prompted by the Chinese belief that the Japanese would follow the Chinese practice and torture the wounded prisoners in order to obtain information. Since the Manchurian trouble began on Sept. 18, when considerable Chinese were taken prisoners, the Japanese have found less than 100 Chinese wounded on all battlefields combined, and these mostly after the Angangchi and Tsitsihar battles.

Wellington Koo Resigns.

[Copyright: 1931: By the New York Times.]

SHANGHAI, Dec. 5.—Dr. Wellington Koo, who was appointed Chinese foreign minister last week, today tendered his resignation to President Chiang Kai-shek. He said that 20 hours of work daily was proving too great a strain for him and he asked to be replaced.

Dr. Koo has been the object of much condemnation since he assumed the office. He has been bitterly assailed especially by students, whose clamor and rowdy conduct has made Nanking a restless city for many days. The students have loudly proclaimed their dissatisfaction with any diplomatic settlement of the Sino-Japanese dispute and have demanded military measures.

Dr. Koo had arranged to meet the students tomorrow, but this is now unlikely. Serious disturbances occurred today in the capital, where unruly students demonstrated in the streets in defiance of the garrison commander's orders, and clashed with police. About 300 arrests were made.

Sze's Resignation Rejected.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Dec. 5.—Dr. Alfred Sze, China's representative on the league of nations council, tendered the Nanking government his resignation from that job early today. Tonight he received a telegram from Nanking in which the government refused even to consider the idea of his resigning.

This startling development was precipitated by a mass meeting of the Chinese colony in Paris last night. The meeting, after unanimously passing a resolution demanding immediate Japanese evacuation of Manchuria or else China's withdrawal from the league, sent a committee of five to call on Dr. Sze to place the resolution before him. Dr. Sze told them if they did not like the way he is handling China's case, he would resign, which he later did offer to do in a wire to Nanking.

Optimistic league circles interpret Dr. Sze's offer to resign as merely a gesture to give Nanking a chance to approve of his functioning in the face of local dissatisfaction. Other quarters declare it signifies that China is near the end of her patience with the league council's inefficient handling of the Manchurian question.

TELLS CONDITIONS IN CHINA

DR. KOO ASSERTS ARMS CAN'T END CHINESE TANGLE

Expert Gives Views at Forum.

Military aggression, whether employed by the Chinese or the Japanese, can never solve the Manchurian controversy, Dr. T. S. Koo, Chinese economist and representative of his nation at many international conferences, told the Chicago council on foreign relations at a noonday meeting yesterday in the Hotel La Salle.

"There are 30,000,000 Chinese settlers in Manchuria, as compared with 600,000 Koreans and 200,000 Japanese," Dr. Koo asserted. "The Japanese armies may overrun every inch of Manchurian territory, abolish all vestiges of Chinese government and substitute puppet governments of their own, but they can't overcome the passive resistance of 30,000,000 people.

Necessity for Japanese.

"Conversely, if the Chinese possessed a military strength they now lack, and employed it to oust the Japanese, the controversy would still remain unsettled," Dr. Koo admitted. "A measure of Manchurian influence is an economic necessity to the Japanese and would inevitably bring them back.

"Originally there were only two railroads in Manchuria," Dr. Koo explained. "Russia controlled the Chinese Eastern line and Japan held the South Manchurian railway. The Chinese wanted to develop the territory themselves.

The Chinese refrained from building railroads paralleling the existing roads, according to Dr. Koo, but built a system circling through the foreign owned lines.

Tells of Inspection Trip.

"What happened?" asked Dr. Koo. "In 1915 the Japanese served twenty-one demands on the Chinese, one of which was that China be compelled to lease land to the Japanese for business or industrial purposes. Each lease was to be renewed at the option of the tenant. Thus the Japanese could make the leases perpetual.

"To circumvent the perpetual leases, the Chinese government decreed that no leases could be made without special authority of the government. The Japanese complained of trickery. They set their troops on the march and then began complaining of banditry."

Dr. Koo asserted that on a two weeks' inspection of Manchuria at the outset of the disorders in October he found evidence that the Japanese themselves were arming bandits.

SANTA CLAUS AND ANGEL PAY VISIT TO ALPINE TOWN

VAL GARDENA, Italy, Dec. 5.—(AP)—Santa Claus paid his annual call to this valley of the Italian Alps tonight.

He was called St. Nicholas, however, and was accompanied by an "angel" as he went from house to house, followed by the "son of the devil." The three were impersonated by villagers intent on carrying out an old Austro-German custom.

St. Nicholas was dressed like the traditional American Santa Claus, the angel wore white with long blond hair and huge wings of white feathers, while the third person, his face blackened, wore a black cape, horns and a tail.

To the homes of the good children went St. Nicholas and the angel; to the homes of the bad children went the "son of the devil." The good children received presents of all sorts. The bad were almost carried away in a great sack by the sinister one, who reluctantly agreed, finally, to give them another chance after they promised to be good the next year.

WOMAN HELD ON RUM CHARGES.

Mrs. Domenicia Rago, 60 years old, proprietor of a restaurant at 1101 North 22d avenue, Melrose Park, was arraigned before United States Commissioner Edwin K. Walker yesterday on charges of violating the prohibition law and held in bonds of $1,000 pending a hearing on Dec. 12.

MILITARY JUNTA FORMS CABINET IN SAN SALVADOR

SAN SALVADOR, Dec. 5.—(AP)—The military junta headed by Gen. Maximiliano H. Martinez, which deposed President Arturo Araujo Thursday, formed a new cabinet for Salvador today.

Gen. Salvador Castaneda was named secretary of interior, Col. Joaquin Valdes, secretary of war, and Dr. Arturo Vila, secretary of foreign affairs. A new under-secretary of war, Col. Jose Ascencio Menendez, and an under-secretary of public instruction, Benjamin Orozco, also were appointed.

The republic was reported quiet today. Military bands parade the streets of San Salvador and the provincial capitals playing the national anthem and other martial airs. President Araujo fled into Guatemala after his government was overthrown Thursday.

IRISH FREE STATE TEN YEARS OLD TODAY AND HAPPY

Cosgrave Hails Signing of Treaty of 1921.

BY HUGH CURRAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

DUBLIN, Dec. 5.—Tomorrow is the tenth anniversary of the signing in London of the Anglo-Irish treaty by which the Irish Free State was set up and Ireland achieved independence from England.

During practically all that time President William T. Cosgrave's government has been in power, and it is now preparing for a general election at which it hopes to gain a new lease of life.

Cosgrave Hails Treaty.

The president, who is busily occupied with work in connection with the election, as well as leading the dail and conducting the duties of his office, today gave out the following statement to THE TRIBUNE:

"On Dec. 6 ten years ago the Anglo-Irish treaty was signed in London. That treaty was the result of a long period of agitation and personal sacrifice by succeeding generations. It enabled the Irish Free State to attain a position of complete juridical equality with Great Britain, as well as with other states in the world.

"The passage of the statute of Westminster was a full and solemn acknowledgement of that position by the British people through their representatives in parliament. It is, moreover, a complete vindication of the sacrifices, toil and suffering of those men who brought the treaty into being, and of those who have successfully labored to bring its implications to fruition.

"We Have Kept Our Word."

"No vestige of legal control, even in its most attenuated form, remains in the British parliament in relation to the Irish Free State. The treaty, which was the source of that achievement, is the exclusive basis of our relations with Great Britain.

"It has been faithfully honored by us and the British parliament, and notwithstanding the opposition of some of its prominent members the parliament has given another proof of its intention to be faithful to Great Britain's bond with the Irish Free State. We have kept our word and we shall continue to do so, and it is because the world has recognized our intention and our ability to keep our word that so much success has been achieved in these ten years.

"For the same reason, in matters of finance, our credits are good, and when we have had to borrow we have been able to do so on favorable terms.

Greetings to The Tribune.

"My hope for the future is that the Irish Free State will continue to develop and prosper internally and externally. By following the policy of the last ten years the people have achieved cultural and industrial blessings which follow from a peaceful and well ordered national life.

"In sending greetings on this memorable occasion to readers of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE and its allied publications, I would like to recall not an unimportant part which John Steele, London correspondent for THE TRIBUNE, played in the negotiations which ultimately led to the treaty of 1921."

Persia May Send Ancient Art to Chicago's Fair

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TEHERAN, Persia, Dec. 5.—Persia is taking steps to be represented at Chicago's Century of Progress exhibition. A committee under the presidency of the undersecretary of foreign affairs, today drafted a favorable report to be presented to the cabinet. It is likely that valuable exhibits of ancient Persian art shown in London last winter will be sent to Chicago. As the government desires to make Persia better known to America, the shah's own collection may also be sent.

HAMBURG, Germany, Dec. 5.—Five hundred pounds of morphine, en route from Constantinople to New York, was seized here today. It was packed in 27 boxes labeled "metal dyes." The raid was made on information obtained from August del Gracio of New York, who was arrested a few days ago on his arrival in Berlin from Constantinople.

WAR OF TARIFFS LOOMS BETWEEN LONDON, PARIS

British Oppose Raise in French Duties.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Dec. 5.—The danger of a tariff war is seen in the declaration of Walter Runciman, president of the board of trade, in parliament yesterday that "Great Britain viewed with grave disapproval the French tariff discrimination against British goods and proposed to protect herself with all the weapons at her disposal."

The first result was a message from Paris today that France is likely to postpone the mission of Louis Rollin, minister of commerce, and a corps of experts, expected in London on Monday to discuss tariff matters, and today the whole British press acclaims Runciman in exactly the same terms as Philip Snowden, former chancellor of the exchequer, was acclaimed when he so stubbornly opposed the French on the question of the apportionment of reparations at The Hague two years ago.

Most of the newspapers point out that France exports much more to Great Britain than she imports from Great Britain, and that in a tariff way France would be the heaviest loser. All editorials display the utmost hostility, indicating a complete disappearance of the famous entente cordiale.

Another reason for the postponement of the Anglo-French tariff conference is said to be the pledge given by Prime Minister MacDonald last week, that no concessions would be given to foreign nations until after the approaching imperial conference, at which trade relations with Great Britain and the dominions are expected to be drawn much closer by a system of reciprocal tariffs and preferences.

26 DOOMED SLAYERS, ONE A WOMAN, AWAIT DEATH AT SING SING

Ossining, N. Y., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—There are now 26 condemned slayers, including one woman, in Sing Sing prison's death house, the largest number to occupy that grim structure at one time in five years, it was announced today.

The woman, Ruth Brown, colored, who helped kill Eli Huston, and who was the first woman to be sentenced to death in Manhattan in 36 years, has a section all to herself. So has Francis [Two-Gun] Crowley, desperado, because of his death house conduct.

Rudolph [Fats] Duringer, former confederate of Crowley, who killed Virginia Brannen, night club hostess, is scheduled as the first of the 26 to go to the chair next Thursday.

ASSAILS USE OF DRY PERJURERS IN U. S. COURTS

Cincinnati, O., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—"If the federal prohibition department depends upon perjurers in its attempts to enforce the law it is time that some other method be used whereby the United States courts are not imposed on." This statement was made in open court here today by United States Commissioner H. H. Siemon, when he dismissed peremptorily Jasper Price and Edna Agner, residents of Hamilton, O., on charges of conspiracy to violate the prohibition act by transporting liquor.

The only witness offered by the government against the accused persons was Jesse Ray, a Dayton, O., Negro informer, who gave his occupation in testifying as buying liquor for the government. He testified that he was paid "so much a mile and expenses" and worked entirely on a "commission" basis on the number of convictions he made.

Slayer of 6 of His Kinsmen Guilty; Sentenced to Die

Aiken, S. C., Dec. 5.—(AP)—George Jackson, charged with slaying six of his kinsmen on a Sunday afternoon last October, was convicted of murder today and sentenced to die.

Jackson ran amuck with a shotgun and pistol Oct. 26 and shot down two uncles, an aunt and three cousins in the Betchcar church community, near Wagener.

HIGH TARIFF BAR A BOOMERANG TO NEW ZEALANDERS

But Root of All Trouble Is Political System.

BY QUENTIN POPE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

[Second dispatch.]

WELLINGTON, N. Z., Dec. 5.—The sword of economic depression threatens to fall upon the heads of the people of New Zealand not because of the world-wide industrial and agricultural depression but because for years they have been inspired by an ambition out of keeping with their strength in the world.

The root cause of all the troubles which now beset the country is the political system run in the name of democracy. For generations "the future of New Zealand" has been the watchword of Liberals, Progressives and Socialists who swarm in this land.

Since the days fifty years ago when the fiery tempered Sir George Grey, legendary hero of New Zealand Liberalism, stumped the country, inspiring faith by his keen eloquence and picturing a better land—peopled with supermen—faith in a high destiny for the country has been essential for political success.

Growth Out of Proportion.

That spirit encouraged growth—growth out of all proportion to the needs and wealth of the land. It was easy to justify "borrowing for development" when continuation of that policy meant continuation of prosperity for the people and cessation would be attended by all the discomforts of deflation.

But there was behind this not only the desire of political parties to continue in office. All parties have raised the debt total in defiance of caution. There was the sincere belief that New Zealand was marked for a great destiny in the Pacific and the conviction that sooner or later the world center would shift to this ocean.

This country is primarily agricultural. Her trade is involved closely with that of England which, in 1929 took 73 per cent of all her exports, totaling $277,500,000 in value.

High Tariff Policy.

When Great Britain adopted free trade she designed the pattern out of which the structure of New Zealand's economy was to evolve. But New Zealand aspired to something better. In the sad eighties when it was smitten with another such crisis from overborrowing and hasty development, the dominion produced Sir Julius Vogel for a leader and he enunciated the high tariff policy which rules to this day.

Vogel's ideas were carried out by the Conservative leader, Sir Harry Atkinson, with that facility Conservatives in this country have for filching their opponents' radical ideas. The policy was designed to stop an emigration known as the "Exodus," which saw a quarter of one per cent of the total population leaving the country each month in the hope of finding better things in Australia.

Today the range of duties on manufactured goods is scaled so high that costs to purchasers here are at least doubled and sometimes trebled. The tariff commission in 1927 described this as "moderate protection." Last June the average effective rate of duty on Canadian goods, for example, was raised from 38.5 per cent to 53.9 per cent. This is said to be the highest rate of duty charged anywhere in the world.

Industries Never Firm.

Yet with all this assistance New Zealand manufacturers have never become firmly established. Last year 5,126 plants employing 83,000 workers, produced goods valued at $465,000,000. But outside the high tariff barrier New Zealand made goods which could compete with world products only to the extent of $7,500,000. Export figures for manufactured goods have not topped $10,000,000 since 1921.

When beside these figures is set the fact that in 1930 the country exported $76,000,000 in wool, $49,000,000 in frozen meat, $66,000,000 in butter and $35,000,000 in cheese the relatively small importance of manufactures in the economy of New Zealand is realized.

The dominion is 93.8 per cent a pastoral country. Her industries which have widened in the fields of power, clothing, publishing and woodworking have been simply a luxury which the agricultural community has had to carry.

The farmer has not been slow to realize this fact. Protection has hit him hard, for it has added to the price of everything he uses.

High Tariff Did Damage.

Farmers' governments have been unwilling to revise the tariff upward, but the damage was done before they were able to grapple with the situation. Manufacturers, complaining loudly that they had not received fair treatment, demanded "real protection." The issue finally contributed to the downfall of the Farmers' Reform party in 1928.

The tariff position must be considered in arriving at an understanding of the causes of New Zealand's financial collapse, because it confirmed her in her borrowing habits. With a continued trade balance adverse to Britain in the trading relations of the two countries, borrowing by New Zealand was the only thing which could adjust the position.

In 1928, for instance, New Zealand imported goods totaling $107,000,000 from Britain, while its exports to Britain amounted to $222,000,000.

In that year Britain had at stake in New Zealand loans totaling $698,000,000 for which the central government was responsible and $65,000,000 advanced to local bodies. New Zealand had borrowed to the limit of its capacity to earn. The country was able to continue fair weather sailing only as long as prices kept at high levels.

Discover Mistake Too Late.

When prices began to fall New Zealand discerned too late the fallacy of the policy first placed in effect years ago by the burly radical, Richard John Seddon, who had discovered what other men both in New Zealand and Australia were to discover after him, that the people's votes could be bought with money which did not even have to be provided by the people, but could be borrowed from lenders abroad.

It was a racket which was worked hard during the years just before the war and in the post-war period. By the middle of this year the general government debt, which had been $193,000,000 in 1890 and $421,000,000 in 1912, had risen to $1,349,555,000. Local body debt, which had been only $31,000,000 in 1890 and $100,000,000 in 1912, had grown to $353,373,000.

The government and local bodies were forced to meet annual interest charges of $60,000,000. Fixed charges were now consuming half the national revenue.

The signs of disaster were here.

GANDHI DECLARES HE'LL LEAD NEW REVOLT IN INDIA

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Dec. 5.—Mahatma Gandhi, India's Nationalist leader, is on his way back to India to launch an immediate renewal of the almost bloodless warfare he waged against the British prior to the second Indian round table conference in London.

"We started a battle and in its midst signed a truce pending negotiations which were not successful," he told his Hindu friends on his arrival in Paris from London today. "Nothing is lost because I have ascertained the character and tactics of those whom he must fight."

This was the first definite statement the mahatma has made regarding his future tactics in India since the round table conference closed.

French Curious to See Him.

Gandhi was greeted at the railway station by a small crowd of compatriots, but outside the station were several thousand Frenchmen, curious to see the wizened man in his loin cloth.

"In battles my fortunes are normal," he said, referring to his defeat at the round table. "We must continue with greater zest and determination to face even greater suffering than ever to obtain freedom of our country."

After addressing a large meeting in an amusement park, he issued the following statement:

"What we want is control of the army and the purse. Britain has denied that to us. We can obtain control of them by suffering or violence and we propose to obtain it by suffering.

"Disobedience is not violence, it is suffering. I cannot tell how long our campaign will last inasmuch as I cannot foretell the temper of the people of India, because I have been out of touch with them. But I can tell you that when I get back they will be ready to put up a fight."

Gandhi will leave tomorrow morning for Switzerland to visit his poet friend, Romain Rolland.

"He's Jolly Good Fellow."

LONDON, Dec. 5.—Mahatma Gandhi, India's nationalist leader, left London today on his return to India, with Paris his first stop. From Paris he will travel to Geneva, Switzerland, and then to Venice, whence he sails for India on an Italian liner.

A small crowd of Indians and British sympathizers were present at Victoria station to bid him farewell. His Indian admirers hung a garland of flowers round his neck. George Lansbury, leader of the Labor party opposition in parliament, gave him a bouquet of chrysanthemums, and his English sympathizers sang "For He Is a Jolly Good Fellow."

Gandhi traveled in a third class carriage which had been reserved for him.

97 FACE COURT IN ROUNDUP OF THE "42" GANG

Bandits Escape Police in Gun Battle.

Yesterday's anti-hoodlum activities reached a high point with the mass arraignment of 97 police captives before Judge Francis Borrelli, who has been conducting a campaign in Des Plaines street court this week against the "42" gang of young west side outlaws. Other incidents in the day included a loud but bloodless gun battle between police and suspected bandits, the capture of seven others who confessed 25 robberies and the wounding and arrest of two more.

Judge Borrelli's campaign began several days ago when he put on old clothes and visited speakeasies and gambling places searching for evidence against the "42" gangsters.

Two Captives Are Fined.

The roundup filled the courtroom yesterday morning but only two of the men, both with police records, were fined. "West Side Frankie" Pope, the hoodlum, had been caught in the net and was given a jury trial after his bond was raised from $50 to $400.

Tony Rizzo, 25 years old, and Carl Ferrigno, 27 years old, were fined $200 when the judge found each had a long record of minor crimes. The others were released.

The youths were caught after three of them had tried to rob Arthur Miller, 2331 Gladys avenue, Friday night as he was approaching his home. Two cruising policemen saw the attempted holdup and fired, driving two of them away. They arrested one, Sam Pollack, 17 years old, 2739 Polk street, and his statements implicated Pasquale Santucci, 19, of 2025 Polk street, and Sam Modica, 19, of 3140 Polk street, as his accomplices.

The three were questioned together and they named four others as their associates in crimes: Nick Fiore, 18 years old, 3234 Polk street; Emil Veest, 18, of 3321 Polk street; Dominick Bulio, 18, of 3226 Polk street, and Carlo De Christopher, 21, of 3239 Flournoy street.

Police Battle Gunmen.

About dawn yesterday Policemen John Gallagher and George McNeil of the Marquette station, armed only with revolvers, were cruising at Homan avenue and West 26th street when they observed a large sedan, filled with five men, who fled at sight of the police car. The policemen gave chase and followed the other machine north in Homan avenue to 22nd street.

The pursued car slowed suddenly and three shotguns roared at the pursuers, the slugs smashing the windshield glass, cutting Gallagher and McNeil. Gallagher jammed his foot on the accelerator and his car shot ahead. The other auto was quicker, however, and the chase continued, both policemen firing their pistols. At 21st street shotguns banged again, this time apparently crippling the police car's motor, for the pursued car pulled away rapidly and Gallagher and McNeil lost the trail.

Another policeman, Irving Grambauer of the Marquette station, was slightly wounded by a bandit bullet when two robbers tried to force him and his companion, Miss Pauline Stevens, from his car which was parked in front of the girl's home at 5739 South Morgan street. A bandit went to each door and Grambauer, sliding from the car, grappled the holdup men closest him and routed both, although a bullet from the startled bandit's gun pierced his shoulder.

Wife Is Granted Divorce from O. C. Ritz-Woller

Mrs. Jeanne Ritz-Woller, 32 years old, 2440 Lake View avenue, yesterday won a divorce and a settlement of $65,000 from Oliver C. Ritz-Woller, president of the American Automatic Devices company. Superior Judge Joseph Sabath granted the decree on grounds of cruelty. Under the settlement Mrs. Ritz-Woller will receive $10,000 in cash immediately and the remainder in $5,000 annual installments. She also will receive $150 a month under another contract. Mrs. Ritz-Woller testified, when questioned by her attorney, Samuel P. Gurman, that her husband struck her on several occasions.

Robbed of $23,000

Mrs. Ellouise Schoeberlein.

Kane county authorities were searching for clews yesterday in the $23,000 jewel burglary Friday night at the home of Mrs. El Louise Schoeberlein, wealthy widow, in Aurora. The theft took place while Mrs. Schoeberlein was entertaining guests at dinner.

The burglar climbed a trellis to gain the balcony on the second story of the Schoeberlein residence. Then he smashed the glass in a French door and entered Mrs. Schoeberlein's bedroom. The gems were taken from the top of a bureau.

While the burglary was in progress, Mrs. Schoeberlein's maid, Kate Eberhardt, was feeding the police dog in the kitchen. The maid's brother, John Eberhardt, who had been employed as a watchman, was at a moving picture show.

One of the guests at the dinner was Mrs. E. A. Wayland, wife of a Chicago dentist with offices at 841 East 63d street. Mrs. Wayland went upstairs after the dinner and noticed that there was a draft on the second floor. The maid discovered the theft when she went into Mrs. Schoeberlein's bedroom to prepare it for the night.

POLICE BATTLE GANG IN AUTO; 1 BANDIT SHOT

Members of a detective bureau squad commanded by Sergt. William P. McCarthy fought a pistol battle last night with four gunmen in the yard of the School of Domestic Art and Science, 350 Belden avenue. Three of the men escaped, but the fourth, who identified himself as Daniel Murphy, 30 years old, of Kansas City, was possibly fatally wounded. He was taken to the Bridewell hospital.

Sergt. McCarthy and his men started to follow the car in which the men rode at Erie and Clark streets. The chase led at high speed north to the school. There the driver of the car, which was without a license plate, drove into the grounds, apparently in the belief that there was another exit.

The fugitives, after firing, scattered and continued their flight on foot. During the battle bullets crashed into a room occupied by Mrs. Josephine Noyes, 2315 North Clark street, narrowly missing her.

A license plate found in the abandoned car was traced to Frank Ordyna of 1349 Sloan street. On the floor was a red notebook, on one page of which was a message addressed to "Frank" and which stated: "Say, Frank, let me know what you have on for tonight. I have something good. I can knock over a gambling joint or a dance hall."

Allman Asks Legal Aid in Fight Over Promotion

Police Commissioner Allman yesterday requested Corporation Counsel Sexton to rule as to what action he should take on the writ of mandamus issued by Superior Judge David ordering the certification of Lieut. William J. O'Brien to the rank of captain. The writ was issued after O'Brien showed that men who were lower on the eligible list than he had been raised in rank.

GOVERNOR URGED TO LEND HAND ON WATERWAY PORT

Commission Seeks Action by Legislature.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

Gov. L. L. Emmerson was asked yesterday to bring before the special session of the legislature the matter of building a terminal for the Illinois waterway with $200,000 of railroad money which has been overlooked for two years. The request came from the Chicago Regional port commission by W. R. Dawes, president, and it urged the government that in case a call for an additional session is made, it be broad enough to include the terminal improvement. Otherwise, it is argued, the Illinois waterway may be ready for navigation before terminal facilities are provided.

The $200,000 is coming to the state from the Santa Fé and Illinois Central railroads as part of the settlement of the "80 foot strip" cases involving old Illinois and Michigan canal lands. Through the settlement the state became owner of a 21 acre site for a northern terminal for the lakes to gulf water route near the turning basin at old Bridgeport. The state also became owner of a million bushel elevator and other buildings.

Plans Made to Use $200,000.

To get the terminal ready for the opening of the waterway and to aid in the employment situation, plans have been made to use the $200,000 from the railroads to construct a barge rail loading and landing stage and warehouse.

"The state owned property at old Bridgeport will be the logical terminal for common carrier barge lines handling merchandise freight upon the completion of the waterway," Mr. Dawes wrote to Gov. Emmerson. "It is the only water terminal centrally located in Chicago where interchange with a belt line connection may be made by both barge and lake vessels.

"The expenditure of $200,000 in improving the water terminal facilities at this location will go a long way toward providing facilities adequate to take care of the intial traffic. The federal engineers have fixed the spring of 1933 as the completion date for the waterway and we are informed that efforts are being made to advance this date as much as possible.

Next Legislature in 1933.

"We are informed that further enabling legislation is necessary in order to authorize the expenditure of these funds for the purposes indicated. The next regular session of the general assembly does not convene until 1933, by which time the waterway will be completed. Severest criticism would just be directed against the commission if we failed to point out to you the possibility of a completed waterway without a common carrier public terminal.

"In view of the urgency of the matter, we earnestly request that, if call for an additional session of the legislature is to be made at this time, it be made broad enough to include the enactment of legislation to bring about the improvement of the terminal as above indicated."

BEG YOUR PARDON!

An account of a dry meeting at the Libertyville High school yesterday quoted Mrs. Scott Durand, in referring to a wet speaker who interrupted the drys, as saying: "He's just one of Johnny Raskob's men." Mrs. Durand says she referred to Raskob as "Mr. Raskob."

GIRL ACCUSES TWO MEN.

Miss Babe Pierce, 25 years old, 667 North Dearborn street, reported to the Chicago avenue police yesterday that she had been attacked by two men in a beer flat, the location of which she could not remember.

THE GAGGING OF THE REV. MR. SHULER.

The decision of the federal radio commission denying a renewal of station KGEF's broadcasting license has been sustained by the Court of Appeals in Washington. The station was operated in the name of the Trinity Methodist church (South) of Los Angeles, of which the pastor is the Rev. R. P. Shuler. He ran the station about as he wished and used it for broadcasting, among other things, his vituperative sermons and observations on men, women, and events.

Many of the things that Shuler said over the radio are thoroughly indefensible by any standard of accuracy, good taste, or common sense. The record shows him to be a man of loose tongue and bad manners. He has many of the attributes of a gossip and a scold. He is a sensationalist and a bigot. His self-righteousness is untempered. He lusts for the punishment of those who disagree with him. The findings of the commission contain only brief excerpts from Shuler's utterances, but they are sufficient to warrant the conclusion, provisionally at least, that Shuler is about the last person in the world to whom an intelligent human being would look for intellectual leadership or companionship.

[Perhaps that accounts for his vogue in Los Angeles. The temptation to pursue this diverting theme is considerable, but is going to be resisted. It should be noted, however, that Shuler's remarks attracted so many listeners in Los Angeles that in the words of the commission "it appears that time for commercial broadcasts over other Los Angeles stations is more easily obtained during the periods Shuler is broadcasting than at any other time."]

Among the things which the commission finds that Shuler did was to advocate the election as judge of a lawyer who had been temporarily disbarred. On another occasion he intimated that a judge had shared the fees received by lawyers who appeared before him. Shuler apparently thinks that justice in Los Angeles is not all it might be and has twice been sentenced for contempt of court for his utterances. The Supreme court of the state sustained one of the sentences. He abhors the Roman Catholic church and has frequently broadcast his views about it. When asked if he had said, "Rome and liquor, through an organized force, is going to try to take over this nation and wring the life out of this country and make law to be a puny stigma while she grows to be a giant," he said he couldn't be sure, but he had certainly said things just as strong because "I felt it very deeply."

He characterized the Los Angeles community chest as "conceived in sin and born in iniquity," presumably because a Roman Catholic was in charge of it. He called some one else a "Dago Catholic." He advised the Negroes of the city that they were the tools of "white whelps" in the city hall. He criticized a fellow clergyman for admitting a certain citizen to his church, saying that he [Shuler] "would as soon baptize a skunk." Once when soliciting funds he said:

"I know a man listening in. If he does not give a hundred dollars I will go on the air next Tuesday night and tell what I know about him."

The commission reports that on Shuler's own admission this brought in "many hundreds of dollars." He charged that the health department of Los Angeles obliged "little waitresses" to strip for physical examinations by male physicians, though the charge was denied in all its details by the responsible head of the department. By innuendo he sought to create the impression that a candidate for governor [who, incidentally, was elected] was mentally unsound and the victim of "past excesses."

And so on. It is a record filled with defamatory statements made by Shuler, some of which are false and others of which he could not prove. It is precisely the kind of record against which any believer in the constitutional guarantee of free speech would be particularly on his guard. The temptation is to say that the Shulers of this world, uttering the kind of things they utter, have sacrificed any rights they may have had to a free expression of their opinions.

To take that position, as the radio commission did, is to surrender the whole field. The right of a citizen to free speech is inalienable. No government in the United States, federal, state, or local, has the right to censor speech. Bad taste, bad manners, stupidity, and folly have precisely the same right to speak as good manners and wisdom. The assumptions, and they are sound, are that decency and sense will triumph in the end; and if folly is suppressed, the precedent will be used in time to suppress unpleasant but wholesome truth.

The commission found among other matters that "station KGEF has been used to attack a religious organization and members thereof, thus serving to promote religious strife and antagonism." That is a breach of good manners, but there is no law against attacking religious organizations and there can be no such law in this country. Had the attacks led to overt acts, Mr. Shuler might have been held accountable, but otherwise he was entirely within his rights.

The commission found that Mr. Shuler "has repeatedly made attacks upon public officials and courts which have not only been bitter and personal in their nature but oftentimes based upon ignorance of fact." Mr. Shuler was punished, and no doubt properly, for his contempt of court, but no one has a right to censor his utterances about government. Any citizen has the right to speak his mind about the conduct of his government, and frequently to do so is his highest duty. Mr. Shuler's license to speak has been withdrawn because he attacked government officials; a more dangerous precedent could hardly be conceived.

The remedy for the abuses of free speech which the commission alleges does not lie in censorship and suppression. The proper remedy is to hold the offender responsible for what he has said. Those who believe they have been injured are free to sue for damages.

There is one point at which the law might well be rewritten. In all, or nearly all, the states libel is punishable by criminal as well as civil action. Slander, on the contrary, is not a criminal offense. The difference, broadly speaking, is that slander is defamation by the spoken word, whereas libel is defamation by means of the printed word. The lawmakers seem to have had the idea that the spoken word reached a smaller audience, and therefore did little public damage.

Whatever the explanation may be, it is obvious that the damage which can be done by defamation on the radio is equal, if it does not surpass, the damage done by the printed word, for to many minds the spoken word is far more impressive and memorable and the radio audience is enormous. There is no reason why slander on the radio should not be punishable as a crime precisely as libel is punishable as a crime. But there is every reason to protest against the censorship of speech as it is now being practiced by that arm of the federal government, the radio commission.

It is to be hoped that the case will be presented to the Supreme court. The Rev. Mr. Shuler is a loathsome character, but in spite of that fact it should not be difficult to make the essential issue of the preservation of the right of free speech abundantly clear.

THE PRICE OF EXPANSION.

Mr. Henry Tetlow, dealer in cosmetics, contributes the leading article to the current American Mercury. He calls his piece "The Twilight of Big Business." What he has to say should be of considerable interest to the large number of business men and security owners who have made mistakes in recent years and are wondering how their present difficulties might have been avoided.

It is Mr. Tetlow's thesis that, by and large, the biggest units in an industry are those which are most likely to get into difficulties and stay in them. Probably it would be nearer the truth to say that the number of huge industrial combinations is larger than the number of executives capable of operating them. But one point he makes can be set down as a business precept which, if followed, will avoid trouble for any business, large or small. Mr. Tetlow says:

"Expansion should never be financed out of anything but profit; if credit is strained to support it there is nothing left to tide over contraction."

He thinks that borrowing money for expansion is peculiarly the vice of big business because most large corporations have been put together through some sort of a credit operation. But many small businesses today are suffering from the same cause. They borrowed the money to open a branch, build an annex or buy additional machinery. The added burden could be carried as long as business was plentiful. Now that the reaction has come they are finding it increasingly difficult to pay the interest falling due, not to mention repaying the principal of their loans.

The ease with which expansion can be financed on borrowed money during flush times is tempting. The conception of a bank as an institution which has no merchandise for sale is not entirely sound. A banker's stock in trade is his deposits, which he must lend if his institution is to prosper. When deposits are growing he is under pressure to find an outlet for them. It is characteristic of boom periods that lenders at such times go scouting for borrowers. It takes a good deal of balance to resist the proffer of money, particularly if it comes from a reputable financial house which presumably knows all that any one can know about business prospects.

This is a fact which, of itself, intensifies the subsequent depression. Expansion which is financed out of profits is likely to be moderate in scale and gradual, while expansion bought with borrowed capital is sudden and is likely to lead to a rapid glutting of markets. The sacrifice of merchandise follows and on its heels comes, perhaps, the sale of the business itself on the courthouse steps. That, in turn, means the presence in the field of a competitor who has a minimum of capital charges to meet and leads in turn to additional difficulties for any firm which is not similarly situated.

As Mr. Tetlow says, the business which pays for its expansion out of profits and goes to the bank for credit only when no other course is possible is most likely to survive. It may not make as much money in boom times as its more reckless competitors, but year in and year out the policy of prudence and moderation will pay.

FROM COTTAGE TO PEERAGE.

Philip Snowden has taken his seat in the house of lords as Viscount Snowden of Ikornshaw. Mr. Snowden has been damned by the Laborites because he put the national government above his former party loyalties. The government wanted the former chancellor of the exchequer in the lords and in the cabinet. A writ of summons to the lords qualified him for the peerage and the convenient cabinet fiction of lord privy seal did the rest. The new viscount presented himself in red robes with a coronet on his head and with his writ in his hand, to be introduced to the lord chancellor.

Mr. Snowden started his public life as a clerk in the civil service. The romance of his career might be regarded as democratic—from office boy to viscount—but how can feudalism and democracy be mixed? The viscount is a peculiarly Norman attachment to the English system. The title was adopted from continental usage after the Angevin line had begun to pay a little less attention to its French possessions and pretentions and a little more to the English crown. The dukes of Normandy were likely to be absentee landlords as Richard I. proved. Viscounts and dukes were added to the English peerage for monarchical and feudal purposes in and after the time of Edward III.

Snowden, beginning as a democrat, progressing to fame as a cog in a scheme of quasi proletarian dictatorship which found it could do more busting than dictating, comes to a reward of life in a red robe and a coronet as Viscount Snowden of Ikornshaw, a Plantagenet reward bestowed with feudal fidelity. The fairy story begins as that of the average man, but ends on one of the upper grades of a surviving caste society. England is a democracy much as the unicorn is a milch cow.

Editorials of the Day

THE NAVY LEAGUE'S REPLY.

[New York Herald-Tribune.]

The Navy league's preliminary reply to the President's committee does not attempt to answer its charges in detail. Mr. Howe has preferred to single out a few high spots in that extraordinary document by which to test its reliability, accuracy and good faith.

The warmest supporters of the administration must admit that the result is a shocking revelation of haste, carelessness and misquotation, to say nothing of avoidance of the main issue. As was recognized at the time of its selection, the personnel of the committee—constituted of personal friends and official appointees—foreclosed the possibility of a judicial finding. The haste with which the indictment was drawn up and voted, without the slightest opportunity for the Navy league to be heard in its defense, raised grave suspicions of its reliability even as a basis for congressional investigation.

Yet we doubt if any one suspected that Mr. Hoover's committee would be subjected to such garbled evidence as is now revealed. We do not believe for an instant that any of the gentlemen who composed the committee intended such a deception. But the exhibition of haste and carelessness involved is all the greater, assuming, as we are glad to do, the good faith of the members. With the Navy league's table in front of its eyes, to misstate its contents and transpose its figures so that the 13.1 of Great Britain was ascribed to Japan is one of those incomprehensible blunders which in the most charitable interpretation writes down the committee's expert adviser, whoever he was, as an ass.

We have no wish to take up the reply in further detail. The findings of the President's committee never had any probative force. Now that its gross inaccuracy has been revealed, it can be treated as an indictment only with every reserve. Yet we think the country will welcome the endeavor of the Navy league to return the discussion to the one really vital issue. The country is far more concerned in the question of national safety than in any question of detailed figures, garbled or ungarbled.

Has the administration adequately supported the navy toward this end? Does Mr. Hoover understand the full responsibility of a fleet? Here are issues much too grave to be left either to a group of the President's friends or to any private organization to decide. The Navy league's reply makes a thorough investigation by congress a more urgent necessity than ever.

The country has little time to devote to the findings of a packed committee acting upon distorted facts. It has ample time to discover whether its first line of defense at home and for its overseas territory, and its only line of defense for its farflung sea borne commerce, is being properly maintained in respect to equipment, men and morale.

KANSAS LOOKS AT THE FARM BOARD.

[Emporia Daily Gazette.]

In a Washington committee room yesterday a little knot of earnest seekers after truth gathered to hear the federal farm board's report to congress, and to speculate as to why its perpetual motion machine, designed to raise the price of wheat above the world level, failed to work.

We Kansans have a real interest in that machine. It was our farm organizations who demanded that it be built. It was our congressional delegation which supervised its design, and hailed the finished product with delight.

It was our candidates for office in 1930 who begged, pleaded, and threatened the farm board in an effort to get them to buy more wheat to prevent this major Kansas product from following the downward trend of all other raw commodities for the past two years.

The report disclosed that the farm board at one time owned almost 300 million bushels of wheat—more than the entire American export surplus. It has succeeded in disposing of about a third of this amount, and still has almost 200 million bushels in storage, hanging over the market and depressing the present price. It is costing taxpayers 18 cents per bushel per year to hold this grain in storage.

It is difficult to see how the average farmer has benefited one red cent by the operations of the board. Its members point with pride to the fact that cooperatives have doubled in membership. Naturally so, and why not? Only by joining coöperatives could the farmers secure government loans against their wheat on the basis of a price above the world market.

The farm board was handed a lot of bad advice—not from the grain brokers, but from representatives of the producers. It was urged to boost the American price 20 cents a bushel above the world level last spring, with the result that wheat exports came to a halt last year, and Russia was able to sell to Europe millions of bushels of grain, replacing wheat which would otherwise have come from America. Kansas joined in urging this bad advice on the board. Kansas again joined the clamor last summer to force the board to hold its surplus from the market. As a result the board agreed to sell not more than 5 million bushels of wheat per month, so that next June we will still have about 150 million bushels of the old crop hanging over the market to depress the price of the new one—to say nothing of the millions of tax dollars paid out in storage charges.

So here it is, gentlemen, our own perpetual motion machine. We suggested it, we designed it, and we had more to do with its actual operation than was good for us. Of course, it didn't work. But isn't it a dandy? Aren't we proud of ourselves?

CIVILIZED NEW YORK.

[N. Y. World-Telegram.]

In Philadelphia, two years in jail; in New York city, a suspended sentence—for almost identical "crimes."

In Philadelphia a young Italian-American jumped on the running board of Minister Dino Grandi's car and cried, "Down with Mussolini, down with Grandi," etc. Judge McDevitt's sentence seemed outrageous even to Signor Grandi, who wrote Gov. Pinchot a letter asking executive clemency.

In New York city yesterday—in Tombs court—another young Italian-American, Albert Cuppelli, was given a suspended sentence because last Saturday in Broadway he yelled "Assassin!" in Italian as Minister Grandi passed in a car. He was an anti-Fascisti. A Fascisti standing by attacked him and was also arrested. Magistrate Gottlieb, suspending sentence in both cases, humorously advised the pair to return to Italy to do their fist fighting and offered to help pay their passage.

Judge McDevitt, who said he acted as a warning to other Communists, insists he will stand by his two-year sentence, on the ground of inciting to riot.

If any one is guilty of inciting to riot or revolution in this case it is the judge who, in punishing disorderly conduct, outraged the basic American principle of free speech.

THE WHY OF BLINKING.

A CORRESPONDENT wrote us about a child that was given to blinking his eyes. The communication told of circumstances that showed that the blink was an intentional procedure, one of those bad habits that children sometimes develop as a means of attracting attention. The question was asked: What should be done to correct this? In the answer punishment was given as one line of treatment suitable to many cases.

This answer provoked two letters. One was from a physician who thought I should have told the parent to have this child's eyes examined. Fatigue resulting from eye strain might have been the cause. A woman wrote somewhat less temperately. She suggested that the child's general physical condition needs toning up and that he has weak eyes, perhaps even more serious eye trouble. She thought my advice was dangerous.

Both are right up to a certain point. Eye strain sometimes causes a certain amount of discomfort, which causes a person to blink as something of a reaction. A parallel is found in belching due to swallowing air. The act itself is the result of nervousness, but underlying it there may be some stomach disorder producing local irritation. This is the exciting cause of an act which is due essentially to nervousness.

Therefore, it is wisdom to have the eyes examined when a child has the blinking habit. That does not change the situation, or even the treatment in its more important phases. In most cases, blinking is consciously performed and for a purpose. Its cure is a matter of training. Punishment has a place in training. Especially is this true when the disorder is a habit of the hysteria group, that is, when the behavior is for the attainment of a purpose.

A longer and more inclusive answer would have elaborated the need for search for a source of irritation and proper local treatment of that and would have followed with some counsel on habit training.

Years ago a boy developed a blink. His father had him taken for treatment to a distinguished neurologist. The medical man recognized the nature of the trouble and advised the parents to keep a pin handy and ready to jab the boy in the face whenever he blinked. The cure was magical and the boy of that day is a very successful business man of this day, and with no habit spasms. I have printed this story more than once and each time horrified, anti-punishment people register violent protests.

The boy was saved not only from his blinking habit but from a certain point of view and that's what counts. Meanwhile, the world is full of woe because so many people are opposed to discipline, firmness, and everything else that makes for strength of character.

FATTENING SOUPS.

A. D. writes:

1. Which has the greatest fattening properties, whole wheat or white bread?

2. Approximately, how many calories are present in whole wheat, in rye, and in white bread?

3. Are soups made with vegetables as nourishing as meat or raw vegetables?

REPLY.

1. About the same.

2. One thousand one hundred and thirteen in the first, 1,180 in the second, and 1,182 in the third [per pound].

3. Probably not, though soups vary greatly. A thin, strained soup contains little besides water, minerals, and vitamins. A thick meat and vegetable soup contains enough nourishment for one meal, if one eats it freely.

WHOOPING COUGH.

Mrs. W. S. T. writes: My little girl of three has developed whooping cough, contracted from a child in our neighborhood from whom a number of children in the neighborhood have already contracted the same trouble. Upon advice of a physician I have had three injections to insure a milder cough, but her coughing remains just as strong. If the medical profession knows the cause of this ailment, why can't a cure be perfected, especially when all the symptoms of the case in question would indicate that the whooping cough is obviously on the way?

REPLY.

You ask a hard question. Being a Yankee, I reply by asking you one: Why don't the financiers prevent panics and depressions?

LEGALLY ADMITTED!

Chicago, Nov. 27.—[Friend of the People.]—1. A foreigner entered this country in February, 1924, on a 12 months' visitor's pass and has remained in the country continuously since that time. He now desires to apply for citizenship. Is he entitled to apply for first papers under the law? 2. Is he subject to deportation? 3. Is it true that under the provisions of the immigration act of 1924 all aliens entering the country prior to June 30, 1924, are permitted to apply for citizenship, regardless of the fact that they did not enter this country as quota immigrants? 4. Would the fact that a man is married to an American citizen, is of excellent character, and has had over six years' service in the United States army be helpful toward his becoming a citizen? J. L. S.

1. He may submit his application but he cannot file a declaration of intention [first paper] until a record of his legal admission into the United States can be found.

2. This is a question to be submitted to the immigration service, Room 1343, Transportation building, Chicago.

3. No.

4. Yes, if he made a legal entry.

ANDREW JORDAN,
Acting district director,
United States department of labor.

PROPERTY FORFEITURE.

Chicago, Nov. 24.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I have been reading in the paper about property which is being forfeited for taxes. 1. Can any individual purchase this property? 2. How can it be purchased in order to get a clear title? 3. Where can a list of this property be obtained? L. H.

1. Technically, any individual can buy in at the tax sales, but under Illinois law what he gets is in substance a lien to secure his advances, interest, and penalties, rather than getting the fee title.

2. Perhaps the commonest way is to pay the taxes for 7 years after securing a tax deed, but if you contemplate such a course we strongly advise you to employ an attorney.

3. The delinquent tax lists are published each year by the Chicago Evening Post.

STATE TAXES.

Chicago, Nov. 19.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I lived in New York state twenty-five years but have not resided there for the past four years. Is it necessary for me to continue paying state taxes? V. M. E.

If your property is there you may be subject to tax there. We could advise to better advantage if you had stated the nature of the taxes in question.

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

DECEMBER 6, 1915.

CHICAGO. — Congressman Frank Buchanan of Chicago and another member of the house of representatives may lose their seats if the federal authorities connect the Labor National Peace council, of which Buchanan formerly was president, with alleged German plots to tie up munition plants by strikes. That the attention of the department of justice has now turned from the German embassy to the capitol was admitted in Washington. The federal investigators are after the men "higher up" in the fomentation of munition plant strikes and other activities charged to labor organizations—these being the men, according to report, who received $150,000 of German money supplied indirectly by Capts. von Papen and Boy-Ed of the German embassy to carry on the work of the conference.

WASHINGTON.—The sixty-fourth congress will convene at noon today. Nine new senators and 140 new representatives will be sworn in. Adequate military and naval defense for the United States is the principal object of the session. The President's plan for national defense will cause a long debate and probably it will hold the boards for several weeks.

BERLIN. — The Serbians, driven back to the Albanian frontier, turned on the Bulgarians, but were overwhelmed, losing many cannon and large quantities of munitions. The Montenegrins suffered a defeat at the hands of the Austrians in the north. In the south the allies claim to have repulsed all attacks of the invaders.

BUDAPEST.—Henry Ford's American peace mission is being discussed here in the press with more expectation than the enterprise has been thought almost everywhere else to deserve, and high eulogies are paid to the character of Mr. Ford. Now that operations in the Balkans are considered to have reached their final stage, there is great inclination toward the discussion of peace.

30 YEARS AGO TODAY

DECEMBER 6, 1901.

CHICAGO. — Samuel W. Allerton gave a dinner to his friends at the Union League club and before the tables were cleared away enough money had been pledged to insure the establishment of a home for delinquent boys as advocated by Judge Richard S. Tuthill of the Juvenile court. Nearly $50,000 was subscribed, making the available money for the project close to $150,000. Among the subscribers at the Allerton dinner were Mr. Allerton, $5,000; A. G. Weaver, $5,000; Victor Falkenau, $5,000; Julius Rosenwald, $2,500; S. W. Allerton Jr., $1,000; J. C. Shaffer, $1,000; and H. C. Lytton, $1,000.

CHICAGO.—Czolgosz, President McKinley's assassin, was cheered publicly in Chicago and that, too, while policemen were standing at the doors of the hall where local anarchists and Socialists were holding a debate. Abraham Isaak, recognized leader of the "Reds" in this city, declared openly he could not condemn the assassin's act. His statement was cheered. Less radical members of the audience disapproved of the utterances and there followed scenes of wildest disorder.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—An anarchist island colony with neither government nor law is the suggestion of Senator Hoar of Massachusetts for ridding the nations of the world of men and women who counsel the killing of rulers and the overthrow of governments. The suggestion was made in a brief speech in the senate.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The new Hay-Pauncefote treaty providing for the construction of a canal across the Isthmus of Panama was sent to the senate. It provides that the canal shall be open to the world, but the United States alone is to exercise control of and manage the waterway.

50 YEARS AGO TODAY

DECEMBER 6, 1881.

WASHINGTON. — At the Guiteau trial, Dr. Kennon of the Chicago Medical Review, Dr. Nicholas of the Bloomingdale asylum, Dr. Folson of Boston, Dr. Samuel Worcester, Dr. W. W. Godding, Dr. James H. McBride of Milwaukee, and Dr. Theodore W. Fisher of Boston, experts on insanity, were examined by Mr. Scoville for the purpose of showing that Guiteau was insane. Richard J. Hinton of the Washington Gazette, gave his impressions of Guiteau from what he saw of him around the Republican headquarters in New York last year. He declares that Guiteau was a perfect nuisance, that he was egotistical and illy balanced. Guiteau interrupted the witness several times, told the witness he was a nuisance himself, and berated Scoville for putting him on the stand. He also interrupted the other witnesses and acted more outrageously than he has for some days. He told Scoville that he had rather be hanged as a man than escape as a fool.

WABASH, Ind. — An event of no little importance in this vicinity is the coming payment of a large sum of money by the government to the remnants of the once famous tribe of Miami Indians of Indiana.

CHICAGO. — A largely attended meeting of the underwriters was held in their rooms to take appropriate action on the death of C. C. Dana, superintendent of adjustments of the Hartford Fire Insurance company. On motion, it was resolved that the underwriters in a body attend the funeral at the Union Park Congregational church this morning.

A NEW DRED SCOTT.

Chicago, Nov. 24.—A veteran, for asking his janitor, Boleslaw Lidikewicz, to make him a little home brew, is charged with conspiracy and put in the hoosegow with two Chinese deportees and two men held for peddling narcotics.

It's legal, of course, to be a prohibition agent. Charlie, my neighbor, who is a switchman, says it is also legal to be a hangman over in the county jail. He says it's legal to deal in second mortgages and to throw some unemployed veteran and his family out into the snows of winter one night before Christmas with joy bells ringing. He says it's legal for a bank to take a guy's dough at one minute to three, then at 3 o'clock pull the blinds and lock the doors for good. Charlie says it's legal to stage heavyweight wrestling championships, or to buck the extra board over at the switch shanty, but he said, "I know of more elevating pursuits."

The prohibition laws can no more be enforced than was the fugitive slave law, which law brought "the whole machinery of the United States into play to recover a runaway Negro and which made every man and woman of a free state a partner in the business of restoring to his master the fugitive who had followed the Northern Star to the land of freedom."

Prohibition is on the run, though. This case might be the beginning of the end. Future historians may link the name Boleslaw Lidikewicz with that of Dred Scott, and Prosecutor Wiles with Chief Justice Taney. The prosecutor is certainly entitled to something for his zeal in putting an ex-soldier in the can for the dastardly crime of asking his janitor "to make him a little home brew."

DISHRAGS FOR PROSPERITY.

Chicago, Nov. 26.—Readers of this may be agreeably surprised and pleased if, the next time they are in a store, they go to the kitchen or towel counter and purchase a nickel dishwashing rag, and, instead of sending it to the kitchen, use it instead in the bathtub as a bath washrag. Its wide meshes and slight frictional qualities make it as sanitary and desirable as those high quality face washrags that first class hotels used to supply complimentarily in cellophane packages to their guests in their higher priced rooms. It takes the soap and lathers it rapidly, and when wet is soft to the skin. At the completion of the bath, if thoroughly wrung out, its moist capillary attraction will rapidly take off the wet droplets after the final shower and not wet the slower absorbing larger bath towel, which is thus left in a better dry condition for a more pleasant final friction rubdown.

Besides, if every one who bathes in Chicago and in THE TRIBUNE area bought just a nickel cotton dishrag, it might absorb a few pounds or bales of cotton, and help turn the jack screw a little under the depression dip in the cotton consumption market graph, and start several nickels rolling and circulating uphill, to come down again to some one else, or over the top. B. ROGERS.

TO SAVE MONEY.

Chicago, Nov. 25.—After hearing Silas Strawn at Buffalo on the activities of the Associated Chambers of Commerce of the United States, it is apparent that these associations of business men are handling effectively the same matters that are having the attention of the federal departments of commerce, of agriculture and of labor. Therefore, as a matter of economy, these federal departments might as well be closed out. Any necessary supervision can be given by the secretary of the interior.

These federal departments, agriculture, commerce and labor, have been making more trouble for business than any compensating advantages. T. W.

THE END OF THE FERRIS WHEEL.

Chicago, Nov. 27.—I am afraid that the party who suggests that the World's Fair Ferris wheel be brought back from Paris has been misinformed, as the Ferris wheel used in Chicago in 1893 was brought to the St. Louis fair in 1904 and was wrecked there by the Chicago House Wrecking company in 1905 by F. V. Nolan, then a licensed dynamiter. R. P. NOLAN.

HE SAW IT GO.

Chicago, Nov. 27.—As to the final fate of the Ferris wheel, either Charles Grant, whose letter was addressed to the Voice of the People, Nov. 16, is wrong, or I am wrong.

After the Chicago World's Fair the wheel was rolled to a point opposite the Chicago limits barn in Clark street where the cable cars ended and the electric cars began their long journey north. It was an attraction for some years at Ferris Wheel park. I could see it from the south window of a high building I then occupied on Belmont avenue. Despite occasional romantically inclined couples who were married in the wheel it never did well as an attraction on the north side and it was afterwards rolled down to the St. Louis fair to win the admiration of the new generation who had not seen it.

Evil days came for the jolly old wheel. It was blown up with dynamite. At least that was my impression because I wrote a story about it on assignment, which to my great satisfaction made the first page of THE TRIBUNE. I recall I used the expression in the first paragraph, "Unwept, unhonored and unsung," and it was not until several years afterwards that I learned this originally was from Edward Everett Hale's "The Man Without a Country." CHARLES A. LIVINGSTON.

INCOMPETENTS.

Glencoe, Ill., Nov. 25.—May I call your kind attention to an article on page 1 of the home edition of yesterday and headed: "Judge Starts Test on Estate Assets in Closed Banks."

An action started to protect 10,000 minors and incompetents regarding funds evidently deposited for these helpless people in small banks! It would seem to me that the gentlemen who deposited such sacred funds in generally irresponsible banks should be declared incompetents, if not prosecuted for malfeasance while in office. Such recklessness is unpardonable.

How is it possible in a civilized country to allow such incompetents, as they no doubt are, to handle moneys at all? Are all of our voters asleep to allow such conditions to prevail? Do please refer to it loudly in one of your usually excellent editorials. ALEXANDER SAUNDERS.

THE VALUE OF A COLLEGE EDUCATION.

Chicago, Nov. 27.—It is rather peculiar that in spite of repeated urging and declaiming on the part of our civic and industrial leaders for higher education, when the university trained man endeavors to obtain a position he is turned aside for men of doubtful ability and no training.

Is it because our business leaders seem to have the mistaken notion that the college man considers himself superior and expects a high salary?—a fact which in the very great majority of cases is absolutely unfounded.

The college man realizes that promotion comes with time. He often is willing to accept a lower salary than men with far less training and ability are receiving, and in positions which many men would scorn. All for the opportunity to prove his ability to handle each succeeding position with profit to his employer as well as himself.

ASK ASSEMBLY FOR $10,000,000 TO HELP NEEDY

Governor's Commission to Push Plan Tomorrow.

A special meeting of the governor's commission on unemployment and relief will be held tomorrow afternoon at 10 South La Salle street to consider state legislation for the purpose of raising public funds for relief of the unemployed needy.

The Joint Emergency Relief fund of Cook county at a meeting yesterday adopted a resolution asking the state legislature to consider ways and means of providing $10,000,000 for Cook county and Chicago relief, in addition to the $10,000,000 now being raised by private subscription.

80,000 Families Getting Help.

"Actual expenditures for family relief in Cook county for the last three months will exceed $5,000,000," said Edward L. Ryerson Jr., chairman of the governor's commission on unemployment and relief and president of the Joint Emergency Relief fund.

"There are at this date approximately 80,000 families being given relief. Analysis of the budgets and estimates of the private relief agencies shows that during the first few months of 1932 the families needing relief will exceed 120,000 and monthly expenditures may approximate $3,500,000.

Minimum Need $20,000,000.

"Likewise, analysis of the budgets and estimates of these charities for the complete period of October, 1932, proves that the total requirements for relief within Cook county for the twelve month period will be a minimum of $20,000,00 and may reach $30,000,000. Private subscriptions are providing $10,000,000, leaving a minimum of $20,000,000 and may reach firmly believe must be provided by public funds."

The resolution adopted said: "We urge upon the members of the senate and house of representatives of Illinois the giving of careful consideration to our request with a view to enacting legislation that will produce during the year 1932 $10,000,000 for relief work in Cook county."

Fund Raised to $8,548,523.

With contributions yesterday totaling $135,100 the subscription total of the Joint Emergency Relief fund was raised to $8,548,523. The largest subscription reported last night was $82,000 from John and Douglas Stuart.

Among the pledges reported were the following:

Employés of Mutual Trust Life Insurance company	$2,400
Lang, Wales & Colla Co. and Employés	2,511
Employés of Western company	1,222
Eastman Kodak Employés	2,489
Employés of Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific railway	5,227

Due to the immensity of the project, the largest charity program ever to have been carried out in Cook county, there have been numerous complaints concerning the handling of the fund and the personal treatment given applicants during the last month, it was said.

Replies to Complaints.

"Many of the complaints are the result of a misunderstanding by the general public," said Franklin D. Loomis, executive secretary of the Joint Emergency Relief fund. "The purpose of the fund is to provide food, clothing, and shelter to the needy. That care is given to all needy alike."

One letter of complaint stated: "A young girl is without work and without funds. She applied to one of the charities of which she had read and was told that nothing could be done for her as they were not taking care of any one who was rooming and boarding—their work was all with families."

"In this particular case," Mr. Loomis said, "the girl applied at an agency dealing only with family relief. Naturally they could do nothing for her. If she had applied at the service bureau for women, 126 North Wells street, she would have been given aid. Of course, we cannot guarantee to pay her rent or board. If such is out of reason, she must move to a place within her means."

Employés Send In Protests.

Mr. Loomis said that complaints have been numerous from employés that they are being forced to pay more than they can afford so that their concerns may enjoy the distinction of being among leading contributors to the relief fund.

In a letter one employé said: "The charity program is exerting such unjust pressure upon the workers that many will soon be fitter subjects for charity than those they are aiding. In this small factory practically every person is aiding his own family or friends.

"To be specific—one man, when he works full time gets from $23 to $25 a week, but is sent home on account of lack of work more than half the time. He has a wife and two small children to support and his last pay check amounted to $8.50, from which was deducted $1.50 for the charity fund. Protest was made to the company officials and he was curtly told he must contribute."

Instructed Against Pressure.

"We specifically told employers not to exert pressure on their employés," Mr. Loomis said, "but of course we cannot watch them. We instructed employers to ask their employés to contribute what they could. Oftentimes the personal pride of employés themselves, wishing to make a 100 per cent showing, forces others to give more than they can afford."

Mr. Loomis said that another cause of frequent complaint, the payment of high wages to a few who are given work from the general work fund, is beyond the control of the relief officials.

"When a man is sent to work on a job with union men he must be paid the union scale," he said. "But most of the work is of a labor variety and the question does not arise. We cannot fight the unions at a time like this."

GOOD FELLOW FINDS GREAT JOY IN HIS PART AS SANTA CLAUS

Nineteen days until Christmas, Good Fellows, or if you're counting shopping days, just sixteen.

Over on the near north side, Anna, 8 years old, isn't chalking off the days on the calendar until Christmas. Anna knows, just as her five younger brothers and sisters do, that they'll be lucky if they have bread and potatoes for Christmas dinner. Anna's father died two years ago. So Anna merely shakes her head when you ask if Santa Claus is coming.

Good Fellows, think of the joy that would be yours to knock at the door of this home on Christmas eve, to see this little girl's face when you tell her that Santa Claus sent the basket of goodies.

More business firms sent their orders for needy families to THE TRIBUNE Public Service office, 1 South Dearborn street, Good Fellow headquarters, yesterday. The Berland Shoe stores placed a request for 25 families. Another firm, Williams & Cunningham, called for the names of fifteen families. And from all over the city came letters from individuals who want to be Good Fellows.

For those who are unacquainted with the Good Fellow plan, any questions will be gladly answered at the Good Fellow headquarters. You can join by calling in person or sending in the coupon.

Canada to Ship 4,000,000 Christmas Trees to U. S.

COMBINED ARMY AND POLO MEET TO AID CHARITY

Armory to Be Scene of Tourney.

A combined military and polo tournament to be held in the 124th field artillery armory on Dec. 19, under the sponsorship of the Central Manufacturing District club, was announced yesterday. The proceeds will be divided between the Joint Emergency Relief fund and the regimental equipment fund.

The armory, the largest in Chicago, seats 6,000 persons and is ample enough to permit the playing of the star events, two polo games, the regimental team against that of the Onwentsia club and the famous Argentine team versus the Fort Sheridan officers. Dr. R. R. Duff, the executive chairman, hopes these games alone will pack the armory.

Artillery Drill on Program.

The tourney will open with the trooping of the colors to be followed by artillery drill with guns and caissons in combined evolutions. Fancy and trick riding and cowboy and army relay races come next.

Demonstrations of machine gun and anti-aircraft warfare will give way to a junior horse show, the participants being children of the regimental officers, who will ride for prizes.

The chukkers of the regiment-Onwentsia game will be interspersed between the foregoing events. The program will be concluded with the Argentine-Fort Sheridan game.

Events to Be Added.

The program committee, Lieut. Col. R. G. Hunter, Capt. H. H. Emerson, and Lieut. Ray Waldron, plans to add to the list of events.

Serving with Dr. Duff on the executive committee are: Maj. Gen. Frank Parker, Brig. Gen. Thomas S. Hammond, Commander Eugene McDonald, Maj. George C. Hager, Nelson Buck, David E. Shanahan, C. T. Henkle, Leon Mandel, B. J. Coyle, Elmer Erickson, Frank Webb, M. G. Byrne, Arthur Meeker, Walter Barker, Louis F. Swift, Thomas E. Wilson, W. J. O'Brien, Robert Benedict and C. H. Schryer Jr.

The armory is at Cottage Grove avenue and 52d street.

Nebraska Jury Disagrees on $2,500,000 Robbery

Lincoln, Neb., Dec. 5.—(AP)—The jury trying Jack Britt, East St. Louis, for participation in the $2,500,000 Lincoln National bank robbery failed to reach a verdict tonight and was dismissed after 57 hours deliberation. Another jury disagreed on the case last month.

HUNGRY PUPIL IS PUBLIC LIABILITY, DOCTOR DECLARES

Points to Need of Aiding Future Citizenship.

Cash contributions to the Hungry School Children's Fund will be received at the following Tribune offices: 1 South Dearborn street, 1101 East 63d street, and 4152 West Madison street.

"This question of the underfed school child is of paramount importance," Dr. Lena K. Sadler, woman physician and authority on nutrition, said yesterday in discussing the Hungry School Children's fund.

"Adults who have gone through the experience of reducing," she explained, "will recall that after the first two or three days of underfeeding their appetites lost the keen edge. They were quite satisfied with reduced rations. They really got out of the habit of feeling hungry. Those who overdid the dieting went along nicely for a week or two, then suddenly woke up to the fact that they were sick—nature was in revolt.

"Just so with these little folk. After a time they really cease to experience the pangs of hunger, lose their normal desire for food, and are seemingly able to get along on the restricted diet. But nature demands that these youngsters as well as their elders pay the penalty.

Ills Follow Undernourishment.

"The first ill effect is the impoverishment of the iron in the blood. As a result, the red blood cells, the oxygen carriers, are weakened. Then follows a train of ills. The children pick up disease germs, their resistance being lowered. They get sore throats and head colds. Catarrhal conditions develop in the nose and throat, and the lungs are affected. Organic diseases of the heart, stomach, liver, intestines, develop to incapacitate their victims for worthwhile lives of happiness and achievement.

"These conditions, serious as they are, can be avoided if the essentials—not luxuries or frills, but the bare essentials—can be supplied. School children need the cereals, milk, fresh fruit, eggs, meat, and vegetables they are getting in the warm lunches provided through the Hungry School Children's fund.

"So much can be done by attention to these matters, toward building Chicago's citizenship of the next generation, that it is of vital importance. Every one should help to the extent of his ability."

Bridge Party Benefits Fund.

Mrs. George Frederick Hoad of 7743 North Marshfield avenue, sponsored a benefit bridge party yesterday at 59 East Monroe street, by courtesy of the Central branch of the Y. W. C. A., which netted $30 for the fund. Favors provided by the "Seventeen" company were given each guest, and the head prize, a Deauville toilet set, was donated by the Richard Hudnut company. STORMS DELAY 'HUNGER MARCH' ON WASHINGTON

Washington, D. C., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—Delayed by storms and by automobile trouble, the cavalcade of motor trucks filled with 1,200 unemployment relief agitators who plan a "hunger march" at the opening session of congress Monday, was so far behind its schedule today that many of the delegation will not arrive in the capital until late tomorrow night.

While their headquarters here was receiving word of the marchers' progress from the north and the west, Brig. Gen. Pelham D. Glassford, local police superintendent, was busy revamping his plans for a quiet, bloodless, blowless police reception of the marchers. He had originally agreed to permit the army to carry their banners on to the capitol grounds.

But today Vice President Curtis, who, with the speaker of the house, is in supreme charge of the capitol grounds, issued an order forbidding the carrying of any banners. Since there is no speaker at present, the Vice President's ruling is final. This is the usual order, and Gen. Glassford's permit was an exception in the way of a compromise toward peace.

RUPTURE
Don't submit to avoidable operations or the use of antiquated trusses, as they all set where the lump is and not where the opening is. The opening is seldom larger than a dime, no matter the size of the rupture, and all cases can be retained with the end of a lead pencil. The Supermatic Shield-Complex (Patent No. 767,247, No. 1,334,709 and other patents pending) is a scientific achievement in a highly specialized art. It will not only retain any case of rupture perfectly, but contracts the opening in 10 days on the average case. Infinitely superior to any instrument, method or operation, and produces results in no other way obtainable. All cases are secure a lifetime as against any further trouble or expense. Large or difficult cases or incisional rupture (following operations) specifically solicited. The instrument received the only award in England and in Spain, producing results without surgery, harmful injection, medical treatment or prescriptions, with distinguished personal patrons of all nations. VACHEL LINDSAY, NOTED ILLINOIS POET, IS DEAD

Famed for His Poem About Lincoln.

Springfield, Ill., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—Death today ended the brilliant literary career of Nicholas Vachel Lindsay, the wandering minstrel of American poetry. He died at 1 a. m. this morning from heart disease. He was 52 years old.

Tonight his body lay in the Lindsay homestead, where he wrote the poetry that brought him world-wide fame. The Lindsay home is a short distance from Gov. Emmerson's executive mansion.

According to relatives his death was sudden. Three nights ago the poet delivered his last public recital of a groups of poems. At that time he seemed in good health.

Wrote Many Famous Poems.

Lindsay gained his first fame with his poem "Gen. Booth Enters Heaven," but his two most famous are "The Congo" and "The Chinese Nightingale." Among his other famous poems are "Abraham Lincoln Walks at Midnight," "The Candle in the Cabin," "Adventures While Preaching the Gospel," "Going to the Sun," "Santa Fé Trail," and "Red Bartender."

Much of the effect of Lindsay's characteristic poetry depended upon his peculiar rendition and rich, powerful qualities of his voice. He read his poetry in a chant that he called singing. He opposed all efforts to put verse to music, declaring it was music itself.

He recited his poems before the English department of many colleges and universities.

Although the poet is dead, his leonine roar has not perished. Lindsay recently announced that nearly all of his best poems had been recorded on phonograph records at Columbia university, where he had been a lecturer.

Began Trampings in 1906.

The poet began his hobo trampings in 1906. He had trudged along the roads of Florida, North Carolina, Tennessee, and Kentucky before he finally wandered back to the city of his birth—Springfield. He stopped at the home of poor and rich alike, where he would chant his poems in exchange for food and a place to sleep.

Other tramping tours took him through the southwest states and throughout the east.

Outstanding in his travels and speeches was Lindsay's affection for his home town and which inspired him to write "Springfield Magical."

Lindsay was born in Springfield Nov. 10, 1879, and spent his early life there, graduating from the Springfield High school in 1897. He made his start as a lecturer in the West Side Y. M. C. A. in New York during the winters of 1905, 1906 and 1907.

He attended Hiram college. He also was a student at the Chicago Art institute for three years and later attended the New York School of Art for two years.

He was a member of numerous organizations, including the Authors' guild of Authors' League of America; Poetry Society of America; Cliff Dwellers [Chicago], and Players [New York].

He is survived by his widow, a son, Nicholas Vachel, 4, and a daughter, Susan, 6.

Will Exhume Body of Mercy Killer's Victim

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, Dec. 5.—(AP)—The authorities today ordered the exhumation of the body of Baroness von Deuben on the theory that she had not been suffering from an incurable disease when her daughter, Mrs. Else Wille Bang, administered an overdose of medicine to her. The daughter has been charged with murder on her own confession, saying she administered the overdose to put an end to her mother's pain.

ITALY SENTENCES 18 SLAVS IN PLOT TO GRAB PROVINCE

Fascists Charge Serbia Backs Uprising Plan.

BY DAVID DARRAH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, Dec. 5.—The trial before the special military tribunal for defense of the state of a group of 57 Slav Irredentists from the Italian border around Trieste and Istria ended tonight with prison sentences ranging from 2 to 30 years for 18 men and 12 acquittals on the grounds of insufficient proof. Twenty-seven were tried on charges of contumacy.

The ringleader, a student named Jelenec, was sentenced to 30 years, and two others to 15 years. The group was charged with conspiring to return the frontier province of Venezia Giulia to Jugo-Slavia. Italy was given a large strip of territory between the Isonzo river and the mountains, heavily inhabited by Slovenes, under the peace treaty, and assimilation has been difficult.

Charged with Stirring Uprising.

The Slav Irredentists, who were rounded up last year, were alleged to have fomented armed uprisings, devastations and massacres. They had a military organization to operate at the rear of the Italian army in case of war, according to the charges.

Listed against them in the court documents were 99 crimes, including 30 armed aggressions against Fascist militia, 13 homicides, destruction by fire of 18 schools and military institutions, 8 terroristic attempts and various acts of espionage.

Leader of Ring Escapes.

The head of the whole organization, a student named Alberto Rajec, escaped across the border.

According to the charges, the group got its funds from Jugo-Slavia and held secret meetings on the frontier in which Slavs from Jugoslavia also participated and were furnished with secret information.

The organization, it is alleged, distributed anti-Italian pamphlets and formed subversive associations.

Ida Walters, Wife of Rail Supply Executive, Is Dead

Mrs. Ida Grant Walters, 58 years old, 241 Essex road, Winnetka, died yesterday. She was the wife of George Lewis Walters, secretary treasurer of Adams & Westlake company, railway supplies. Besides her husband she is survived by two sons of a previous marriage, Grant Harper and Harvey M. Harper.

ANTI-CRUELTY GROUP GIVES AID TO 22,532 BEASTS IN 11 MONTHS

During the last eleven months the Anti-Cruelty society has cared for 22,532 animals, according to the report submitted by H. J. Streibert, superintendent of the shelter at 155 West Grand avenue, at the annual meeting yesterday in the Stevens hotel.

Of these, 12,711 were dogs and 9,757 cats, Mr. Streibert reported. There were also 64 rabbits, mice, birds and other small animals. In the free dispensary 4,102 cases were cared for and hundreds of persons were advised by telephone on the care of animals.

Charles S. Peterson, who was reelected president, said that the organization hoped to build a new shelter and increase the scope of its work through the bequest of the late Mrs. Marion E. McConnell. Although the gift was first reported as $1,000,000, it will probably amount to about $400,000, Mr. Peterson said.

The other officers were reëlected as follows: Lewis E. Myers, John T. McCutcheon, and Mrs. George Wisner, first, second, and third vice presidents; Mrs. Duane T. McNabb, secretary, and Bosford Young, treasurer.

The directors elected are E. D. Adcock, Mrs. Thomas Dagg, Mrs. E. P. Dunning, Miss Flora Ehlman, Mrs. William Faurot, Mrs. William Ennis, Mrs. E. D. Hulbert, Mrs. Walter Inbusch, Mrs. R. R. McCormick, Mrs. Edmond Miles, Clarence Richards, J. J. Roberts, Chester Walcott, W. H. Webster, Mrs. W. F. Krahl, and Miss Katherine Drake.

J. L. ANDERSON, LONG A CHICAGO PASTOR, IS DEAD

The Rev. Joseph L. Anderson, 61 years old, superintendent of the Gary Methodist hospital, and until six months ago chaplain and corresponding secretary of the Wesley Memorial hospital here, died early this morning at the Wesley hospital. He had been ill since last July.

He was ordained in 1898 and held various pastorates in Kansas until 1913, when he became pastor of the Wicker Park church in Chicago. From 1915 to 1919 he was pastor of the Sheridan Road church, and from 1920 to 1921 pastor of the Fourth Street church, Sterling, Ill. He joined the Wesley hospital in 1922. He was secretary of the board of stewards, Rock River conference.

"Funerals by Hursen" Of Course

Hursen Chapels are today recognized as the finest institutions of the kind in this country. The North Side chapel, particularly, is a masterpiece of beauty, massiveness, facilities and arrangements. It has recently been remodeled. The South Side and West Side Chapels are palaces, convenient for the smaller or the largest funerals.

All Hursen automobile equipment, the finest things on wheels, was built for Hursen along Hursen special designs. Yet the charge is no greater than for equipment far less desirable.

There is no charge for the use of any of the three Hursen Chapels, each equipped with organs of unmatchable tone and size. The charges for Hursen funerals are less than the charges usually made elsewhere. So call, Hursen, of course!

DEPRESSION KEPT FROM VATICAN BY U. S. DONATIONS

Budget Is Guaranteed by "Peter's Pence."

BY DAVID DARRAH.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, Dec. 5.—The independent state of Vatican City, with a population of 800, an area of 160 acres and ruled by Pope Pius XI., is alone among modern states not affected by the world economic crisis, although its income from many countries has been greatly reduced, according to Magr. Bernardino Nogara, head of administration in Vatican City and minister of the treasury.

Twenty million American Catholics have guaranteed the pope each year whatever he needs for current budgetary expenses. American and Canadian Catholics are Vatican City's most generous contributors, Magr. Nogara said. He estimated the budget for the current year of Vatican City at 180,000,000 Italian lire [$9,360,000].

How Money Is Derived.

Magr. Nogara explained how this sum is derived. Part of it comes from Catholics throughout the world and part is the income on the indemnity fund paid the Vatican by the Italian government under the Lateran treaty. This indemnity amounted to 1,000,000,000 lire [$52,000,000] in Italian government consolidated stock, which pays 5 per cent, and 750,000,000 lire [[illegible],000,000] in cash, which the Vatican invested in Italian 3½ per cent bonds.

Thus, the income of the Vatican from this source amounts to 76,250,000 lire [$3,965,000].

Deducting this from Magr. Nogara's budget estimate of 180,000,000 lire [$9,360,000], 103,750,000 lire [$5,395,000] is left for contributions. These gifts are known in the Vatican as Peter's pence.

Raised By Catholics.

Pope Pius does nothing to encourage the Peter's pence contributions, Magr. Nogara said, the funds being raised entirely by the initiative of Catholics. France pays no Peter's pence, according to Magr. Nogara, all contributions being retained in France and spent by the local churches.

The Spanish upper classes and nobility formerly contributed 5,000,000 lire [$260,000] annually but since the recent trouble in Spain, this has ceased. Mexico and South American republics formerly contributed conspicuous sums, Magr. Nogara continued, but these have also ceased since political upheavals occurred.

Americans Best Money Source.

"How much do American Catholics give?" Magr. Nogara was asked.

"I will reply in paraphrase," he said. "The Catholics of the United States are the best economic supporters of the church. They have bound themselves to give his holiness not a concrete sum, but whatever figure the pope holds necessary for his needs. American Catholics also support numerous foundations and institutions throughout the world."

"You don't feel the crisis in the Vatican?" he was asked.

"Not yet," was the reply. "Perhaps in the future we shall. But as the budget is derived from the income on the indemnity and as Peter's pence is coming from all over the world, we are optimistic."

Seek to Raise Swiss Guard.

Magr. Nogara explained that the Vatican's finances are managed economically. The Swiss guard is maintained at 125 men, although there is agitation to raise the force to 250. The upkeep of the Vatican diplomatic service in 35 countries is not a heavy budget charge, Magr. Nogara said, as a provision for nuncios is made locally in most of the countries.

Pope Pius is much interested in charitable and building activities, it was explained, and this absorbs considerable of the Vatican funds.

Improvements and building in Vatican City, together with the repairing of the cupola of Saint Peter's has cost [illegible],000,000 lire [$2,600,000].

When Pius became pope, 5,000 parishes in southern Italy had no houses for their parish priests. The pontiff since his coronation has built [illegible] houses for curates in Sicily, and [illegible] in Sardinia, besides repairing and building seminaries and schools such as the Gregorian university at Rome, which has 1,600 students.

2,500 EXTRA MEN TO BE HIRED HERE FOR POSTAL RUSH

Extra employés to aid in the handling of Christmas mail will be hired at the postoffice this week, Postmaster Arthur Lueder announced yesterday. The additional workers will be put to work as rapidly as the need for their services is required. Only those who already have filed applications will be considered, the postmaster said. Although approximately 2,500 men will be employed during the next three weeks, Mr. Lueder stated that the number of applicants far exceeds the number of jobs available.

ATTORNEY FOR MINERS SUED BY A DEPUTY

Called "Al Capone," He Charges Libel.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Mount Sterling, Ky., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—Former United States Senator John M. Robsion, chief counsel for the defendants in the Harlan county murder and conspiracy trials here, was served with a summons today in a $50,000 libel suit filed by George Howard, former Chicago salesman of fighting equipment, who objected to being referred to in this trial as "Al Capone" and "Chicago gangster."

Howard is now a deputy sheriff of Harlan county. He came down to the Kentucky coal field in 1929 to sell war equipment, including steel breast plates, and he made such a hit with Sheriff John H. Blair that he was appointed a deputy. He is said to be an expert marksman.

In the course of the W. B. Jones trial, which is now drawing to a close, the defense attorney has cross-examined several witnesses as to somebody called "Al Capone," who was supposed to be a special object of hatred by the miners. The witnesses never mentioned the name of Howard, but said they had heard of a deputy called "Capone" and "Chicago gangster."

It was asserted by prosecution witnesses that the defendant Jones had told the miners to "shoot at the heads of the officers, because their bodies are breast plated."

Robsion Comes Back.

Mr. Robsion regards this suit merely as an effort to intimidate him in the defense of the coal miners. He represented the mining district in the house of representatives for several years and later was appointed to the senate to fill an unexpired term.

The defense in preparing today to close its case soon put several witnesses on the stand to account for the whereabouts of two men accused with Jones—Bill Hudson and Jim Reynolds.

These witnesses swore both were far from the scene of the battle of May 5, engaged in harmless pursuits.

Hudson himself took the stand but proved a disappointment to the defense.

He had just started to tell that he had been on his way to town to get medicine for his sick boy at the time of the shooting, when Judge H. R. Prewitt interrupted him to ask if he waived all rights in his own case in thus appearing for Jones.

"I don't want to testify," said Hudson.

"I am sorry this has gone this far," said the court. "The law does not require you to testify. Step aside."

Witness Tells of Guns.

Lawrence Toney, Evarts' taxi operator, was the first defense witness to admit that guns were brought into town during the fighting and that there were many armed men on the street.

About 9 o'clock on the morning of the shooting, he said he went to the Darby coal mine, a mile away, and got three Springfield rifles. These were delivered to Al Benson, Mose King, and Jack Griffin. Benson is one of the defendants.

The trip was made, he said, at the request of Police Magistrate Buckhart, following a report that the town was to be "shot up." Men and women ran to the schools and dragged their children home to safety.

The witness seemed to choke at one point of his testimony. The judge thinking he had swallowed tobacco juice, motioned him in the direction of a spittoon near the jury box. "Thow your tobacco out," suggested defense counsel.

"'Taint tobacco; my shirt's too tight," said the witness.

SUES ACTOR

MRS. BARBARA N. FOY.

Edwin F. Foy, actor and son of the late comedian, Eddie Foy, was sued for divorce yesterday by Mrs. Barbara Newberry Foy, 21 years old, 320 Plymouth court, actress and daughter of Max Newberry, Chicago architect. The bill filed in the Superior court charged cruelty. Foy now is in New York City appearing on the stage.

In her action Mrs. Foy, a former Ziegfeld beauty once dubbed the possessor of "the most beautiful legs in America," recited that she was married on May 12, 1930. Four months later while she lay ill, she charged, her husband slapped her.

RECORDS OWN DEATH AGONIES TO AID SCIENCE

Harvard Youth Leaves Findings to School.

Boston, Mass., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—A new name was added today to the long list of medical men who have given their lives to science. It was that of Alfred S. Reinhart, 24 year old honor student at the Harvard medical school, who died last Oct. 26.

Medical school authorities tonight disclosed that Reinhart, stricken with a malady which gave him only four months to live, gave his last few weeks of life to the minute study of his own body in the process of dissolution and left minute notes which are expected to prove valuable as a guide to science.

Reinhart had worked his way through Harvard by scholarships to graduate magna cum laude and spent three years in the medical school when stricken. Years before, while he was a student at the Boston English High school, an attack of rheumatism damaged one of the valves of his heart and during his late undergraduate years at Harvard he became aware of the fact that tiny excrescenses were breaking off the scar on the injured heart and lodging in the blood vessels throughout his body.

Studies Own Disease.

Studying his own case, he was convinced that what he might reasonably expect a streptoccocus germ infection through the entire blood system, that would dissolve the red blood corpuscles which mean life to man. When the color is dissolved it becomes diffused through the tissue and frequently appears as bright red blotches on the skin. Medical science knows that the appearance of these blotches is an infallible sign that the patient has four more months only in which to live and that death is to be extremely painful.

This symptom occurred in Reinhart's case last July. He decided to utilize every possible moment of his four months of life left in studying the disease which was to kill him. He stated his case to Dr. Soma Weiss, assistant professor of medicine at the Harvard medical school.

Takes Notes on Own Death.

Dr. Weiss set aside a room for him at the Thorndike memorial hospital and there Reinhart followed his own case, viewing and recording each new pain, each recurring manifestation of the growth and spread of the disease, and setting all down in a record which Dr. Weiss declares discloses several unusual observations not generally known to medical science.

It was Dr. Weiss who, in the presence of many of Reinhart's medical school classmates, carried out the young martyr's express wish that an autopsy be performed on his body within two hours after his death. It is Dr. Weiss' plan some day to publish Reinhart's notes under his name, to stand as a lasting tribute to the young man who refused to take drugs to relieve his intense pain for fear that they might deaden his senses of observation.

HEIRESS FREED FROM HER BOGUS SWEDISH COUNT

Nyack, N. Y., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—Katrina Van Wyck Schultz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Van Renseler Van Wyck, wealthy residents of Butler, N. J., today was granted an annulment of her marriage to Ture W. Schultz by Supreme Court Justice Graham Witschiff.

They met in Reno in June, 1930, when Katrina was divorcing her first husband, Bassett. The plaintiff charged that he represented himself as a surgeon and a cancer specialist and a member of the nobility of Sweden. She said he claimed to be Count Ture W. Bjelke.

They took a trip to Sweden at her expense, she informed the court, and were married there Jan. 5, 1931, after he had shown her a castle in which he said he was born but could not get his title back because he was $500,000 in debt. Katrina loaned her bogus count $15,000 when they returned to New York and in September of this year she says she learned he was an illegitimate child of Swedish parents. He got all her money except her trust fund, she said.

Schultz' second wife, Helen Ostrewich, widow of Lieut. Endler of the United States army, testified she wed Schultz on July 7, 1928, in California and that they lived from her insurance money. They agreed that he could marry a rich widow, get a divorce and remarry.

The bogus count courted Helen in New York this year and later she brought suit for breach of promise.

PLANS TO START SUITS AGAINST 300 BONDSMEN

Assistant State's Attorney A. C. De Witt, in charge of the state's attorney's bond department announced yesterday that he expects to start new suits immediately against 300 or more bondsmen in an effort to collect on approximately $2,000,000 worth of bonds. This procedure, he said, will be possible as a result of a decision given during the week by the Appellate court in a suit against Robert Woodward et al.

The decision said that the state's attorney's office may file as many scire facias suits as is necessary to make good on a bond judgment. Under former régimes many bond forfeitures were set aside because these suits were improperly filed or service was not obtained during the specified court term. Under the new ruling these defects can be remedied by the filing of new suits.

"This decision is of great importance in our campaign to collect on bonds," said Prosecutor De Witt. "It means that we can go back for a period of 10 years and file new suits and obtain judgments against property put up on bonds wherein the defendant has become a fugitive."

LODGE OFFICER MISSING, AND SO IS $60,000

New York, Dec. 4.—[Special.]—Between $60,000 and $70,000 is missing from the funds of the New York state organization of the Improved Order of Red Men, for whose treasurer, Edward A. Davis, police of the missing persons bureau has been searching for the last four weeks, it was disclosed today by Guy V. Vinton of Rochester, N. Y., head of the fraternal organization.

Mr. Davis, whose official title is keeper of the wampum, disappeared from an Albany night boat after leaving a farewell note to his wife. Officials of the order are convinced that the wampum keeper is still alive.

OPENING BRONZE DOOR TO ORIENTAL INSTITUTE

DR. BREASTED PICTURES DAWN OF MAN'S SOUL

Egypt the Place, 2,000 B. C. the Time.

a world of unworthy men by some mystic process which our old school theologians called inspiration or revelation, but springing out of man's own life, illumining the darkness of social disillusionment and inner conflict, a glorious vindication of the worth of man, the dawn of the age of conscience and character broke upon the world, a historically datable event, about 2,000 B. C.

Visual Evidence of Change.

"In our museum halls we can actually look upon the evidences of the transition from the age of materialism to the age of conscience and character. You will find in our Egyptian hall a group of 27 statuettes with which a cemetery official who served under the shadow of the Great Pyramid nearly 5,000 years ago equipped his tomb.

"These painted limestone figures represent his household, his children, and his servants engaged in grinding flour, mixing and baking bread, brewing beer, slaughtering cattle and poultry and cooking them; making pottery, casting metal, carrying their master's messages, or with three harps and a drum making music while he ate.

"Thus in the Pyramid Age, the first half of the Third Millenium before Christ, the Egyptian conceived his needs in the hereafter as being purely physical gratification.

The Writing in the Coffin.

"Alongside the case containing these statuettes is a cedar coffin with raised lid, bearing on the inside pictures of the food and drink which carry on the old ideas of the needs of man beyond the grave. But on the inside of the lid is a long writing containing the earliest intimations that happiness in the next world will be dependent on worthy moral conduct in this world.

"There was a lapse of perhaps 500 years between the cemetery official who wanted merely food and drink in the next world and the dead man who had his coffin so painted that as he lay in it and looked up at the lid, he would have staring him in the face the new fact that he might expect felicity beyond only as he had lived a worthy life here.

"Today you may walk between these two cases in the museum and, standing there, contemplate the original evidences, the actual tokens of the supreme transition in the life of man in its rise from savagery to civilization; the first defeat of materialism—the earliest dawn of conscience, the discovery of character, the emergence of social idealism.

Independent of Religion.

"This tremendous transition went on as a process entirely independent of religion. It transformed religion, however, for it brought forth for the first time a god of brotherly kindness. While men lived as tillers of the soil they discerned only a god of fertility; when the state arose and men caught their first vision of a supreme personality they called their god a king.

"Then when society developed and the friction and ferment of social struggle had taught men kindess and forbearance, they saw a god of character and of brotherly kindess whom they called 'the good shepherd,' two thousand years before the Good Shepherd of Christian faith.

"It was thus from the richly colored palette of human life itself that man drew the colors with which he glorified his picture of his god. That splendid vision arose out of the earliest spiritual revolution. It was caught up and exalted by the Hebrew prophets and through them has brought into our lives a light which still shines from the east."

Raymond B. Fosdick Speaks.

Raymond B. Fosdick, representing the Rockefeller foundation, principal donor to the Oriental institute, in his address found archeology and the lives of the ancients a guide to the problems of today.

He compared the materialism of today with that described by Dr. Breasted in the day of the Egyptian cemetery official, and expressed the hope that in coming out of the present economic depression the existing civilization might lose much of the material and gain of the spiritual.

"Today, as in all previous generations," Mr. Fosdick said, "there is the same fundamental incompatibility between the things of the world and the things of the spirit. Consequently ours is an age that would stand condemned by all the foremost teachers and prophets from the beginning of history.

"Socrates would riddle it with scorn; Plato and Aristotle would dismiss it as unworthy; Jesus of Nazareth would have none of it. Confucius, Buddha, Lao-Tsze—there is not a spiritual leader whose judgments we profess to revere in all the long line to whom our acquisitive civilization would not be anathema.

For Life Above the Material.

"Surely if prosperity means only houses and furniture and automobiles and radios and telephones and all the other paraphernalia of living—and no life that transcends all these mechanisms—then we should earnestly pray that the blight of prosperity may never return."

Dr. John H. Finley, associate editor of the New York Times, praised the new institute as a "tabernacle where people may get their bearings on the universe." No one since Alexander the Great has contributed more to glorify the near east than has Breasted, Dr. Finley said.

Among the distinguished guests who attended the dedicatory ceremony was the new Egyptian minister to the United States, Sesostris Sidarouss Pasha.

RITCHIE AROUSED BY MARYLAND LYNCHING; ORDERS AN INQUIRY

Baltimore, Md., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—Gov. Albert Ritchie on his arrival from New York today immediately went into conference with Attorney General William Lane and later ordered a sweeping investigation of the lynching last night at Salisbury, on the eastern shore, of Matthew Williams, Negro murderer, by a mob of 2,500, including many women.

State's Attorney Levin Bailey of Wichomico county declared there would be no delay in prosecuting leaders of the mob who could be identified. Meanwhile Mayor Wade Insley of Salisbury has demanded explanation from the police of their failure to act.

UNSEAL COFFIN OF ST. XAVIER 13TH TIME IN 379 YEARS

GOA, Portuguese India, Dec. 5.—(AP)—The coffin of St. Francis Xavier, considered by Catholics the greatest missionary since the time of the Apostles, was unsealed today for the 13th time since his death in 1552. The festival was celebrated by military music, the booming of guns, the pealing of bells and a display of fireworks.

A special emissary sent by Pope Pius XI. led the ceremonial procession in which marched three archbishops, 15 bishops and hundreds of other members of the clergy. A throng of 10,000 persons crowded the church and heard the papal mass and benediction.

The body of the saint was officially reported to be well preserved. It will lie in state for a month and a million pilgrims are expected to pass before it. In 1614, by order of Claudius Acquaviva, general of the Society of Jesus, the right arm was severed at the elbow and was taken to Rome, where it was placed in the Church of the Gesu.

ENDS LIFE WITH SHOTGUN.

Taylorville, Ill., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—Warren C. Christopher, 70, committed suicide today by shooting himself through the chest with a shotgun at his home in Morrisonville.

VETS RECALL WAR DAYS AT RALLY OF 33D DIVISION

3,000 Attend Gathering; Greeted by Officials.

Three thousand veterans of the 33d division forgot the depression yesterday to fight again in retrospect the battles of the Somme and the Meuse-Argonne at their annual reunion in the Hotel Sherman. There was much reminiscing among the former doughboys of the 131st and 132d infantry regiments who went over the top at daybreak on July 4, 1918, without orders, and brought back 1,100 prisoners.

"How the boys have changed," was the constant observation. "Bald heads, gray heads, beards, mustaches and bay windows." J. E. Newcomb of Augusta, 70 years old, was at his post as sergeant-at-arms. George E. Clarke, the retiring president, was the busiest man there, with his one arm and distinguished service cross attesting his part in the war.

Gov. Emmerson, Mayor Cermak, Attorney General Carlstrom and other notables welcomed the veterans. At a banquet last night, those at the speakers' table included Lieut. Gen. Joseph B. Sanborn, war time colonel of the 131st, who soon will be 76 years old; Lieut. Gen. Milton J. Foreman, Maj. Gen. Roy D. Keehn, commander of the 33d division; Brig. Gen. John J. Garrity, Brig. Gen. John V. Clinnin, Brig. Gen. Frank Schwengel, and Brig. Gen. Abel Davis.

Thomas G. Burns was elected president, Dr. Charles Schott, first vice president; Maj. E. V. Dickson, second vice president; A. V. Doder, secretary treasurer, and Mr. Newcomb, sergeant-at-arms for life. A memorial service will be held today at the grave of Maj. Gen. George Bell Jr., war time commander of the division.

JEWELER IS ROBBED OF DIAMOND RINGS BY TWO YOUNG WOMEN

New York, Dec. 5.—[Special.]—Two young women, neatly dressed, walked into the jewelry store of Isidore Blumberg on Nostrand avenue, Brooklyn, tonight, took a tray containing diamond rings valued at $2,000 and escaped with a simple pretense at drawing a weapon and a warning from one to Blumberg to be a "good little boy and keep quiet."

The young women, when they entered, asked to see a gold bracelet mounted with diamonds. Blumberg produced a bracelet. One woman complained that the gold appeared dull. Blumberg took a cloth and set about polishing it. As he was doing so the woman in brown started to wander about the store.

Blumberg saw her lift the tray containing the diamond rings from a counter and slip it under her coat. When he wheeled about the woman in the black coat snapped open her handbag and warned him to be silent. The two backed out of the store.

Girl Leads Bank Robbery.

Toledo O., Dec. 5.—(AP)—A blond girl, about 20, led two holdup men in a $2,200 robbery of the Bettsville Banking company, Bettsville, O., today. The girl entered first and handed a note through the cashier's window, which said:

"It's a stickup—make it snappy."

The men robbers pointed guns at Lulu Koester, bookeeper, and H. W. Davidson, cashier, while the money was being given to their girl accomplice. Miss Koester and Davidson then were forced to lie on the floor while the holdup trio fled.

Couple Is Found Slain; See Murder and Suicide

Ashtabula, O., Dec. 5.—(AP)—The bodies of Mr. and Mrs. William Winters of Ashtabula were found in their automobile late yesterday and police today expressed the belief it was a case of murder and suicide. The couple had been shot to death, but police were unable to say who did the shooting.

HIGHEST HONORS OF STOCK SHOW TO CHICAGOLAND

Illinois Leads States in Exposition Prizes.

Chicagoland learned that it had survived the greatest competition ever witnessed at the International Live Stock exposition when the show closed yesterday. Illinois, Iowa, and Indiana held their own in the contest for farm honors, with Canada sharing in the top prizes.

More than 75,000 people, including more than 25,000 school children, swarmed the twenty acre arena and exhibit buildings yesterday, to carry the total attendance of the 32d exposition to a record much above last year's. Manage B. H. Heide also reported last night that the opening days of the show had established an entirely a new mark in Chicago's show and a reversal from the lagging attendance of most farm fairs held this year.

Illinois Leads in Prizes.

Illinois stood head and shoulders above all other states in the compilation of total awards by states or Canadian provinces. Illinois stockmen won 163 first places and twenty other prominent stock awards. Iowa was second with 126, Indiana third with 108, Canadian exhibitors third with 83, Missouri fourth with 39, while Michigan and Wisconsin stood sixth and seventh with 34 and 30 ribbons, respectively.

Iowa, in turn, led the 23 states, Canada and Australia in the winning of grand championships on live stock, getting thirteen. Indiana and Canada shared glories in the largest grain show in 31 years, the former with corn winnings and the latter with wheat and other crops.

Complete Fat Stock Sale.

During yesterday's final sale of fat cattle, which ended three days of selling of the prize swine, sheep, and cattle that came to the show, college fed beef animals went for premium prices over the market.

Illini Major, chunky Shorthorn reserve championship steer over the hundreds of competing cattle, was bought by the Stevens hotel at 45 cents per pound. Railroads, hotels, packers, and restaurants were buyers of other meat animals for the holidays.

Horse Show Results.

Six $1,000 stake events were held in the horse show last night. First place in each class was awarded $250. The remaining prizes in each event were scaled downward to $60. One of the largest crowds of the show attended last night's exhibition.

Results of last night's horse show, denoting classifications, winning positions, horses and owners, follow:

U. S. FARM BOARD WILL BE TOPIC AT BUREAU SESSION

Farm organization delegates from forty states began arriving in Chicago last night for the opening tomorrow of the 13th annual American Farm Bureau federation convention. The sessions will last three days and discussions are expected to center on farm legislation to come before congress. The meeting will be held in the Hotel Sherman.

Before the federation adjourns Wednesday, it is expected that action will be taken on such matters as the federal farm board, the proposed operation of Muscle Shoals by farmers, checking of what is described as "unrestrained gambling in agricultural products on boards of trade and commodity agencies," as well as such issues as transportation rates, taxes, rural finance and waterways development.

The resolutions committee, as well as heads of several state farm bureaus, have already been in secret session formulating policies. These members will be guests of E. A. O'Neal, federation president at a dinner in the Hotel Sherman this evening.

DECLARES WIFE IS ESSENTIAL TO SUCCESS ON FARM

Women have an economic value in the country and the farmer who remains a bachelor never makes a success of farming, Lee R. Highlen, director of the live stock marketing department of the Indiana farm bureau federation, told the second annual national Farm Women's conference yesterday. The conference closed late yesterday after a two day session.

"Just as the bachelor can't do without a woman to help him run the farm, the Indiana farmers found they couldn't make a success of coöperative marketing without enlisting women," he said.

GERMANY TO CUT LIVING COSTS TO EASE PAY CUTS

[Copyright: 1931: By the New York Times.]

BERLIN, Dec. 5.—President Von Hindenberg's sixth emergency decree for safeguarding the nation's economic life and finances, which expected to be issued Tuesday, will contain encroachments upon private property rights without parallel in capitalistic Germany, it is anticipated in poltical circles.

The government is determined to tackle the job of reducing the cost of living and cost of production by decreeing a 10 per cent reduction of the chief fixed commodity and service prices, prices set by cartels, prices of medical goods, railroad and city transit fares and postage rates.

New Wage Cuts Loom.

These reductions are to provide the basis for a drastic cut in wages and salaries.

Not only will the decree reduce rents but the time allowed for giving notice is to be shortened in order to open the way for new contracts. Although the exact terms of the decree are still unknown, it has created distinct uneasiness among business men, foreshadowing a flood of protests.

Not After Presidency—Hitler.

BERLIN, Dec. 5.—(AP)—Adolf Hitler, leader of Germany's Fascists, declared today that under no circumstance would he become a candidate for the presidency—but he refused to say whether that meant the Fascists would keep President Paul Von Hindenburg at the head of the state if they succeeded in gaining power.

"I don't enter the picture at all," Herr Hitler said. "Even when we take over the power I don't intend to stand as a candidate for president."

Pressed for information about what his party would do in the matter of the presidential candidate, the leader of the National Socialists chuckled and said: "That eventually already is provided for."

WASHINGTON DISPLAY BRINGS LIKENESS INTO EVERY PURSE RANGE

Hartman's Offer Famous Stuart Reproductions in Three Sizes.

Anticipating by more than two months the beginning of the nation-wide celebration of the bi-centennial of George Washington in February, 1932, Hartman's will lead Chicago in bringing the first President, his life and ideals, into the hearts and the minds of Americans. Hartman's have dedicated a distinct portion of the immense Loop Store art exhibit to Washington, and are offering at remarkably low prices reproductions of the world-famous Gilbert Stuart portrait now in the famous Walker galleries of Minneapolis.

Made by a new process that reproduces with almost magical accuracy the color, the pigmentation and texture of the famous original, these reproductions are remarkably low priced. The desk oil tone sells for the modest price of $1. The medium size is offered for $5 and the large size for $7.50.

The original, one of the best known likenesses of the Father of His Country was painted during Washington's lifetime. Stuart, an Anglo-American, is one of the best known of all portrait painters, and the Walker original is one of the most beloved likenesses that remain of Washington.

The Washington bi-centennial, beginning February 22, 1932, and continuing until November 24, 1932, will be celebrated on a scale never before equaled in doing honor to a national hero. The celebration is sponsored by a special commission appointed by Congress, which has sent out thousands of pieces of literature, organized countless ceremonies, written several booklets, and taken a motion picture perpetuating the life of Washington. Low prices make these fine reproductions appropriate gifts for any child or adult.

James McNeill Whistler, an American and one of the outstanding figures of all time in the field of etching, will be represented with nine of his famous works on the eleventh floor, which has been entirely cleared for this great exhibit. Two of his famous "Thames" series are certain to attract attention.

Rembrandt's "Tobit Blind" and "Angel Appearing to Shepherds" will attract great crowds to the exhibit, it is expected. Four McBeys that have never been exhibited before will draw eager visitors. Among the other famous names will be Corot, Millet, Cameron, and Muirhead Bone.

W. S. Broude of Chicago has loaned his original of Ch. Crespin's "The Requiem," one of the world's most famous pictures. Nathan Borin is showing from his collection four pictures, headed by "The Cavalier" by D'Andre.

Herman Black, publisher of the Chicago Evening American, has loaned two of his own paintings.

Frank Peyraud, a Chicagoan and one of the country's foremost painters, is showing a dozen of his outstanding works. Mr. Peyraud is a regular exhibitor at the Art Institute and the leading galleries throughout the country. He offers for sale a special collection of oils.

Frank Lloyd Wright, acknowledged one of the foremost of the living architects, and proponent of glass skyscrapers, will show the first complete drawing of an all-glass skyscraper, recently finished by his associate, Charles L. Morgan. Mr. Morgan is also exhibiting a mosaic plaque and his collection of his original lithographs of Chicago views.

Irma Selz, Chicago caricaturist, who has lampooned the great in Chicago, New York and Hollywood, will exhibit her impressions of them, as well as a number of water color landscapes.

SALE BEGINS MONDAY AT HARTMAN'S LOOP STORE

Ten Prominent Art Dealers Offer Fine Works of Art at Lowest Prices in History on the 11th Floor.

The largest and most comprehensive art event of its kind ever held in Chicago opens tomorrow on the 11th floor of Hartman's Loop Store, Adams and Wabash. The exhibit, a feature of National Hartman Week, provides an especially timely opportunity to choose pictures for gift giving in an atmosphere of genuine art. An atmosphere which aids tremendously in choosing correctly because of the large number of masterpieces in the companion exhibit, which provide a wealth of ideas and suggestions.

It comprises both originals of priceless value and reproductions and prints of famous works. A large section will be devoted to the originals. Several private collections and individual masterpieces have been loaned for the occasion "The Requiem," a L. Ch. Crespin original, is outstanding in this group, as is a portrait from life, "George Washington as a Master Mason," ascribed to Gilbert Stuart and valued at many thousands of dollars.

Oils, etchings, water colors, woodcuts, pastels, hand-block prints, miniatures, caricatures, and every conceivable type of art is represented in the mammoth showing. The walls of seventeen individual rooms are completely filled. Down four long aisles, tier upon tier, arises a profusion of colorful art.

Pictures of All Kinds.

Every type of picture, for every purpose, is represented. Every subject and every coloring is included. Landscapes, marines, religious pictures, juvenile studies, silhouettes, sporting, Godey and botany prints, floral studies, plaques, historical studies, pictures for the collegiate, pastels, and subjects for the boudoir.

There are pictures specially selected for hotels, apartments, bungalows, and clubs; for homes decorated in the Spanish, French, English, Colonial, and Italian styles; for the living room, dining room, bedroom, nursery, library, and den; for the young, old, and the middle-aged; pictures, in brief, for everyone.

Lowest Prices in History.

All pictures, with the exception of the loan collections, are offered for sale. The exhibit is being held with the co-operation of ten nationally known manufacturers, who are offering world-famous reproductions at the lowest prices in history.

"Light of the World" is shown, for the first time, at $1.00, as also is the desk oil of Stuart's "Washington." The one-dollar group includes some extraordinary values—among them French etchings, 18th Century prints, oval French boudoir subjects, imported water colors, nursery rhymes, silhouettes, Godey and botany prints, oilettes, and miniatures.

Certain to attract widespread attention is the nineteen-cent group, which includes such well known studies as the "Alice Blue Gown," "Holland Flower Girl," Washington and Lincoln portraits, and 12x16 oilettes.

In the forty-nine cent group are Colonial silhouettes in pairs, piano-key miniatures, landscapes, Oriental studies, colored hunting scenes in pairs, and a wide range of juvenile pictures, including "Heaven's Gift."

At eighty-nine cents are shown the well known "Blue Boy," "Age of Innocence," dancing girls in colors, and a wide range of religious subjects.

From these four groups at one dollar or less the prices range gradually to ten dollars, and then upwards to six thousand dollars.

Because of the unique nature of this exhibit and the unusually low prices, there will be no C. O. D.'s, exchanges, or refunds. Also, no deliveries of sales under $2.

LEADERS UNITE TO PUT SPEED IN REVENUE RELIEF

Urge Action by a Joint Legislative Committee.

sentative Elmer J. Schnackenberg. "None of us can picture the dire results to the community from such a decision."

Schnackenberg then said the legislature never would pass a bill for the appointment, instead of the election, of the assessing officials, as provided in the tax conference bills.

Senators Kessinger and Barr spoke favorably of the bill to increase the gasoline tax from 3 cents to 5 cents, the additional 2 cents to go back to the counties of origin for the relief of distress due to the depression.

J. L. Jacobs, efficiency expert for the city and the county, expressed approval of the governor's tax conference program.

"I haven't heard of anybody developing a better plan," he said.

Asked About Banks' Attitude.

While Douglas Sutherland, secretary of the executive committee of the governor's conference, was speaking, he was asked if "the banks" insist that the present tax boards be replaced by a single assessor and two reviewers before they will buy more bonds or tax warrants. These three officials would be appointed by the president of the county board under the tax conference plan.

"I don't speak for 'the banks,'" Mr. Sutherland said, "but it is my personal opinion that that is the situation."

Mrs. B. F. Langworthy, representing the Cook County League of Women Voters, said that her organization favors the change in tax assessing and reviewing system recommended by the governor's conference and that it will stand by legislators who vote for the bill.

Several Legislators Present.

There were six state senators present at yesterday's meeting. In addition to Senators Barr and Kessinger they were Earl B. Searcy of Springfield and Thomas J. Courtney, minority leader; George M. Maypole and James J. Barbour of Cook county. There were a total of twelve representatives. Among those not already mentioned were David E. Swanson, Robert M. Woodward, Thomas J. O'Brien, Thomas P. Keane, Henry Sonnenschein, John R. McSweeney, James P. Boyle, Thomas J. O'Grady, and John O. Hruby.

Several members of Mayor Cermak's cabinet joined in the discussion. Among them were City Controller M. S. Szymczak, Commissioner of Public Works Sprague, and President B. F. Lindheimer of the board of local improvements. In addition to President Whealan the county was represented by County Clerk Sweitzer, County Controller M. J. O'Conner, and State's Attorney Swanson.

Six Aldermen There.

President Bowler and Trustee Ross Woodhull spoke for the sanitary district. Six representatives of the city council participated. They were Ald. John S. Clark, chairman of the finance committee, and Aldermen John A. Massen, T. F. Moran, J. B. Bowler, Barnet Hodes, and W. A. Rowan.

Chairman Joseph K. Brittain, as well as Secretary Sutherland, attended the meeting for the executive committer of the governor's conference. With them were Harris S. Keeler, secretary of the Chicago bureau of public efficiency, technical adviser, and Maj. Max Murdock, legal adviser, for the committee.

Others present included Francis X. Busch, former corporation counsel, and James L. Donnelly, executive vice president of the Illinois Manufacturers' association.

POLICE REPULSE BANDITS.

Herrin, Ill., Dec. 5.—(AP)—Patrolman Davis and Deputy Sheriff Richardson drove two burglars from a filling station here early today after exchanging pistol shots with them. No one was hit, so far as could be learned.

MOONEY'S MOTHER ILL FROM EXCITEMENT OVER PARDON FIGHT

San Francisco, Cal., Dec. 5.—(AP)—While Gov. James Rolph Jr. was conferring here today with his legal advisers in connection with the recent plea of Mayor James J. Walker of New York for a pardon for Thomas Money, Mrs. Mary Mooney, 83 year old mother of the alleged bomber, was removed to a hospital as a result of a nervous collapse. At the hospital it was said Mrs. Mooney's condition was due to her excitement as a result of the visit of Mayor Walker and other attorneys to San Francisco. She has not been in good health.

INVADES HOTEL ON GOLD COAST; SHOT BY POLICE

William Haynes, 35 years old, 6930 Cornell avenue, was shot in the hip late last night and his three companions were arrested when they were halted by Sergt. Garrett Fleming and his squad outside the 20 East Delaware place apartments.

The trio seized are Martin J. Quirk, 4219 South Halsted street, said to be a member of the "Spike" O'Donnell beer mob; George C. Donnell, 1019 Wabash avenue, and Fred Farley of Chicago Heights.

Quirk, it is said, created a disturbance in the lobby of the hotel, and when asked to leave threatened to "call some of his boys." East Chicago avenue police were notified. When Fleming arrived he approached the cab at the curb. Haynes threw a coat over the sergeant's head to foil pursuit, but was halted with a shot. Quirk, Donnell and Farley surrendered.

BERWYN POLICE KILL BURGLAR CAUGHT IN STORE

An unidentified burglar was shot and killed by Berwyn police late last night when he and two companions were routed from a grocery owned by Jerry Stejkal at 6548 West 27th street, Berwyn. The three were seen breaking into the place by a woman. She telephoned police and an alarm was broadcast over the radio. Policemen Charles Kresly and Frank Krizek responded.

Krizek went to the front of the store and Kresly to the rear. As Krizek hammered on the front door the burglars fled out the back. Kresly fired six shots at them, hitting one of the trio in the head and killing him instantly. The burglar was poorly dressed and about 24 years old. Anton Vanderboom of 2534 Ridegland avenue, Berwyn, identified him later as the bandit who tried to rob him Thursday.

DUCE DEMANDS ALL PROPERTY BE STATE MANAGED

ROME, Dec. 5.—(AP)—Private property and private initiative must come under the control of the state through the Fascist corporative constitution, Premier Mussolini said today in inaugurating the $26,000,000 credit institute by which the government and the banks hope to thaw frozen credits.

"It would be absurd," he said, "to consider this institute an instrument for producing a cataclysmic transformation in the Italian economic structure. It is a means for pushing Italian business toward state corporation.

"The corporative state is a system which fundamentally respects private property and private initiative, but desires even them to be impressed within the state, which alone can protect and control them."

DEANS OF WOMEN GIVEN PRAISE AT THEIR MEETING

Deans of women throughout the United States are the real mothers of the thousands of children under their care, Mrs. Henry Hoyt Hilton, president of the Chicago Federation of Women's clubs, told the members of the Illinois Association of Deans of Women yesterday.

Speaking at a luncheon in the National College of Education in Evanston, closing the twelfth annual convention of the association, Mrs. Hilton said: "I am the mother of two children and they have learned much from their deans. Deans are more talented than the average mother, and do much to spread the use of good English and the love of good literature. You have the control of them largely during their formative period."

Miss Rose A. Pesta, assistant superintendent of the Chicago public schools, commended the deans on the work they have done and made a request for the teaching of finance to the pupils under their control. Two hundred and fifty deans, representing public and private schools throughout the state, attended the convention.

BLUEBEARD'S LETTER TO WIFE TELLS HER WHAT TO SAY AT TRIAL

Clarksburg, W. Va., Dec. 5.—(AP)—City Detective Carl Southern today confirmed published reports that Harry F. Powers wrote a letter to his wife telling her how to testify in his murder trial starting here Monday.

"Yes, I've seen that letter," Southern said when his attention was directed to the missive. "I'm sorry it got out."

How the letter was sent by Powers to his wife, Luella, is a mystery. Southern admitted he saw the letter after it was drafted by the mass slayer but is unable to determine the manner in which the epistle was delivered to her. The letter also gave directions for testifying to his sister-in-law, Eva Strother. It was written soon after Powers was arrested in the deaths of Mrs. Dorothy Pressler Lemke, Northboro, Mass., divorcee, and Mrs. Asta Buick Eicher, Park Ridge, Ill., widow, and her three children.

LARGEST LINER EVER BUILT IN U. S. LAUNCHED

BY TOM PETTEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Camden, N. J., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—A $10,000,000 ocean liner slid down the ways here today and splashed into the muddy flood tide waters of the Delaware. The event was the launching of the S. S. Manhattan, largest merchant ship ever built in this country, and the thud of its great anchors marked an epoch in American marine history.

Notables from all sections of the country crowded into the yards of the New York Shipbuilding company here and immediately after the christening ceremony at which Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, wife of the former president, broke a bottle of water collected from the historic streams of every state in the Union across the bow of the Manhattan, leaders of the marine world held a jubilation luncheon in the ballroom of the Walt Whitman hotel.

Black clouds were swept away early this morning by a brisk wind and a brilliant sun streamed down on the four thousand people gathered about the great red hulk of the new 30,000 ton liner as it rode in its two cradles on the grease smeared ways.

Officials Bustle About.

Officials of the United States Lines, under whose flag the Manhattan will serve, bustled about the bunting clad platform facing the knifelike nose of the vessel.

Mrs. Roosevelt, a spry, smiling little woman in black, stood at the side of the great ship and caught a green bottle resting in a spider web of silk thread as it was lowered at the end of a red, white and blue cord exactly like those that are used to encircle the hats of cadets at officers' training schools.

Amidship someone pulled the "trigger." Deep under the Manhattan a compressed air plunger was released and the ship was given a mighty sock. The hulk quivered and began to move. Mrs. Roosevelt swung the bottle of historic waters squarely across the big white "13" mark where the depth gauge of the vessel is registered.

Crowd Cheers Moving Ship.

The crowd cheered as the big ship gathered speed and plunged unwaveringly toward the water. There was a surge and great waves began to break upon the shore. The ship pushed its way almost half across the Delaware before its anchors bit into the mud.

Bits of debris, carried into the water with the craft, shot to the surface like spouting whales. Tugs puffed forward to tie onto the new ship, and several airplanes dipped low in salute. The Manhattan was safe in her element.

The Manhattan, the keel of which was laid a year ago, is the sister ship of another vessel yet unnamed which is under construction in an adjoining shipway. The second craft also will belong to the United States line. It will be ready for launching in 1932.

Sixty Per Cent Completed.

The Manhattan will be towed to a nearby dock where her superstructure will be added and her interior fittings put in. The ship is only 60 per cent complete today and more than $750,000 more will be spent before she goes into service.

The Manhattan, when completed, will be a masterpiece in marine architecture. Her decorations and fittings will be typically American—everything from colonial to Indian art will be utilized and modern innovations will be found throughout the vessel.

PREDICTS CASH PAY DAY FOR TEACHERS SOON

$800,000 Now Available, Szymczak Says.

Chicago's teachers and other school employés who have been paid in cash for only one month since April will probably receive another month's pay before Christmas, City Controller Szymczak indicated yesterday. He said that a month's school salaries would be the first paid out of the proceeds from the sale of 1930 tax anticipation warrants.

The November pay roll for teachers was given as $3,955,000. At present approximately $3,250,000 in warrant purchases have been pledged in the city's sale campaign. About 25 per cent of the pledged purchases have been accompanied by cash. This would give in round figures $800,000 in available cash, or about one-fifth of the amount necessary to pay the teachers for one month.

Concerns Await Legal Opinions.

Several industrial concerns which have made large pledges have checks ready and are awaiting an opinion from their legal offices as to the warrants to be purchased.

Two pledges, one accompanied by cash, were received yesterday. Armour & Co. promised to buy $155,000 of warrants and L. W. Leonard of Mars, Inc., candy manufacturers, sent a certified check for $100,000. The proper warrants were not ready for Mr. Leonard, however. The money will be turned over to the city as soon as they are prepared.

$100 Warrants to Be Sold.

D. F. Kelly, chairman of the citizens' committee which is pushing the sale of the tax warrants to relieve the city's distress, announced yesterday that warrants will be available in $100 denominations. In the past tax anticipation warrants have been sold only in multiples of $1,000. Not only will the smaller denominations allow the small taxpayer to use them for tax payment, it was pointed out, but they will permit the person of average means to make a safe investment bearing 6 per cent interest.

"This innovation of making these warrants fit the needs of the small purchaser, either for investment or for payment of taxes, should have far reaching effect in our local government," Mr. Kelly said.

"It means the introduction of the customer ownership principle into city government. With thousands of Chicagoans holding small blocks of the city's paper they will insist upon better aldermen, better policemen, better street cleaners. It will mean more conscientious work at the polls."

TEACHERS' HEADS MEET

Attorneys representing the various teachers' groups met with leaders of those organizations at a conference last night in the office of Attorney Allan J. Carter at 120 South La Salle street. Among those present were Thurlow G. Essington, I. T. Greenacre, Leo J. Hassenauer, and Ald. Wiley W. Mills.

The conference reached no agreement on the school board bills asking the legislature to approve bond issues totaling $125,000,000, but approved bills for a state income tax, tobacco tax, paying of interest on overdue salaries, and a truck tax.

At an earlier meeting of principals in Fullerton hall of the Art institute, Superintendent of Schools Bogan criticized as ill advised most of the school economy suggestions which have been made by the board of education.

Presented at Tea

Miss Helen and Miss Marietta Gillette, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Fraser Gillette of Pasadena, Cal., were presented to Chicago society yesterday afternoon at a tea given by their uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. William Shippen Jenks, at the Fortnightly club on Bellevue place. The debutantes, whose father is a brother of Mrs. Jenks, came to Chicago in the early fall to spend the winter with their uncle and aunt.

NEW GRAND JURY TO CONCENTRATE ON BAIN INQUIRY

State Fights Move to Free Banker's Sons.

The December grand jury which convenes tomorrow will devote most of its time to an investigation of the entire chain of 12 Bain banks, which closed last June 9. This was made known yesterday as Edwin J. Raber, appointed a special prosecutor in the Bain investigation, was completing plans for delving into the banking manipulations of John Bain and his family.

The November grand jury returned no indictments against the Bains, as a result of the request of Prosecutor Raber, who said he wished to make a thorough investigation of all the banks before indictments were considered. It is possible, it was said, that the investigation will not be completed this month and that no indictments will be returned for several months.

Fights Release of Bains.

Meanwhile Assistant State's Attorney Euclid Taylor was preparing a brief which is intended to keep John H. Bain and Robert A. Bain, sons of the banker, and W. Merle Fisher, his son-in-law, in jail because of their inability to raise $40,000 bonds each. The State Supreme court at Springfield on Tuesday will consider habeas corpus writs obtained by attorneys for the Bains and Fisher and decide whether they should be released pending actual indictment by the grand jury.

Bain's sons and Fisher were held to the grand jury by Circuit Judge Michael Feinberg on charges of embezzlement, operating a confidence game, and obtaining money under false pretenses. All three were officials in Bain banks. John Bain, the head of the banks, was also held on similar charges, but was not taken into custody because he is ill in the Evangelical Deaconess hospital.

The order of Judge Feinberg has been attacked by the law firm of Deneen, Healy & Reid, representing the Bains, as "despotic and in violation of the constitutional rights of the defendants." The Supreme court judges are asked to nullify the order because of this contention.

Judge to Probe Banks.

Judge Feinberg will begin an investigation tomorrow of the First and Second Humboldt State banks. He asserted that he would use the same methods in discovering assets which resulted in obtaining more than $170,000 from debtors of the West Central State bank.

A report that the trial of State Auditor Oscar Nelson would start tomorrow before Judge Edward D. Shurtleff at Woodstock was denied yesterday. Attorneys for Mr. Nelson and the other defendants in the case involving the closed Waukegan State bank will make a number of motions before the court, but the trial will not start until Jan. 18 as originally scheduled, it was said.

HELD ON ARSON CHARGE.

Hillsboro, Ill., Dec. 5.—[U. P.]—John McCracken, 63, of Donnellson was held in the Montgomery county jail here today on a charge of arson. He is alleged to have set fire to a dwelling in Donnellson occupied by three of his nieces. McCracken waived preliminary examination and has been bound over to await action of the April grand term of the Circuit court. He has been unable to arrange bond fixed at $1,500.

FILIPINO MISSION SAILS FOR U. S. TO SEEK AUTONOMY

MANILA, Dec. 5.—(AP)—The eighth Philippine independence commission sailed for the United States today. A manifesto issued just before sailing expressed hope the commissioners would "find Washington in a ready disposition to comprehend the problems of the country."

The commission was warned, however, in a letter sent to Senator Sergio Osmena by President Manuel L. Quezon of the insular senate, that the administration at Washington is not committed to the principle of Philippine autonomy and also that congress at this session will be busy with grave problems and may not be able to give attention to independence.

Quezon, who has been ill since his return here in October, did not sail. Senator Osmena heads the mission. While the insular legislature is on record favoring immediate and complete independence, the commission will have a free hand and is generally expected to base its discussions with administration and congressional leaders upon Senator Quezon's ten year autonomy proposal. This is a compromise providing limited free trade with the United States with limits on Filipino emigration to America for ten years, then a plebiscite in the islands on independence.

COUNCIL BEGINS STUDY OF TRAFFIC IN CHICAGO AREA

A study of the traffic characteristics on various routes radiating from Chicago was started yesterday by the city council committee on traffic, of which Ald. John A. Massen [48th] is chairman. Observations are being made from a test car moving with traffic. The studies will be conducted periodically throughout the winter and spring and will cover the entire metropolitan area. The present observations are the third of a series of field studies, the former two having dealt with traffic volume and traffic origin and destination.

MALONE LAYS TAX ILLS TO UNEQUAL VOTING DISTRICTS

Declares Remap Is First Step in Remedy.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

Racketeering politicians and "finger crossing" statesmen at Springfield who have saddled Illinois with vest pocket "rotten boroughs" through refusal to reapportion were held up as the real causes of taxation distress yesterday by William H. Malone, former chairman of the state tax commission and candidate for the Republican nomination for governor.

Addressing a Chicago Bar association luncheon, Mr. Malone said "taxation without representation" is the great blight on the taxpayers. He said the first step in revenue reform is to restore equality of representation in the legislature.

"How are we ever going to have just tax laws passed," he asked, "when the lawmakers cross their fingers when taking the oath and refuse to obey the constitution requiring reapportionment?"

Attacks Public Spending.

Mr. Malone ripped into the politicians for a spending spree. He accused the tax spenders of a profligacy with public funds that made Nero, Caligula, and other Roman emperors look like Scotchmen.

One part of his speech that was especially well received by his audience was a description of the vest pocket legislative districts which have grown up in the river areas and close in sections of Chicago, due to the population growth in the 30 years since the districts were set up.

"One-sixth of the Chicago vote, living in nine small districts on the near north, south and west sides," said Mr. Malone, "elects one-half of the Chicago members of the general assembly.

"Nine small districts with a combined vote of 142,293 last election have 9 senators and 27 representatives. But on the northwest side 149,301 voters in the 25th district elect only one senator and three representatives.

"A voter in a river district has nine times as much voice at Springfield as a voter on the northwest side and in other growing districts."

Hits Professional Politicians.

Professional politicians who stir the country against the city to get into office were blamed by Mr. Malone, who argued that the ordinary man downstate is not restricting representation.

"The government for years has been in the hands of racketeers because we've lacked the courage to take it from them. The heritage of equal franchise, given us by the founders of this republic, has been stolen for the sole agrandizement of those with power to restore it to the people. The restoration of equal representation is the first step in the sound solution of our revenue problem.

"I believe thousands of voters have repeatedly voted against amendments to our state constitution, regardless of the merits of such proposals, because they are determined that their right to equal representation must be granted before they will sanction any other change.

Must Trim Budgets.

"Lower taxation can come only through reduced budgets by all tax spending bodies. Local government could function at 40 per cent of the present cost. But the legislature meets, and the lawmakers go into a huddle to devise new means to extract more money from the people when what we need is to trim budgets. And we've read of the sanitary district padded pay rolls. When the legislature was asked to investigate, nearly two-thirds of the senate was found on the pay roll, so the investigation stopped.

"Christ drove the money changers from the temple. It is time for the good people to drive the tax spenders and usurers out of the temple at Springfield."

RUSSIA DYNAMITES MOSCOW CATHEDRAL INTO HEAP OF RUINS

MOSCOW, Dec. 5.—(AP)—The Cathedral of the Redeemer, one of old Russia's proudest churches, was blasted into a heap of ruins today to make way for the palace of the soviets. Demolition of the great stone edifice, which has been going on for some time, was completed by dynamiting that continued well after dark. Flood lights were used that the workmen might see what they were about.

It was a difficult job, for the walls of Moscow's largest house of worship—it had a capacity of 10,000—resisted stubbornly and it was necessary to use small charges because of the close proximity of dwellings. Work on the palace of the soviets, a massive convention hall, is scheduled to start the first of the year.

Thousands of persons, prevented from approaching close to the church by squads of soldiers and police, watched silently in zero weather as the charges exploded at intervals of about an hour. All traffic within an area of several blocks was suspended throughout the day. The cathedral was erected to commemorate the liberation of Moscow from the French.

REEVES CHIDES DRYS ON FREEING OF HOOVER KIN

Col. Ira L. Reeves of the Crusaders yesterday sent the following ironic telegram yesterday to the Rev. Edward Dinwiddie, chairman of the board of strategy, Associated Dry Groups Supporting Prohibition, in Washington, on the freeing of President Hoover's brother-in-law of a booze charge in California.

"Congratulations on the successful manner in which you have handled the C. Van Ness Leavitt case of Santa Monica, Cal. That was a splendid piece of work and saved the prohibition bureau from much embarrassment.

"May we also appeal to you and through you to the Rev. Clarence True Wilson and other dry leaders whose influence in these matters is nationally recognised to lay aside for the time being any animosities which the American Legion's action in Detroit on the prohibition question may have engendered and assist us in securing the dismissal of the charge against Legionnaire C. D. Wiley of Chicago, who, also like Leavitt, was attempting to help a friend when arrested.

"However, Wiley has not been afforded an opportunity to be tried before a state court."

St. Paul's Church to Mark 88th Anniversary Today

Edward Habich, of the Berlin and Chicago Civic Opera companies and Capt. Paul Koenig, commander of the famous wartime German submarine Deutschland, will take part in the 88th anniversary services at 11 o'clock in St. Paul's Evangelical Lutheran church, Orchard street and Fullerton parkway. The Rev. Dr. Jacob Pister is the pastor. Mr. Habich will sing arias from Mendelssohn's "St. Paul" and "Elijah." Capt. Koenig will address the congregation in German.

FORMER TOWNSHIP OFFICIAL DEAD.

Pana, Ill., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—C. F. Rincker, 77, retired farmer of Prairie township, Shelby county, who served four terms as supervisor of his township, two terms as highway commissioner, and twenty-four years as deacon at St. Paul's Lutheran church, Strasburg, died last night. His widow and twelve children survive.

MILLION AUTO OWNERS UNITE IN TAX REVOLT

A. A. A. Chiefs Meet in Washington.

BY HAL FOUST.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—A million organized motorists, as represented by the executive board of the American Automobile association, today vigorously placed itself on record against any further tax on vehicles or fuel for local charitable purposes or to aid the federal government in meeting a deficit expected to reach two billion dollars.

A resolution was adopted calling on all state branches and affiliated motor clubs everywhere to "offer strenuous opposition" to any further taxes on motor cars or motor fuel unless the proceeds are devoted exclusively to necessary road improvements.

The boards' meeting was significantly timed on the eve of the seventy-second congress. Secretary Mellon of the treasury department has the problem of boosting the federal revenue and it is recalled that he opposed the repeal of the war excise tax on motor vehicles. He is reported to favor a resumption of this tax.

Autoists' Position Stated.

The American Automobile associations' action at this time is also significant in that many local governments are advocating use of gasoline taxes for charitable purposes, for the relief of unemployed this winter, or to meet deficits in their general budgets.

"Our position," said Thomas P. Henry of Detroit, president of the association, "is that the gasoline taxes and motor license fees are a special taxes and should be used for but one purpose, the improvement of streets and highways. The use of this money for any other purpose is contrary to equity and contrary to our theory of government.

Charles M. Hayes, vice president of the national association and president of the Chicago Motor club, took an even stronger position, Declaring that the expenditure for general purposes of money derived solely from automobile owners is contrary to the constitution of the United States, he advocated that the A. A. A. should go to court to attack the gasoline tax in such states as Florida, where part of the revenue goes into the school fund. His proposal was taken under advisement.

Sympathize with Jobless.

"This automobile association," said Mr. Henry, "would like to see the states relieve their unemployment this winter by a proper use of the money paid by the motorists.

"This proper use does not include the diversion of road funds for charity, such as is being done in Oklahoma, but does include a diligent prosecution of highway construction programs this winter.

"The American motorist is already paying at least a fair portion of the nation's taxes. To drive a heavy car for one hundred miles over Illinois roads, for example, the operator pays a 30 cent toll in gasoline taxes alone. The toll in Florida, which has a 7 cent gas tax, would be 70 cents.

"The valuation of the 26,500,000 motor vehicles in the United States is approximately $5,500,000,000. The annual tax on these cars is more than one billion dollars. This is at a rate of 18.3 per cent of valuation per annum, which is twelve times as heavy as the tax on rural real estate and seven times as heavy as the tax on urban real estate.

"At the present rate the average motor vehicle, through its life of seven years, pays taxes up to 128.3 per cent of its average value."

KNOX COUNTY MAKES FOUR CENT TAX CUT; LOWEST FOR YEARS

Galesburg, Ill., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—A 4 cent reduction in the tax rate of Knox county for the coming year was announced today by County Clerk George A. Larson. The county rate is reduced from 25 to 22 cents and the highway tax is dropped from 13⅛ to 12⅛ cents. Total valuation in the county is $60,964,537.

The new rate will be the lowest here in a score of years, county officials said. They believe it will be one of the lowest in the entire state. Knox county has no outstanding indebtedness, and no anticipation warrants out against it, and this excellent financial condition plus a reduction in pauper aid when townships shouldered part of the burden made it possible to reduce the rate, Mr. Larson said.

Pushes Bone on Down Boy's Throat to Save His Life

Columbus, Ind., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—Cecil Land, 18, was saved from possible death when his father, Harry Land, Elizabethtown, reached into the youth's throat and pushed on down a bone which had lodged there. The boy had become unconscious and his father took him to the home of a neighbor in a wagon, where a doctor was called. Fearing his son would die before help reached him, he forced open his mouth and pushed the bone down with his finger. In doing so, he punctured a tonsil, but aside from a sore throat the youth is not affected.

Capt. Joseph Lacey, Fire Department Vet, Honored

Capt. Joseph E. Lacey, who retired from the fire department last month after 42 years of service, was honored last night by 300 fire officials, firemen and fire fans at Rainbow hall at 4422 North Kedzie avenue. He was presented with a gold badge and other gifts. Former Fire Chief Arthur Seyferlich presided. Capt. Lacey participated in the Iroquois theater, Northwest Malt works and stockyards fires. He lives at 4847 Bernard street. He was known as "Be Quick Joe" for his official activities in duty.

FREED IN EGG THROWING CASE.

Rudolph Frankard, 30 years old, 656 Wrightwood avenue, accused of throwing an egg at a woman, was freed yesterday by Judge Robert E. McMillan in the Town Hall court yesterday on grounds of insufficent evidence. Mrs. Irene Murphy, 517 Deming place, was the complainant.

EXPECT JURY TO INDICT MITCHELL JEWEL ROBBERS

The first matter to be considered by the regular Lake county grand jury when it convenes tomorrow at Waukegan will be the state's demand for indictments against four members of the "42" gang, arrested after a daring robbery at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Mitchell in Lake Forest.

State's Attorney A. V. Smith of Lake county said last night that he expected little difficulty in obtaining the indictments. Arraignment will follow within a week, he said. Mr. Mitchell will be the only one of the party robbed to testify before the grand jury.

The robbery occurred on the night of Nov. 21, when five youths entered the Mitchell home and escaped with jewelry valued at $150,000 after forcing the guests to lie on the floor. Four of the members were captured and all of the loot recovered. Those captured are now held at the Lake county jail.

11 BANDITS SLAIN BY GUARDS LED BY U. S. MARINES

Washington, D. C., Dec. 5.—Eleven bandits have been killed by the American marine led Nicaraguan National Guards during the last week, the navy department announced today. Six were killed on Nov. 28 and five on Dec. 2. Most of the fighting occurred in the department of Lenox.

A patrol led by Sergt. Richard A. Thompson of Bloomingdale, Ind., accounted for five bandits during an engagement on Nov. 28. Another group of five were killed last Wednesday by a detachment led by Gunnery Sergeant Donald MacDonald of Backwoods, Ky.

LAY TWO DEATHS TO PRISON RUM.

Vincennes, Ind., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—Poison alcohol was blamed for two deaths here today. Thomas Parrott, 45, Washington, Ind., died while being taken to jail and G. C. Baker, 40, Lexington, Ky., died soon after being found in a coal chute. Coroner E. J. Small of Knox county reported that the deaths were due to poison alcohol.

This is the seventh and last of the 10,000 ton type cruisers decided upon by Italy after the Washington disarmament conference in 1921. It represents a record in construction speed. Its keel was laid at the beginning of this year.

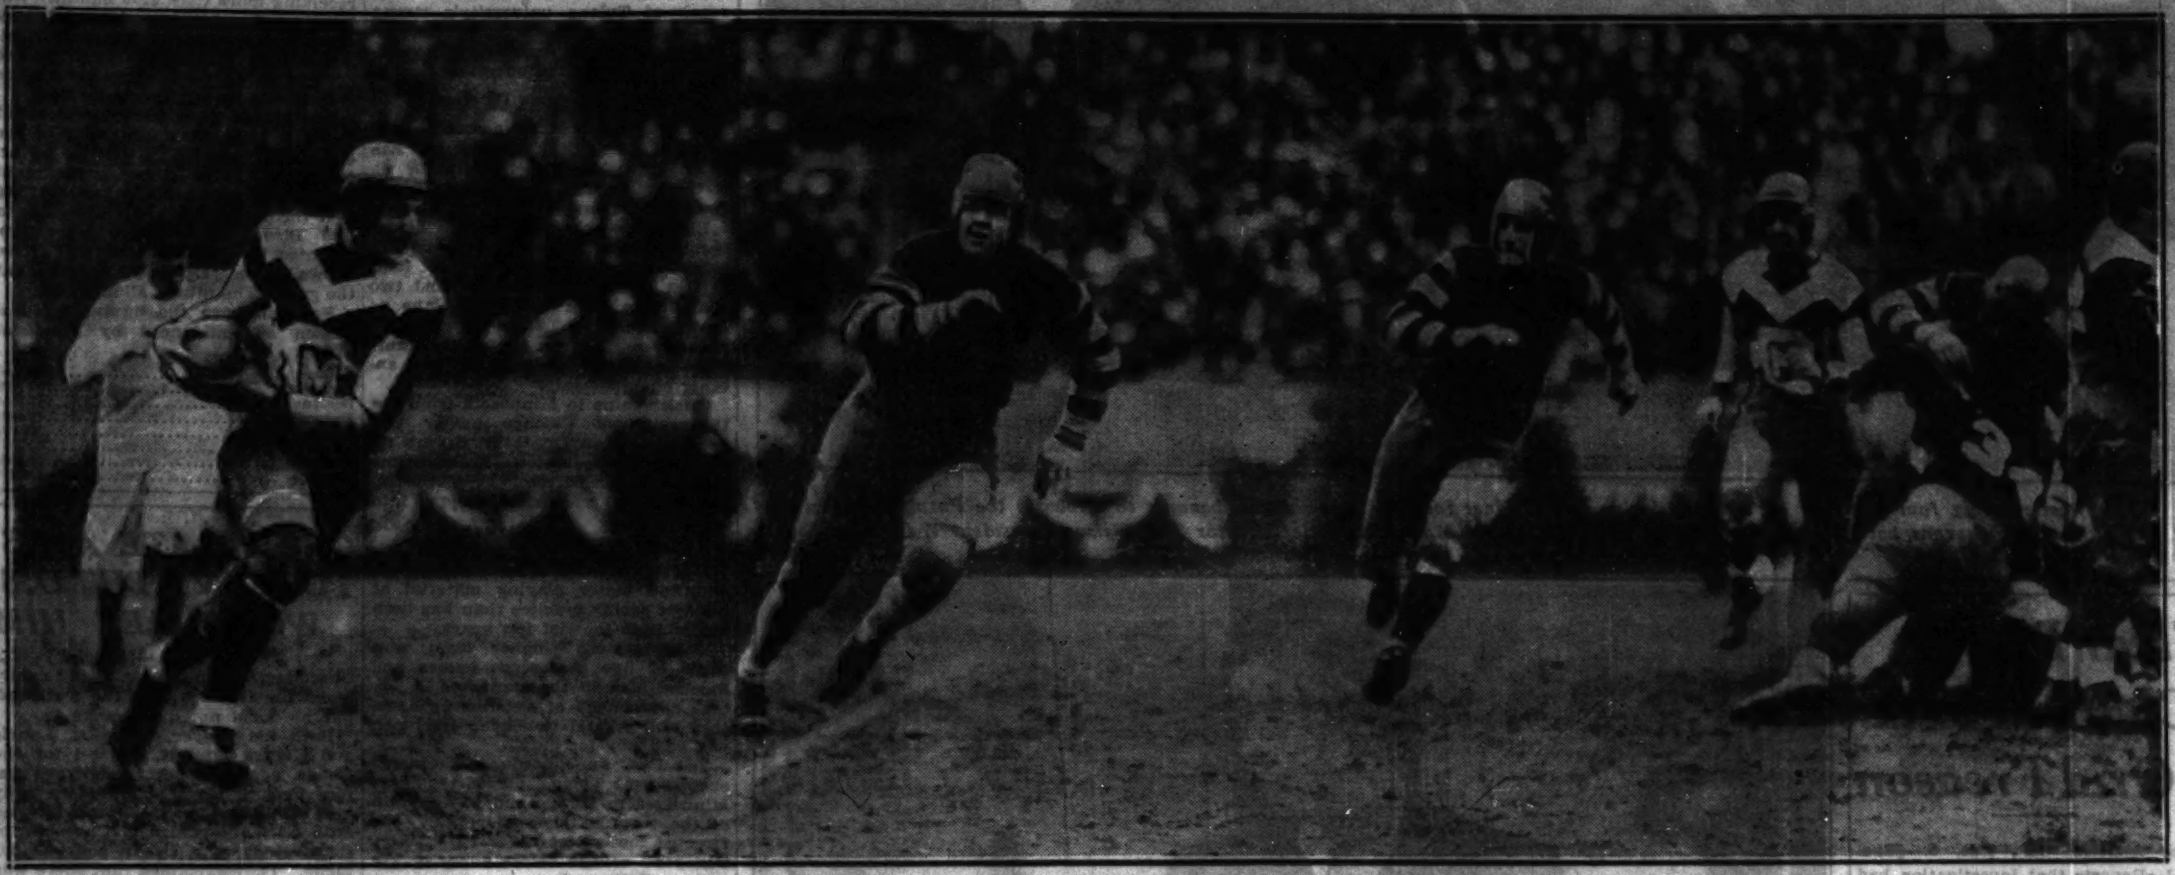
HARRISON OVERWHELMS MT. CARMEL, 44 TO 6

TULANE TURNS BACK WASHINGTON STATE, 28 TO 14

BEFORE THE HORNETS BEGAN TO STING



Frank Burns, left half back on the Mount Carmel High school team, sets out on an end run in the third quarter of the city championship football game with Harrison Tech at Soldiers' field yesterday. The score was 19 to 6 at that point in favor of Harrison, but the west side Hornets had barely started their drive against the Catholic league champions, for they had yet to score another 25 points for a 44 to 6 victory, their eleventh straight of the season. UNBEATEN WAVE GETS SCARE IN OPENING PERIOD

Cougar Line Shows Unexpected Power.

Get Rose Bowl Game

NEW ORLEANS, La., Dec. 5.—(AP)—Dr. Wilbur C. Smith, athletic director of Tulane university, said tonight he had accepted an invitation for Tulane to play Southern California in the Rose Bowl tournament New Year's day.

New Orleans, La., Dec. 5.—(AP)—Tulane's Green Wave neared a national championship here today by defeating the Washington State Cougars, 28 to 14.

Tulane had to fight with all its might to stand off the hard charging Cougars. The crowd of 25,000 Tulane rooters got the fright of their lives when the visitors drove over a touchdown in three minutes after the starting whistle.

Tulane Ties Score.

The score was tied soon, however, after Capt. Jerry Dalrymple had left the bench and taken his post at right end. He rallied his team and five minutes later Tulane went over the goal line, making the score 7 to 7.

In the second quarter, the Green Wave hit its stride and scored two more touchdowns. But in the third quarter Washington State scored again, making the score 21 to 14.

In the last quarter, Capt. Dalrymple made the lead safe by catching Zimmerman's pass from the 25 yard line as he stood behind Washington State's goal line.

Wave's Hardest Game.

It was the hardest game of the season for the Green Wave, which missed Nollie Felts, half back, out of play with an injured ankle.

Each team attacked through the air, Tulane scoring three of its four touchdowns on forward passes. Washington State was not afraid of Tulane's powerful line and hit it often for gains with Tulane retaliating against the stout Cougar line.

Washington State scored the first touchdown on Payne's fumble, which was recovered by Turk Edwards, Washington's massive tackle. In a series of plunges Schroeder, half back, brought it to the two yard line, where on a double back field pass, Quarter Back Dahlen skirted left end for a touchdown and then kicked goal. The game ended with Tulane on Washington State's 12 yard line. Lineup:

TROJANS WIN, 44-7

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 5.—Southern California's football team slashed, pounded, and passed University of Washington to defeat, 44 to 7, in Olympic stadium today.

Ernie Pinckert, the Trojans' great blocking half back; Gaius Shaver, and Orville Mohler, their two scoring backs; End Roy Sparling, and Tackle Ernie Smith of the Trojans' line, and Half Back Merle Hufferd, Tackle Paul Schwegler, and End Dave Nisbet of the Washingtons, waged a battle of individual feats which outshone the monotonous succession of Southern California's seven touchdowns.

Score on 60 Yard Pass.

Shaver whanged through the line three times for touchdowns. Mohler chiseled through the line for three more. The Trojans' seventh touchdown was on a 60 yard pass by Homer Griffith, subquarter back, to Garry Arbelbide.

Washington never stopped trying, and when, in the fourth quarter, the Trojans had a lineup of second, third, and fourth stringers on the field, Sohn of the Huskies threw two long passes to Lenfesty, sub end, one for 46 yards and the next for 21 yards, to net a touchdown.

Two Washington fumbles paved the way to the Trojans' first two touchdowns in the opening quarter. Sparling recovered one fumble on Washington's 37 yard line and in three line plays Shaver crashed over the goal. Less than a minute later, Hufferd of Washington fumbled when hit on his 21 yard line, and Brown recovered. In six plays, three by Shaver, he had scored again.

Go 67 Yards in 11 Plays.

In the second, the Trojans reeled off 67 yards in eleven plays, Mohler finally scoring through a hole which Pinckert had opened after the Huskies held for two downs on their one yard line.

Shaver crowned a 65 yard march in the third period by plunging for his third touchdown. The march included 11 plays.

The Trojans' fifth touchdown was on Griffith's 60 yard pass to Arbelbide.

Yale Beats Holy Cross and Brown to Win Charity Meet

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New Haven, Conn., Dec. 5.—Yale, Brown, Holy Cross, and Dartmouth played three shortweight football games in the Yale bowl this afternoon in which the only score was a touchdown for Yale against Holy Cross in the first preliminary, the other two contests being decided on artistic lines by a committee of judges. Brown beat Dartmouth on style and appearance, clean hands and a neat hair comb counting for so many points and good manners for so many more, and Yale won the final bout from Brown by the same process.

The program was produced to raise money for President Hoover's unemployment relief fund, drawing, at a very generous estimate, no more than 40,000 people who paid a flat rate of $2 each and almost shook down the concrete bowl with the violence of their shudders during three hours sedentary enjoyment of the brisk winter atmosphere. The receipts were not announced.

Brown Makes Passes Good.

Brown startled and almost beat the Yales with a forward passing attack, consisting of a flip from Gilmartin to Marsans. Yale, however, tore off one rushing attack of 27 yards which might have kept on going but for an ill-advised forward pass by Crowley, which was intercepted by Mackesey of Brown and bulled through on another on main strength from Brown's 47 yard line to the 5 yard line.

The Yale side of the stand, containing apparently few undergraduates, for the cheering was scant and scattered, gave one concerted roar for Albie Booth, the Yale captain who lies ill in a sanitarium, just before the final game began.

The elimination of Dartmouth from the final prevented a showdown between two of the leading eastern teams with an old and picturesque rivalry who had played to a dramatic tie earlier in the season. Thus the final game, although well played, was a dramatic blank and the patrons plainly were in a hurry to get going and establish relations with warming refreshments in the roadhouses along the line.

Yale Drive Scores.

Yale's touchdown came at the culmination of a 43 yard march through the Holy Cross team, Crowley going over for the only score of the entire afternoon on a 2 yard plunge. Rotan missed a placement for the extra point.

Chase of Brown made the only scoring attempt for his team, a placement kick from the 30 yard line with the wind at his back, and missed. The Yale-Brown lineup:

YALE.		BROWN.
Hawley	L. E.	Brown
Wilbur	L. T.	Ferrebee
Nichols	L. G.	Skinner
Malin	C.	T. Gilbane
Rotan	R. G.	Capasso
Kilcullen	R. T.	Mackesey
Barres	R. E.	Sawyer
Parker	Q. B.	Marsans
Lassiter	L. H.	Gilmartin
Crowley	R. H.	Chase
Levering	F. B.	W. Gilbane

Look What Tee Does.

The opening kickoff of the Yale-Holy Cross game, from a tee ankle high, sailed high and short to Dud Parker of the Yale back field and the ball was blimping around in the air so long that the return and the tackle constituted a wide open play to contrast with the wedge plays which were blamed for several fatalities and many serious injuries in earlier games.

On the first play after that Yale tried a shoestring formation with Hawley, the Yale left end, skulking on the sideline. He was either undiscovered or disregarded by the Holy Cross defense, however, and Parker further confused the strange situation by passing to Wilbur, the Yale captain elect, who dropped the ball.

Wilbur Recovers Fumble.

O'Connell of Holy Cross fumbled a punt a little later and Wilbur recovered on the Holy Cross 40 yard line. From there Yale drove to the 4 yard line, where Holy Cross came to a stand and recovered the ball on downs. O'Connell punted to midfield and Yale made 15 yards on a pass from Crowley to Lassiter. Crowley's plunging rushed the ball along to a first down at the Holy Cross 7 yard line and he went over the middle of the defense from the two yard line for a touchdown. Rotan missed the kick for the extra point. Score: Yale, 6; Holy Cross, 0.

Holy Cross, having been badly damaged by a fumble earlier in the quarter, now had a compensating break when Colucci, the left end, recovered a fumble on Yale's 15 yard line just before the first period ended. The Crusaders swept along to a first down at Yale's 3 yard line with a forward pass from O'Connell to Murray, but the Holy Cross backs were held to a gain of only a yard and Yale regained the offensive at its two yard line.

Yale got the ball on the Holy Cross 28 yard line in the second period when O'Connell of Holy Cross, punting into the wind, got a carry of only 12 yards on the ball. Holy Cross recovered possession on downs at its 20 yard line, but Yale again took the ball at midfield when Doonan intercepted a pass.

The game ended with Yale's backs plunging through a scattered defense and the Dartmouth team rushed out, closely followed by the Brown varsity.

Fumble Aids Dartmouth.

Brown got a first down on Dartmouth's 10 yard line in the first period on a forward pass thrown from the 40 yard line, Gilmartin to Gilbane. Marsans of Brown was then chased to his 40 yard line and tackled by Mackey as he tried to find a receiver for a pass. He fumbled as he was dropped and Brister of Dartmouth recovered the tumbling ball at midfield.

Unable to gain with its running attack, Dartmouth punted over the goal.

Brown couldn't budge on bucks and Chase punted to Dartmouth's 45 yard line, where R. Morton on the next play, a fake pass, went through a hole in the line for 11 yards.

R. Morton whirled around Brown's right wing for another substantial

This may not look like a touchdown play, but it proved to be Mount Carmel's six points in the charity game with Harrison yesterday. Bunny Durkin (extreme right), Mount Carmel right end, somehow or other took the pass from Bud Gonya, the south siders' quarter back, for his team's only touchdown.

Hanley Invites Six Players to Make Coast Trip

Dick Hanley, Northwestern football coach, who with Andy Kerr of Colgate will coach the eastern team for the annual East-West Shrine game at San Francisco New Year's day, yesterday announced six of the eleven players who would be invited from the middle west.

They are Hewitt, full back and end, Michigan; Purvis, half back, and Miller, center, Purdue; Marvil, tackle, Northwestern; Schwartz, half back, and Hoffman, guard, Notre Dame. Hanley said Reb Russell, Northwestern full back who was injured most of the season and played in only two games, probably would be invited. Kerr will invite eleven eastern players to complete the squad.

The eastern players will gather at Chicago Dec. 19 and will arrive at San Francisco Dec. 22. They will train for a week at Palo Alto, Cal.

ST. MARY'S GIVES S. M. U. ITS FIRST BEATING, 7 TO 2

San Francisco, Cal., Dec. 5.—(AP)—The Mustangs of Southern Methodist university went down to their first defeat of the season before a powerful St. Mary's college comeback in the second half here today, 7 to 2.

The Gaels, bewildered by a passing attack in the first half, came back to win through the air when Toscani scored early in the fourth period. Fletcher converted.

The Mustangs scored two points a few minutes later when Brovelli's kick was blocked and rolled out of bounds behind the goal.

Navy Beats Pennsylvania, 6-0, on Kirn's Long Pass

Philadelphia, Pa., Dec. 5.—(AP)—Navy's midshipmen, after enduring rough treatment throughout the season, rose up in new-found power before 65,000 spectators here today to administer a 6 to 0 beating to Pennsylvania.

The Middies, who meet the Army next Saturday at New York, fought back the Quakers' best efforts for three quarters and then, with only six minutes remaining to play, struck once and decisively through the air to score their first major victory of the year.

Pass Finally Clicks.

It was Bullet Lou Kirn, little half back, who fired the winning shot. For most of three periods he had thrown himself through the Quaker line, making six first downs. Then, apparently realizing these efforts were useless, he decided to pass.

His chance came when Perina, Penn full back, punted out from behind his own goal to the Middies' 45 yard line. Kirn, faking an end run, turned and faded far back. He cut loose with a long pass. Tschirgi, Middie half back, and two Penn defenders took out after it. For a moment it looked like a dead heat, but at the last possible instant Tschirgi leaped and snared the ball.

The two Penn men bumped into one another in the attempt to intercept and Tschirgi easily sprinted the last 30 yards for a touchdown. Elliott missed the try for point.

Penn Rally Fails.

With minutes left to go, Penn took to the air in a wild effort to score, but the Navy batted down all these throws easily and just before the final gun intercepted at midfield.

With the exception of that one Navy broadside, the two teams battled on even terms all the way. The first downs were Navy 8, Pennsylvania 7. Real scoring threats were few.

TENNESSEE WINS, 13-0

New York, Dec. 5.—(AP)—Tennessee defeated New York university's football forces, 13 to 0, today in the first big game of the Metropolitan post-season charity program.

The game attracted 40,864 spectators to Yankee stadium. They contributed $70,597 in gate receipts, the bulk of which, after expenses are deducted, will go to the unemployed of New York City and Knoxville, home town of the volunteers.

Tennessee's victory kept the team's unbeaten record intact for 1931 and marked the conclusion of the career of Gene McEver, half back, who has the distinction of never having tasted defeat in a varsity game. It was New York's third set-back at the hands of an intersectional rival and the most decisive suffered by the Violets this season.

Feathers Runs 65 Yards.

While N. Y. U. was watching and waiting for the celebrated McEver to start going places with the ball, two of his team mates, Beatty Feathers and Herbert Brackett, put on an exhibition of broken field running that put the New Yorkers to rout in the second quarter.

The Tennessee touchdowns came within five minutes of each other. Feathers raced 65 yards for the first score after it appeared he had been stopped. He broke away from his tacklers and got into the clear. Shortly afterward Brackett, substitute quarter back, plucked one of Jim Tanguay's punts out of the air on his own 26 yard line, picked his way to one side of the field, zig-zagged toward the other side, and completed a 74 yard scoring dash with the aid of superb blocking.

GLANGESIA IS 'CHASE WINNER AT GRASSLANDS

Grasslands Downs, Tenn., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—Richard K. Mellon's big gray gelding, Glangesia, hardly exerted himself this afternoon to win the second running of the Grasslands International steeplechase and the honor of having his name engraved on the golden cup donated as a perpetual trophy in 1930 by Alphonso XIII., then king of Spain.

Glangesia's time was 10 minutes 14 3-5 seconds, as compared with 11 minutes 5 seconds required by Alligator at the first running of the race.

Troublemaker Is Second.

Mrs. T. H. Somerville's Troublemaker came in second, Mrs. John Hay Whitney's Saltarello third, Mrs. John Denny's Licorice fourth, and Maitland, third in the inaugural international, fifth. No other horses finished the race. Thirteen started.

Despite rains during the early part of the week, the course was in excellent condition.

Mr. J. E. Ryan, riding the winner, negotiated the four and one-half mile course in faultless style. He never hurried his big gray fencer, but held back until the stiff going had taken all the running out of Saltarello, and then galloped easily on to the finish line.

Accidents to both jockeys and horses which marred the 'chase last year, when Irish Lad and Red Gold were injured and had to be destroyed, were few in the race today. No horse was injured. Mr. Churchill, owner and rider of the eight year old chestnut mare Friskie, was deposited rather heavily on the sixth fence and had to be taken to St. Thomas hospital, where his injuries were declared slight.

Clyburn Has Hectic Ride.

James Clyburn, up on the highly rated Word of Honor, was unhorsed on the fifteenth hedge when the Kentucky gelding collapsed after pecking badly on landing, but regained his mount only to go down again when the horse tried to brush through the stiff cedar of the sixteenth. Word of Honor came on over after his rider and put three feet into the jockey's stomach, but Clyburn was able to walk off.

The pageantry of the parades that preceded the steeplechase was hardly less colorful than the race itself. The patrol judges and Mr. Dirk Van Ingen, clerk of the course, in hunting pink, and members of the Grasslands hunt in the chrome yellow of the Grasslands pack, made a pretty picture as they filed out between the judges' stand and members' enclosure to take their posts about the downs.

The jockeys having been weighed in under the direction of Mr. W. D. Calgy, clerk of scales, the fencers shortly afterwards left the paddock to parade to the post. They were led by Mr. Joseph B. Thomas, master of the Grasslands hounds. Following Mr. Thomas was Stephen Sanford's Bright Boy, two times winner on the short course at Aintree and third three times at the Grand National. He was not entered in the race, however, but was merely being exhibited.

Satarello on Inside.

After Gaston was scratched, Saltarello had the inside post position. Glangezia had fourth position, Troublemaker fifth, Licorice eleventh, and Maitland thirteenth.

The field was quiet but the start

BY WILFRID SMITH.

Harrison Tech, undefeated champion of the Public High School league, whipped Mount Carmel, winner of the Catholic league title, 44 to 6, yesterday afternoon at Soldiers' field. Twenty-five thousand watched the interleague battle for city honors. The receipts, estimated at $15,000, were turned over to the Joint Emergency Relief fund for Cook county.

The victory was number eleven for the Harrison Hornets, who now wait their intersectional battle with Miami High school at Miami, Fla., on Christmas day.

Mount Carmel Forced to Pass.

Outweighed in the line, Mount Carmel was unable to stop Harrison's running attack, which manufactured four touchdowns during an afternoon of long distance running. The same disadvantage in line play forced Mount Carmel to resort to forward passes. While this offense produced a touchdown in the second quarter, three other passes were intercepted by Harrison's men and converted into as many touchdowns. The longest of these, an 88 yard sprint by Steve Remias, which concluded the third quarter, emphasized Harrison's greatest asset, an ability to follow the ball and block out opponents who might otherwise have stopped the runner.

After the first half, which saw Harrison leading safely, 19 to 6, the one sided score detracted from the interest. But Mount Carmel's players, although unable to cope with the speed of Harrison's ball carriers, never ceased trying. Time and again they smashed line plays and knocked down passes only to leave openings which on subsequent plays were converted into long gains.

Pilney Victors' Star.

Harrison's attack, as in all its games, centered around the brilliant performance of Capt. Andy Pilney. Pilney scored twice, running 54 yards for one touchdown and 21 yards for another; threw a pass to Andy Puplis, his teammate at half back, for another score and did more than his share of blocking when others carried the ball.

Eddie Skarda, Tech right end, the key blocker on Pilney's runs, did yeoman service. And it was Skarda who caught a 23 yard pass from Pilney which led to the first touchdown.

In first downs Mount Carmel held an 11 to 7 margin over Harrison, but the Hornets went in for long runs which gave them as many touchdowns as first downs. Bert McKernan was the driving power of Mount Carmel's back field and frequently he hammered the Tech line for gains. Lefty Callahan was another whom Harrison had difficulty stopping, while Bunny Durkin, the kicker, had a splendid afternoon at his specialty.

Nine Plays for Touchdowns.

Harrison needed only nine plays to march 76 yards for its first and only score of the first quarter. A fumble by Remias had given Mount Carmel an opening, but on the next play Frank Burns fumbled and Leonetti recovered for Harrison on his own 24 yard line. Then the drive started.

Pilney raced around left end for 23 yards. Three plunges by Leonetti brought a first down on Carmel's 31 yard strip. Then Pilney dropped back and passed to Skarda, who was tackled on the eight yard line as he caught the ball. Puplis ran right end for two yards and Leonetti hammered through the line for the touchdown on his third plunge. Pilney's place kick for the point was wide.

Harrison got its second touchdown in the next period with seemingly effortless precision. Taking the ball on their own 42 yard line, the Hornets scored in three plays. Two runs by Pilney gained 12 yards, then Andy passed to Puplis who took the ball in full flight on Carmel's 21 yard line and continued to the goal.

Pojman Runs 38 Yards.

Mount Carmel received the kickoff and Don Kelly returned the ball to

NORTHWESTERN NAMES RENTNER 1932 CAPTAIN

Alumni Honor Wildcats at Annual Banquet.

Ernest [Pug] Rentner, star half back on Northwestern university's football team, was elected captain of the 1932 team at the annual football banquet given by the Northwestern club of Chicago at the Stevens hotel last night. Fifteen hundred alumni were present to pay their respects to the Wildcat team, which for the second time in two years had tied for the Western Conference football championship.

Rentner, whose running and passing played a major rôle in Northwestern's gridiron successes during the last season, hails from Joliet, Ill. He won a regular position in the Wildcat back field as a sophomore two years ago. In his first year he gained recognition as one of the outstanding passers of the country. During the season just closed he widened his scope of activity to reeling off long runs, scoring seven touchdowns during the year on runs ranging from 14 to 95 yards.

Cermak, Insull Attend.

Mayor Cermak and Samuel Insull Jr., chairman of the joint emergency relief fund committee, attended the banquet. Both congratulated the football team for its contributions to the cause of charity. Mayor Cermak presented to Capt. Dal Marvil, representing the team, an insignia commemorating the team for the part it played in raising funds for unemployment relief.

A resolution from the Northwestern club of Chicago also was presented to the coaching staff and to the team for its efforts in behalf of charity. The resolution follows:

"To the coaches and players of the 1931 football team of Northwestern university:

"Whereas, you have contributed in an unprecedented manner to the cause of charity, having played two football games through which there has been given to charity the sum of $175,000 which is larger than that given by any other university of the country,

Mention Title Sacrifice.

"And whereas, in a season with a very difficult schedule, you have sacrificed an undisputed Big Ten championship in the interest of charity,

"We present to you at this time, on behalf of the general alumni association of Northwestern university, this expression of our appreciation, esteem and admiration."

Coach Noble Kizer of Purdue, whose team shared the championship with Northwestern and Michigan, was present as a guest of the alumni club. Among the officers of the university at the speakers' table were President Walter Dill Scott; Arthur Andersen, president of the board of trustees; William A. Dyche, business manager; Prof. O. F. Long, chairman of the faculty committee on athletics, and Prof. Walter K. Smart, vice chairman of the faculty committee.

Twenty-eight varsity letters were awarded to members of the team. This group also received gold footballs, emblematic of its share of the Big Ten championship. Jack Chevigny Escapes Unhurt in Auto Crash

Evanston's police force started searching last night for Jack Chevigny, junior football coach at Notre Dame university, after his automobile had been found overturned on Calvary beach, opposite South boulevard. He was found at a dance in the Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity house, 1856 Sheridan road.

"I was driving along when something went drong with the steering gear and the car tumbled off the wall onto the beach," he explained. "The only hurt I suffered was a little bruis

Clear Player Charged with Grid Treason

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—Reports that investigation had been conducted into alleged disloyalty of William [Bill] Hawkins, substitute center on the University of Southern California football team, were confirmed by Coach Howard Jones while the Trojans were on the field playing against Washington in Olympic stadium here today.

Jones said: "It is true that an investigation was conducted after we had heard assertions that Hawkins was betraying Trojan secrets to Notre Dame, but the investigation proved that the reports were groundless."

Mother Demands Apology.

Jones made his statement as a result of a report published in the Los Angeles Express today to the effect that Hawkins had been taken into custody by private detectives early in the week before the Notre Dame game and had been held as a voluntary prisoner in a cottage in isolated Topanga canyon. According to the Express' story, Hawkins' mother, Mrs. Thomas P. Finn, had demanded a public apology from Dr. Rufus von Kleinsmid, president of the university. Jones was said to have apologized to the youth in the presence of the Trojan team.

Jones explained today that a group of alumni of the university had given reports to the team, not to the coach himself, that Hawkins was releasing information regarding Trojan plays.

Hawkins heard of this, Jones said, and asked for a full investigation, which was conducted, and Hawkins was exonerated.

Incident Closed—Jones.

"I have not apologized to the boy," Jones said, "either privately or publicly, for I see no reason to do so. I did not start the rumor nor ask the investigation. He asked for it himself, and was cleared. It is unfortunate that the whole thing had to happen."

Coach Jones called Hawkins off the bench to send him into the Washington game late in the second half this afternoon in order to show his confidence in the player. Hawkins demurred, telling the coach he would rather not play.

"Not for any reason connected with that talk about me," Hawkins said. "But if I play a few minutes today I will lose a whole year's eligibility, for I have not played in any game this year."

Injured Before Irish Game.

Hawkins attended a conference in the dressing rooms after the game, where the situation involving him was freely discussed. Present were Jones, Assistant Coaches Clif Herd, Sam Berry, Willis O. Hunter, director of athletics, and newspaper men.

Jones explained that Hawkins was injured about 10 days before the contest with Notre Dame, and spent several days in the hospital. Signals for Notre Dame were being practiced when Hawkins returned.

"A number of players reported that Hawkins had asked them what men on the Notre Dame team they were to guard on forward pass defense," said Jones, "and he displayed considerable interest in the new formations. A suspicion arose, which has since been removed, that he might be disloyal."

Suggests Guard for Him.

Gordon Campbell, assistant coach and only member of the coaching staff not at the conference, "suggested" to Hawkins that he submit to a guard. Hawkins said:

"Campbell called John Pyles, a private detective, and then it was suggested I spend the next few days in a cabin in Topanga canyon. I took the detectives out to my home and after the situation was discussed with my parents I agreed to the plan. I wasn't held prisoner exactly. President Von Kleinsmid told me I was at liberty to leave any time I wanted to."

Hawkins explained that he had ambitions to become a football coach when he left college and for that reason had kept diagrams of various plays. When he was first suspected at U. S. C. he had diagrams of various plays that were used in the Stanford-U. S. C. game.

In the WAKE of the NEWS

FOOTBALL IN 1931.

FOOTBALL for the season of 1931 is over except for a few sporadic combats and those New Year's holiday games on the Pacific coast. Has it or has it not been a success? Wake opinion is that, considering the depression, football has been a tremendous success.

However much that opinion may vary from that of the Carnegie Foundation, we adhere to our opinion. Attendance figures, in the aggregate, probably will suffer by comparison with 1930. If they do, they will show less decrease than any other line of business endeavor—and we do not claim that college football is not a business endeavor in the amusement field.

Here in the middle west there was a smaller gross attendance during the regular schedule. With post-season charity games added, there is not much difference. Our observation has been that where traveling for the spectators was involved, including hotel and railroad expense, fewer people took the rubber band off their emaciated bank rolls. Even at the Southern California-Notre Dame affair, long known as a standout combat, Notre Dame's stadium capacity of 55,000 was not quite filled. Yet 52,000, at $5 per person, is a pretty fair sized crowd.

Another factor operated against conference crowds. At the start, Northwestern, Michigan, and Purdue were picked as likely to go through the season undefeated. In early games Michigan caught a tartar in Ohio State and Purdue in Wisconsin. Naturally that disappointed their partisans. By the middle of the season no eleven except Northwestern had a clear record.

The Wake therefore feels that whatever attendance decrease was recorded was due to business and other conditions—not to any waning popularity of college sport. This opinion, we think, will be justified during the first season of business normalcy.

Smoke.

Smoke, thin and gray and odorous,
Lifts its pallid self to wind and sky.
Its misty tendrils wind along the air,
Waiting for the withered year to die.

Light autumn leaves crisp into smoke,
Winy skies smoke to an ash gray;
And summer dreams, grown empty,
flare and dull,
Then, smokelike, drift away.

BIERMAN NAMED FOOTBALL COACH AT MINNESOTA

Quits Tulane to Return to Alma Mater.

Minneapolis, Minn., Dec. 5.—(AP)—Minnesota's future campaigns for western conference football championships were placed under the guardianship of B. W. [Bennie] Bierman today.

Bierman, returning to the institution whose last Big Ten title team he captained in 1915, has been head coach of Tulane university's strong squads since 1927.

His appointment, with faculty ranking of professor, is effective Jan. 1.

Crisler Stays as Director.

As head coach of Minnesota he succeeds H. O. [Fritz] Crisler, who has handled football and the athletic directorship as well. Crisler remains in the latter capacity.

Bierman coached at Montana before becoming assistant coach at Tulane in 1923. In 1925 he took charge of football at Mississippi A. & M. and two years later went back to Tulane as head coach. His Tulane elevens have not lost a southern conference game since 1928, and this year annexed another championship.

Crisler came to Minnesota from the University of Chicago nearly two years ago when Dr. C. W. Spears resigned to go to Oregon. A short time later Athletic Director F. W. Luehring resigned and Crisler stepped into a dual role.

Good Material for Bierman.

Bierman, in the opinion of coaches, will find better playing material at his first spring practice than has been available in the last few years.

This season's Gopher team won three of five conference games and finished fifth in the standing. A liberal assortment of veterans will return and several promising freshmen will be ready for duty.

Ted Cox, announced as Bierman's successor at Tulane, played tackle at Minnesota in 1922-24 and was captain of the team in his senior year. He directed football at River Falls, Wis., Teachers' college before going to Tulane as line coach.

Depression Hits 1931 Attendance in Three Eye League

Decatur, Ill., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—Attendance figures for the 1931 season released here today by L. J. Wylie, president of the Three Eye league, show that the league had its worst season in modern history in the matter of patronage. Danville had a new all time low record for the league, only 15,378 patrons paying their way in to see the Veterans perform.

Prompted by these figures, Three Eye heads enacted new legislation in their meeting at West Baden, calculated to keep the league on a sound financial basis. Under the new rules no man will be paid more than $250 a month, while the aggregate monthly salary limit is $3,500, a reduction of $250 monthly for the first time in the history of the league.

Violation of these rules will carry a penalty. Any player found to be receiving more than $250 monthly will become a free agent, and no club may accept an optioned player whose salary is over the league limit. A fine of $200 is to be levied against the club exceeding the aggregate limit.

The league as a whole drew about 15,000 less than last year, five of the eight clubs showing a decline in attendance. Terre Haute, with night baseball, showed an increase of 12,000 over the daylight figure of 1930. Peoria and Bloomington, which were represented by slightly better ball clubs, showed a corresponding increase at the gate. The others all slumped.

Following are the figures for last season as announced by President Wylie:

Quincy	62,153
Springfield	51,660
Decatur	45,244
Evansville	42,092
Peoria	39,191
Bloomington	31,261
Terre Haute	28,781
Danville	15,378

CHOCOLATE ASKS TO LEAVE, BUT U.S. WON'T LET HIM

New York, Dec. 5.—[Special.]—Kid Chocolate, Cuban fighter, tried to start home for Havana over the week-end, but he could not quite make it.

Both his lawyer, Peter A. Laurie and Guerra Everett, counsel for the Cuban consul general, appeared before Federal Marshal Mulligan today and said the Cuban government had authorized the return of Chocolate in the custody of a Cuban consular attaché. They explained that there was a ship all ready to sail for Cuba, where the boxer is scheduled to face an indictment charging the abduction of a 17 year old girl and they agreed he should be aboard it, if possible.

Chocolate, confined in the federal house of detention here since Tuesday, was anxious to return home and face the charge at once, they said. But Marshal Mulligan ruled that he'd have to await the arrival of Cuban police with an extradition warrant, all supposed to be on their way here.

LETOURNER AND GUIMBRETIERE WIN BIKE RACE

Steal Lap in Final Hour at New York.

New York, Dec. 5.—[Special.]—Alfred Letourner and Marcel Guimbretiere, sturdy little French Red Devil team, won the 51st international six day bicycle race, which ended here tonight before 15,000 in Madison Square Garden.

It was their second successive triumph here. They won the race last March. In this race they covered 2,646 miles 9 laps, just one lap short of 2,647 miles, in the six days' riding. Fresh and overjoyed, the French riding mates made a single circuit of the track after the final gun barked its finishing signal, and were greeted by cheers which rocked the building.

To score their victory, Letourner and Guimbretiere accomplished the unusual feat of stealing a lap in the last hour of riding. In the 11th and 12th miles of the 28 miles covered in the final hour, the scarlet jerseyed riders sped away from the field, to break a three cornered deadlock for the lead and win the race by a margin of a circuit. They had the commanding aggregate of 647 points at the finish, but their lap advantage made this mathematical computation only of minor significance.

Georges Coupry and Michel Pecquex, youthful French cyclists, pedaled home in second position. It is believed to be the first time in history that French teams finished first and second in a race.

The final standings:

Team.	Miles.	Laps.	Pts.

What football players do in the winter time. They throw snowballs instead of forward passes. These Notre Dame players seem to enjoy the new pastime. PACKERS MEET BEARS TODAY IN QUEST OF TITLE

Victory Means Third Pro Crown for Green Bay.

How They'll Line Up

BEARS.		PACKERS.

Pearson	C.	Barrager
Buckler	R. G.	Comstock

Tackwell	R. E.	Nash
Brumbaugh	Q. B.	Dunn
R. Grange	L. H.	Bruder
Lintzenich	R. H.	Blood
Nagurski	F. B.	Molenda

Twenty-three football players and a delegation of fans from Green Bay are in Chicago today to see the Green Bay Packers 23d battle with the Bears at Wrigley field. Kickoff will be at 2 p. m.

In that squad of players are Johnny Blood, whose 72 points tops the National league scorers; Red Dunn, who has kicked 15 points after touchdown to tie the league record this year; Verne Lewellen, veteran, whose 65 yard punt from behind his goal line staved off a possible tie with Brooklyn last Sunday; and Al Michalske, who intercepted a pass and ran 72 yards to beat the Bears, 6 to 2, here Nov. 1.

Packer Victory Means Title.

The 2,000 Wisconsin fans who are expected to accompany the Packers hope to see them clinch their third straight National professional title. The Bears, although they have triumphed only once in the last ten games with Green Bay, think they can score an upset, leaving the championship in the balance until the Packers play Portsmouth Dec. 13.

Of the new men on the Packer roster, Hank Bruder of Northwestern and Russ Saunders of Southern California, have achieved marked success and are sure to see action in the back field.

The Bears are much stronger than they were in the other Green Bay games this season, having added Herb Joesting and Tackwell.

Grange Wants To Get Even.

Red Grange will be a target as usual, but he is used to that. He has a private grievance, however, against the Packers, for they stopped him the only time he was really stopped in 11 starts this season in that 7 to 0 defeat at Green Bay, Sept. 27.

The Bears, with Nagurski and Joesting in top form, are sure to employ a driving game. Punting of a spectacular nature is likely to figure in the game, but Joe Lintzenich and Dick Nesbitt are capable of holding their own with anything the Wisconsin team can offer.

Bert Pearson will start at center, but no doubt will be relieved some time during the game by Trafton who may get in opposite Earpe of the Packers in a continuation of the duel that has been waged for 10 years, the oldest private quarrel in the game.

NEBRASKA WINS, 20 TO 7, IN LAST QUARTER RALLY

Denver, Colo., Dec. 5.—(AP)—Scoring three touchdowns in the last period, the University of Nebraska, Big Six champion, defeated the Colorado Aggies, 20 to 7, in a charity game here today.

The Aggies scored in the first period after completing two long passes. The Huskers scored early in the fourth quarter on a 27 yard drive after Sauer had placed a punt out of bounds on the Aggies' one yard line. The second Nebraska touchdown came after recovery of a fumble on the Aggies' 26 yard mark. Brown ended the scoring with an 82 yard return of a punt in the closing minutes of the game.

GRAND RAPIDS WANTS TOLEDO'S A. A. FRANCHISE

Grand Rapids, Mich., Dec. 5.—(AP)—E. W. Dickerson, Grand Rapids sports promoter, announced today that he and other interests here are negotiating for the purchase of the American association franchise of the Toledo baseball club.

Dickerson said the Grand Rapids group would not be interested in joining the reorganized Central league.

The Toledo club would be brought to Grand Rapids if he is successful in negotiating the purchase, Dickerson said. He was president of the Western league in 1917.

SHAMROCKS BACK HOME TONIGHT TO MEET PLA-MORS

Kansas City Defense to Test Chicagoans.

The Shamrocks, leaders in the American Hockey league race, make their second home appearance of the season against the Kansas City Pla-Mores at the Chicago Stadium tonight.

The Pla-Mors finished second in the American league last year and first the year before. In addition to an outstanding defense they bring such attacking stars as Pete Mitchell, picked for two years as the league's most valuable player; Wasp Campbell, center; Mike Goodman, and Red Gorman and Pat Patterson, two of the best looking youngsters in the rookie class.

Babe Dye night will be celebrated by the Shamrock manager's friends, who will attend in a party. Entertainment between periods will include fancy skating by Elsie Dersken, German stunt skater.

Levine to Guard Goal.

The Pla-Mor defense last year held opposition to 63 goals, 27 points less than the next lowest record. A new goalkeeper seems not to have altered the Pla-Mor stinginess a bit. Porky Levine, sent to Kansas City when he failed to shove Mike Karakas out of the Shamrock net in training at Hamilton, Ont., in his first five games with the Pla-Mors was scored on but five times.

Karakas, the youngest member of the youngest team in the American league, is the only American born goalie in the circuit and Levine is distinguished as the only Hebrew goalkeeper in organized hockey.

The Pla-Mors will open the game with Campbell at center and the team's two fastest skaters, Joe McCormick and Goodman, at the wings. Bert McLeod and Johnny McKinnon, late of Philadelphia, will be the defense men.

Calgary Line to Start.

McFadyen, MacKenzie, and O'Neill, the line from Calgary, will be on the firing front for the Shamrocks at the start. In the early games these three have proved the Shamrocks' high scoring trio. McFadyen's passing has been a particular feature.

The "kid" line of Prelesnik, Riley, and Wiseman has not been far behind. With special assistance from Pewee Wiseman, Prelesnik has marked up four goals in his first eight games.

At defense Headley and Buswell will probably start and will alternate with Bouncer Taylor and Eddie Osler.

HAWKS CALL AT N. Y. HOSPITAL TO VISIT BOSTROM

New York, Dec. 5.—[Special.]—Headed by Coach Emil Iverson, the Chicago Blackhawks hockey squad visited their teammate, Helge Bostrom, Hawk defense man, who was severely injured during the New York Rangers game on Nov. 24, at the Polyclinic hospital here today. They were cheered by the information given by the attending physician, who said Bostrom probably would be able to take his place in the Hawks lineup by Feb. 1. He will be taken to Chicago next Wednesday by Trainer Frank Bowman.

The Chicago team will meet the New York Americans at Madison Square Garden tomorrow night in the teams' first clash of the season on New York ice.

Haubrich, Tackle and Kicker, Voted Ohio's Most Valuable

Columbus, O., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—The Ohio State university football regulars went into the line this year to select their nominee for the annual CHICAGO TRIBUNE most valuable player award.

Robert Carl Haubrich, for three years a stalwart in the forward wall at right tackle, was honored by his teammates as the most valuable player to his team during the last season.

Haubrich succeeds Wesley Eugene Fesler, an end who last year won THE TRIBUNE trophy.

A glimpse into the record book shows why the Ohio tackle, who by his own admittance "would rather play football than eat," won the admiration of his mates during the last year.

Plays 448 Minutes.

Haubrich did most of the Ohio punting early in the season and was given the duty of place kicking all points after touchdowns as well as kicking off.

In the nine games on the schedule Haubrich played a total of 448 minutes out of a possible 540. This included only 28 minutes in the first game of the season against the University of Cincinnati.

While he was an excellent player on defense, Haubrich shone on the offense.

"It's lots more fun making gains than being pushed back by the opposing team, but at the same time there's a lot more fun in making a tackle than there is in blocking out an opponent," he says.

It was Haubrich's aggressiveness that led to the majority of the Ohio State victories over the year, especially against Michigan, Indiana and Wisconsin.

Kicks 17 Extra Points.

Out of 21 chances to kick goals after touchdown, Haubrich made the remarkable total of 17, taking his place with the high scorers on the Buckeye team.

"I wouldn't trade my football career and experience for anything in the world," Haubrich has said.

And he meant just that.

No professional sports for him. Football, baseball, basketball and track all belong to college, he believes.

His plans for the future?

After he is graduated from Ohio State in June at the age of 21, he will enter Duke University's Medical college at Durham, N. C., where he will "really study" and fit himself for the duties of an army surgeon.

Father Is Colonel.

The army influence comes through his father, who is Col. Robert C. Haubrich of the 166th Ohio infantry. Col. Haubrich, incidentally, was in charge of the Ohio penitentiary following the tragic fire almost two years ago.

Bob has been in the Ohio National Guard for six years and recently was promoted to the rank of sergeant.

Haubrich has worked his way through college by spending his summers in charge of Columbus recreational centers. After football season he finds employment in West Market hall as a recreational director. He is a member of Phi Gamma Delta fraternity.

The most valuable Buckeye player is six feet tall, weighs 195 and was born in Columbus, Oct. 8, 1910.

North High school in Columbus was Haubrich's prep school. For three years he was a member of that school's championship football teams as well as a member of the basketball and baseball teams.

Lists Toughest Opponents.

At Ohio State Haubrich's record is one of the most outstanding in the athletic files. For three years he played in every game but two—and these were both with Northwestern.

A summary of Haubrich's likes and dislikes can best be told by the following:

His greatest thrill in a football game came in the Pittsburgh game two years ago when the Panthers were held on the one foot line after four downs had been wasted without gain—two of which plays were directed at him; Northwestern should have been defeated this year; anybody can kick a football if they practice long enough; outstanding players met by him in his three years of competition are Rentner, Northwestern; Munn, Minnesota; Nusspickel, Illinois; Berry, Illinois; Underwood, Navy; Gantenbein, Wisconsin; Montgomery, Pitt and Kabat, Wisconsin.

Haubrich's record for 1931 is:

	Time in minutes.	Pts. after touchdown.
Cincinnati	28	5
Vanderbilt	60	3
Michigan	41	1
Northwestern	56	0
Indiana	53	1
Navy	54	2
Wisconsin	53	0
Illinois	43	4
Minnesota	60	1
Total	448	17 [out of 21]

Others Get Votes.

While at Ohio State, Haubrich has played only on the football team, although he was a member of the Phi Gamma Delta intramural recreation ball and basketball teams, the latter winner of the university championship last year.

Other Ohio State players which received notes in the valuable player election were Carl Cramer, sophomore quarter back; Michael Vuchinich, sophomore full back; Joseph Gailus, sophomore guard; Capt. Stuart Holcomb, senior half back, and Richard Smith, junior center.

Linemen Lead in Nominations for Tribune Trophy

The work of football linemen, although sometimes not appreciated by the spectators, is recognized by their teammates, according to the selections of the eight teams in the Big Ten which thus far have nominated their most valuable players in the race for THE TRIBUNE trophy.

Five of the squads voted that linemen had done most for the success of the team and a sixth, Michigan, named William Hewitt, who alternated between end and the backfield.

Selections of the remaining conference elevens, Minnesota and Wisconsin, will be announced this week. Then the board of award, composed of ten coaches, ten officials, Maj. John Griffiths, Big Ten commissioner, and Harvey Woodruff and Wilfrid Smith of THE TRIBUNE will pick the trophy winner from the list of nominations.

The trophy never has been awarded to a player from Purdue, Minnesota, or Wisconsin. One may win this year, but there is no obligation to members of the board of award to pass around the honor. Ohio State, school of Wesley Fesler, 1930 winner, has an equal chance to score again this season.

These men have been nominated for the board's consideration:

Northwestern—Paul Engebretsen, guard and tackle.
Iowa—Oliver Sansen, full back.
Purdue—James Purvis, half back.
Michigan—William Hewitt, back and end.
Indiana—Joe Zeller, guard.
Chicago—Sam Horwitz, guard.
Ohio State—Robert Haubrich, tackle.
Illinois—Fred Frink, end.

Canadiens Trim Detroit Falcons, 4 to 0.

TORONTO, Ont., Dec. 5.—(AP)—The Toronto Maple Leafs won a raggedly played National Hockey league game here tonight from the Montreal Maroons, 4 to 0.

Toronto stepped into a two-goal lead in the first period. Levinsky carried the puck down, was crowded into the corner, then Cotton grabbed it and passed to Blair, who beat Norm Smith with a back-handed shot. Jackson added another with a nice solo dash.

Darragh added another in the second period, the other goal of the middle session on a pass from Horner to make the count three to nothing. Primeau completed the rout in the third period with a brilliant play after taking a pass from Jackson. Lineup:

The Flying Frenchmen scored three goals in the first period, two of them when the Falcons were a man shy on penalties. Howie Morenz scored the other on a fast individual play and sank the final counter in the third period on a pass from George Mantha.

New Form of Insurance Protection Sweeping Country

Stated Accidents and Sickness Covered at a Cost of Only $10 a Year

Newark, N. J.—A new type of limited protection, covering both sickness and accident, has been announced by The North American Accident Insurance Company (of Chicago), with offices at 190 Wallach Bldg., Newark, New Jersey. This amazing policy, which costs less than 3c a day, is meeting with enthusiastic acclaim from men and women throughout the country.

This unique policy costs but $10 a year. Men and women between the ages of 16 and 70 are eligible. No medical examination is required, and there are no additional assessments of any kind. The sum of $10,000 is paid for stated accidental death, $10,000 for loss of hands, feet or eyesight, and $25.00 weekly benefit for stated accidents or sickness. Doctors' bills, hospital benefit, emergency benefit and other liberal features to help in time of need—all clearly shown in policy.

This is a simple and understandable policy—without complicated or misleading clauses. You know exactly what every word means—and every word means exactly what it says. Thousands of men and women have already taken advantage of this inexpensive insurance protection.

No one should neglect protecting themselves and family now that it has been made so reasonable. The daily newspapers are filled with hundreds of accounts of sudden tragedies and misfortunes. Floods, fires, epidemics and violent storms take a startling toll of human life and limb. Trains and the ever-increasing automobiles, with their hurrying to and fro, are growing more dangerous every day. It is unwise to gamble with fate when the next moment may bring disaster.

The North American Accident Insurance Company is the largest and oldest exclusive Health and Accident Insurance Company in America. Under the direct supervision of 48 state insurance departments. Over $17,000,000 has been paid out in claims.

Men and women who are interested in this new form of insurance should write a letter or post card for Free Booklet entitled "Cash or Sympathy." There is no obligation involved. Write to North American Accident Insurance Co., 190 Wallach Bldg., Newark, N. J.—Adv.

BIG 10 COACHES HEAR WARNINGS ON PROSELYTING

Baseball, Mat Schedules Are Approved.

Drafting of schedules for winter and spring sports and a joint session of the faculty committee and athletic directors concluded the two day Big Ten conference meeting at the Hotel Sherman yesterday.

The directors were summoned before the faculty committee for a round table discussion of business conditions and the customary review of the proselyting reasons. Warnings against recruiting and the favoring of athletes over other students in scholastic and material matters formed the major part of the discussion. No charges against any member of the conference were presented.

Brundage Discusses Olympics.

Avery Brundage, president of the A. A. U., addressed the joint meeting in the afternoon on amateurism and the coming Olympic games, in which the conference, with its large number of athletes, is expected to play a major part.

Baseball coaches encountered the customary yearly obstacles in framing their schedules for the spring championship campaign, finding it difficult to arrange a full card in conformance with the new economical policies adopted throughout the conference. As a result Iowa wound up with only seven games.

Iowa Star Ruled Out.

Iowa also came before the eligibility committee again in the only case of debarment reported by this body. Edward Break, basketball guard, was declared ineligible. Break transferred from Illinois, where he had been ruled disqualified for varsity competition because of a minor infraction of eligibility rules.

Purdue was not represented at the meeting of wrestling coaches and its schedule, like that of Michigan, was not filed with the commissioner's office. The Michigan representative, Coach Franklin Cappon, left before the schedules were completed.

Light Heavies Check In for Title Tourney

All ten of the principals in the first round of the National Boxing association's light heavyweight championship tournament show at Chicago Stadium on Friday night will be in Chicago by Wednesday. The Illinois athletic commission waived its rule compelling windup boxers to be in Chicago five days in advance of the show.

Dave Maier, who meets Roy Williams in one of the five eight round bouts, is scheduled to arrive from Milwaukee tomorrow, and Williams will reach Chicago from Cincinnati Wednesday. Billy Jones of Philadelphia will be here Tuesday and his foe, Owen Phelps, is already in town. Harry Ebbets of Brooklyn an' Willie Oster, who fight in the third bout, have been here for several days. Baxter Calmes, of Tulsa, Okla., is in Chicago and his opponent, Mario Campi of New York, arrives Tuesday. Contestants in the fifth bout, Clyde Chastain and Umberto Curi, also reach the loop Tuesday.

Yessir, It's Unusual.

The tournament, drawing more than [illegible] into the battle for the light heavyweight title, is one of the most unusual ever held by professionals. The strange thing about it is that the boxers in the early round bouts will get little money for their efforts, but are willing to fight for a chance at the title.

Under the rules of the tournament the boxers in the opening rounds share 40 per cent of the gate receipts on an equal basis. The National Boxing association had planned to stage four 10 round bouts on each card, thus using eight fighters and giving each 5 per cent. The entry list was so large it became necessary to use more boxers on each program, so there will be five bouts of eight rounds each and each fighter gets only 4 per cent.

Fans who know their boxers will hardly believe that Baxter Calmes is fighting Mario Campi at that figure, or that Clyde Chastain is being paid so little for facing Umberto Curi, or that Harry Ebbets would box Willie Oster at such terms. All of them are in, however, and that's all they will receive.

Later Bouts Receive More.

Here, however, is what might be termed the catch. The lads are not so much interested in what they will get out of these first round matches as to what the return will be with each victory. When the tournament gets into the later rounds and the customers become more numerous and the fighters' cut becomes higher, with fewer to share it, the returns will sound like the good old days before the so-called depression to most of them.

The finalists will split 50 per cent of the gate.

Bud Saltis, Chicago middleweight, has a chance to defeat Frankie Battaglia of Winnipeg, Canada, when they meet in the ten round windup of the show at White City tomorrow. Saltis is a good right hand hitter, and if he gets inside of Battaglia's long left hook may cause considerable damage.

Roy Trumble of Chicago leaves tomorrow for Indianapolis, where he battles Johnny Burns Tuesday. In a bout on the southwest side last summer they fought a draw.

Jack Berg's opponent at London, Eng., Dec. 14 will be Cliff Locatelli of Italy. Berg, who was knocked out by Champion Tony Canzoneri in a lightweight title contest here, left New York several weeks ago after being beaten by Canzoneri the second time.

Grand Rapids Holds Cards to 7 to 7 Tie

Grand Rapids, Mich., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—The Grand Rapids Maroons held the Chicago Cardinals of the National Professional league to a 7 to 7 tie on an ice caked field before 4,000 shivering fans here this afternoon.

The Cardinals, who had threatened to score three times in the first half, shoved over a touchdown in the third quarter when Nevers passed to Shaw substituting for Rogge, and Shaw ran 50 yards for a touchdown. Nevers place kicked for the extra point.

Jack Wheeler, former Michigan star, caught one of Nevers' punts in the fourth quarter and galloped to the Cardinals' 11 yard line before he was run out of bounds by Nevers. Rocky Parsaca, former Detroit university quarter back, passed to Boelene, substituting for Witzel, who was downed a yard from the Cardinals' goal. On the fourth down Wheeler slipped over the line, but fumbled, only to have Unseld recover for a touchdown. Parsaca's drop kick tied the count.

The Cardinals reached the Maroons' 3 yard line on another occasion, only to lose the ball on a fumble. The Maroons were on the Cards' 20 yard mark at the close of the first half after completing a pass from Parsaca to Wilson. The Cardinals held a slight edge in first downs and yards from scrimmage. MAJOR LEAGUE OWNERS INVADE CHICAGO TUESDAY

Deals Are Predicted at Annual Sessions.

BY EDWARD BURNS.

The National and the American baseball leagues will hold their annual meetings here Tuesday and Wednesday and on Thursday will conduct a joint meeting. The sessions will be held at the Congress hotel.

The idea of having all the major meetings here is a departure from the regular practice, the by-laws of the National league providing that its annual meetings be held in New York. The routine was altered this year at the request of Commissioner K. M. Landis.

Important Action Predicted.

Advance information has it that business of more than usual interest to the fans will be transacted. While stating that they expect weighty sessions, major officials in attendance at the minor league meeting in West Baden refused to discuss the character of the issues they expect to come up for consideration.

It is known, however, that various contentions relative to the radio broadcasting of major league games will come up for action, or at least spirited comment.

Another matter which was considered likely to receive attention was the proposition to change the specifications of the American league ball to those tried out successfully by the National league last season.

No Limit on Salaries.

There will be no player salary limit established, this being contrary to long established major league policy. It is predicted, however, that the majority of owners will revise their salary schedules downward. There will be a faction opposing wholesale cuts, though. Col. Jake Ruppert, owner of the Yankees, the highest salaried team in baseball, has taken a stand against any formal reductions, though he has indicated that Babe Ruth has received his last $80,000 contract.

The lobby flesh marts probably will develop more of interest to the fans than the formal meetings. The Cubs will make a last desperate effort to trade or sell their fallen hero, Hack Wilson. The Wrigley organization also will make a spirited attempt to get at least one seasoned outfielder and will grab two if a lavish expenditure can effect the trick.

Is Hack Too Inexperienced?

Though the Cubs are counting on 20 year old Stanley Hack to be a sensation at third base, there are those from the Pacific coast, Stanley's habitat, who think that the young man's one year in professional baseball was not enough to qualify him for regular service in the Cub infield. If the Cubs can obtain one or two or three infield veterans, it is probable they will jump at the chance.

The White Sox established the sincerity of the claim that they want to reorganize the south side outfit when they pulled the biggest deal of the winter during the minor meeting at West Baden.

After President Lou Comiskey had traded Carl Reynolds and Johnny Kerr to Washington for Bump Hadley, Jack Hayes and Sam Jones of the Washington team and had given Bob Weiland to the Boston Red Sox for Milton Gaston, the new Sox owner stated he had "just begun to trade." It is not unlikely that a big deal involving the Yankees and the Sox will be completed during the coming meetings. It has been stated positively that the deal will not include Vic Frasier, but that any other player on the Comiskey roster might appear in the transaction.

GAR WOOD, MISS AMERICA IX. SEEK NEW BOAT MARK

Miami, Fla., Dec. 5.—(AP)—Gar Wood doesn't know what he's going to do with Miss America IX. if it fails to break the world's speed boat record some time next week, but if it succeeds, he says, the slim white craft is going into some one's museum.

"As a matter of fact, I think I'll saw her in two if she fails to set up a new mark," the veteran speed boat racer said.

Wood said Miss America IX. is being repaired in preparation for a test run on Indian creek here, probably Monday, and for a speed run a day or so later. Large oil tanks are being replaced by smaller ones and the weight of the 24 cylinder boat is being further reduced.

"We feel confident we can break our own American record," he said, "but we are only hopeful that we can travel faster than the 110 mile per hour pace to beat the British mark."

WARNER DENIES PLAN TO LEAVE STANFORD TEAM

Palo Alto, Cal., Dec. 5.—(AP)—Glenn S. (Pop) Warner, coach of Stanford university's football team, returned to the campus today from the east and set at rest rumors he would accept a coaching job elsewhere by saying: "They are all rumors to me. I have no intention of leaving Stanford next year."

When asked if New York university and other schools had been negotiating for his services, Warner said: "That's my business." Mrs. Warner recently said certain schools had been angling for her husband.

Coach Warner went east with the team when it played Dartmouth and stopped in New York to help select an all-American team.

gain and a first down at Brown's 33 yard line. The attack bogged down here and Bill Morton dropped back to midfield to pitch a pass into the end zone, where McCall barely missed the catch, but missed nevertheless.

Dartmouth Starts Passing.

Chase lost a few yards and a penalty for offside set Brown back to the 19 yard line, relieving the pressure on Dartmouth. Gilmartin's pass to Sawyer dropped into the end zone for a touchback. McCall made five yards at the line, and R. Morton gained all but a few inches of the remaining five yards. R. Morton then made the first down at the 30 yard line but a punt was necessary and Brown got the ball on its 39 yard line.

Gilbane made nine yards off tackle and smashed over center for a first down at the 40 yard line. The rushing attack carried Brown to another first down at Dartmouth's 49 yard line. Dartmouth got the ball on a punt at its 10 yard line and the passing began. Two heaves failed and the penalty put Dartmouth back to its 5 yard line, where R. Morton threw another one, which Bolster barely missed. This penalty put Dartmouth back onto its goal. R. Morton got off a good punt into the wind to his 40 yard line as the game ended. Score: Dartmouth, 0; Brown, 0.

Lassiter Loses Seven Yards.

Kilcullen of Yale received Mackesey's kick in the Yale-Brown game and returned ten yards to his 37 yard line. Yale was offside on the next play. Failing to gain, Yale punted, and Wilbur, the Yale tackle, downed it at Brown's 31 yard line. Gilmartin's pass to Chase was knocked down by Parker. Chase quick kicked over Yale's goal with the wind assisting.

Meadows slashed in and nailed Lassiter for a seven yard loss. Parker regained the loss on an end run from a punt formation. Kicking in great haste and into the gale, Parker sent the ball out of bounds on his own 30 yard line. Gilmartin made five yards on an end run. Gilbane made three more on a buck, but Mallin threw Marsans for a three yard loss. Chase tried a placement with Marsans holding from the 31 yard line and missed.

Parker punted to Brown's 39 yard line, where Barres, the Yale end, downed the ball. Marsans took a pass from Gilmartin and got loose for a run to Yale's 45 yard line, where Lassiter bowled him out of bounds. Gilmartin threw another long pass to Marsans, which missed, but Marsans took another pass right over the middle of the line and made a first down at Yale's 30 yard line.

Marsans took another pass from Gilmartin and was flopped by Lassiter as he made the catch at Yale's 15 yard line. Gilbane varied the attack with a 5 yard gain on a delayed buck, but failed on a second and like attempt. Marsans got 2 yards more on a reverse, but Hawley stopped him on the next play and it was Yale's ball on downs at its 8 yard line.

Back to the 3 Yard Line.

Yale was offside on the first play and the penalty set it back to the 3 yard line as the period ended. Score: Yale, 0; Brown, 0.

Marsans took a punt at Yale's 40 yard line and was not stopped until he was run out of bounds by Levering at Yale's 21 yard line. Parker knocked down a pass from Gilmartin to Chase. Gilbane hit tackle for 3 yards and Marsans, on a triple pass, went around the Yale left end to the 15 yard line.

Gilmartin shot a pass to Marsans on the fourth down, but it failed and Yale took the ball on the 30 yard line. Parker whirled around Brown's right end to a first down at his own 31 yard line.

Crowley Gets First Down.

Lassiter went off tackle for six yards. Crowley spun through a sundered Brown line to another first down at his 47 yard line but the attack stopped when Mackesey intercepted Lassiter's pass to Parker on Brown's 38 yard line. Chase's quick kick was blocked by Wilbur and Gilday recovered for Brown at Brown's 33 yard line.

Chase punted into the wind to Parker, who was downed by Mackesey on Brown's 47 yard line. Lassiter and Crowley made eight yards in two plunges. On a spinner Crowley went off tackle and got another first down for Yale at Brown's 33 yard line. Lassiter then hit tackle for six and Crowley plowed through for two more. Crowley got the next first down on a rush off tackle, the ball being downed at Brown's 20 yard line. Behind great interference, Crowley went around Brown's right end to a first down at the 10 yard line. Lassiter made six yards on an end run but Crowley failed to gain on an end run to the other flank.

Crowley got two more at tackle and it was fourth down with the goal and a touchdown to gain on the next play. This was a reverse with Lassiter carrying and Meadow stopped him at the five yard line, ending a power rush which had swept from Brown's 47 yard line. Gilbane made a couple of yards at center and the round robin ended. Score: Yale, 0; Brown, 0.

ZBYSZKO ASKS TITLE BOUT WHEN (AND IF) HE WINS

Karol Zbyszko, Chicago Polish wrestler, who meets Don George at the Chicago stadium on Dec. 15, is growing ambitious. He wants to meet Ed Strangler Lewis.

Zbyszko was defeated by Gus Sonnenberg recently when Sonnenberg butted him from the ring and disabled him after Zbyszko won the first fall.

Karol believes he will come through against George; hence his somewhat early challenge to the Strangler.

Nick Lutze faces Bull Martin of Newark. Count George Zarynoff who held Lutze to a draw on the last program, is down for a tussle with Jack Wagner.

A Pole vs. Pole match is slated between Joe Malcewicz and Frank Judson, while the Italians have a champion in Joe Davito, who meets Sailor Arnold.

MICHIGAN I. A. A. REJECTS BAN ON FROSH SPORTS

Albion, Mich., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—The Michigan Intercollegiate Athletic association board of control last night rejected a proposal to abolish athletic activities for freshmen.

Albion college was awarded the 1930 track championship. Hillsdale college won the meet on points, but later its quarter miler, Collins, was declared ineligible, giving Albion high point total.

It was decided to hold the annual track and field meet at [illegible] Albion, May [illegible].

Clinkstock and Dusek Headline Friday Mat Show

Wrestling returns to the Coliseum Friday night, when Doc Krone stages what is naively billed as "five matches; five naturals; and a reason for every bout."

Rudy Dusek, one of the smallest competitors in the big fellow class, meets Jim Clinkstock in the windup. Dusek has been a consistent winner in Chicago during the fall schedule and is popular with local fans. The bout is to prove, according to managers of the participants, whether a good little man can beat a good big man, although unemployed applicants for the headline spot insist it ought to be proved first whether either contestant is good.

Jim McMillen, the former Illinois football player, is matched with Gino Garibaldi, giant Italian, who broke the former Illini's collar bone in a match at Toronto late last summer. The injury eliminated McMillen from competition for four months, during which he had to miss about 45 bouts at a tidy sum per bout. The injury followed a bit of brisk scuffling during which Garibaldi picked up McMillen and tossed him from the ring.

A third bout brings together Pat O'Shocker and Earl McCready. O'Shocker gave Boston quite a shock recently by showing to an advantage against Jim Londos. Previous to the Londos-O'Shocker bout, McCready had been the favorite in Boston, but he is said to have been willingly divorced by the fickle Bostonese when O'Shocker came along.

In the fourth bout it is Lou Plummer's turn to strive for hair locks on Kola Kwariani, the calloused Cossock, who has been a persistent performer in this locale. Plummer is a former collegian and Kwariani is comically bald.

One of the numerous ex-champions of the world appears in the fifth bout. He is Dick Shikat, who preceded Londos as king of the herd. Shikat is matched with Renato Gardini. This is said to be one of the outstanding matches on the card. Shikat, who is a German, never liked Italians and Gardini, who is an Italian, never liked any one, according to their respective mahouts.

HARRISON BEATS MT. CARMEL FOR PREP TITLE, 44-6

Pilney Leads West Siders to 11th Victory.

his 41 yard stripe. On the first play, Pojman intercepted Gonya's pass and with perfect protection from his teammates, he romped 58 yards for the touchdown.

Trailing 12 to 0, Mount Carmel came back with a passing attack which counted their touchdown in four plays. John Carney brought the kickoff back to Carmel's 32 yard line. Then Gonya passed four times successfully, Durkin getting the last toss in the end zone as it was deflected from Pupils' hands when he attempted to bat down the ball.

Durkin's placement for the point was wide and seconds later the half ended with Harrison holding a 19 to 6 advantage. However, Harrison nearly had another score, for Pupils ran 60 with the kickoff before he was spilled 35 yards from the goal line.

Mount Carmel's showing just before the intermission offered hope for the second half, but Harrison's third period offense, which manufactured one touchdown under its own power and scored again on interception of a pass, definitely placed the score beyond dreams of Mount Carmel's rooters.

Pilney too Shifty.

It was Pilney who smothered Mount Carmel's ambitions. Harrison had the ball on its 46 yard line. Pilney wasted one play taking the ball out of bounds, but on the next he went around the left end of Carmel's line for a touchdown. Those players left on their feet by the red shirted blockers could not match Pilney's shifting strides and no one came close to stopping his course.

Then came Remias' 88 yard run. Mount Carmel had reached Harrison territory by recovering a fumble and a forward pass, ruled complete for interference, reached Harrison's 18 yard line. On second down Remias grabbed Gonya's pass and went straight down the east side line for the touchdown, the third period expiring as he finished the dash.

Harrison added two more touchdowns in the final quarter. Rabetz intercepted a pass and ran 40 yards for the first of these. Then Harrison marched 60 yards for the last, the seventh of the game.

Pilney's runs and one pass advanced to Carmel's 31 yard line, after which Pilney tok command and shot through the opposition for his last drive, for before the next kickoff he retired to the bench.

DUQUESNE HOLDS CARNEGIE TECH TO 0 TO 0 SCORE

Pittsburgh, Pa., Dec. 5.—[U. P.]—Carnegie Tech, pushing five times to within striking distance of the Duquesne university goal line, was held to a scoreless tie in Pitt stadium this afternoon.

Four times Carnegie lost the ball on downs or an intercepted pass within the Duquesne 22 yard line. In the final period Tech pushed to the 6 yard line and seemed destined for a score when a fumble was recovered by an alert Duke back of his own goal line.

Duquesne never threatened to score and not until the last minute of the game did it penetrate Tech's territory. On the next to last play Deluca, substitute back, raced 25 yards for the longest run of the game. He carried the ball to the Tech 48 yard line for the Duke's first thrust into enemy territory. But Duquesne advanced only one yard on the next play, which ended the game.

The charity game drew a crowd estimated at more than 40,000—one of the largest of the season here. The entire receipts were to be given to the unemployed, even the players having paid their admission to the game. Officials contributed their services and the University of Pittsburgh provided the stadium.

Many of the spectators voiced disappointment because the periods were shortened to 10 minutes without previous announcement. It was disclosed during the game the schools had reached such an agreement.

MOTORS—TRAFFIC HIGHWAYS

KEEPING AUTO CLEAN ADDS TO ITS APPEARANCE

Here Are Some Rules on How to Do It.

This is the fifth of a series of articles about the care of your auto for winter driving.

BY HAL FOUST.

There's a saying along "Automobile Row" that the appearance of a motor car reflects the personality of the owner. Whether or not this is true, a moderate degree of pride prescribes cleanliness for a vehicle. Dirt, furthermore, is an extravagance, deteriorating the body finish and the upholstery.

Some owners may be inclined to expect too much of the finish of their cars, forgetting the many influences that work against the polish as soon as the vehicle is not in operation, sunlight, dust, mud, grease, tar, rain and snow. Below are some general instructions on the care of those parts of the car which contribute to its appearance.

A light coat of dust does not necessarily require a wash job. This can be wiped off with a dry soft cloth without harm to the finish.

Wipe with Cheese Cloth.

About once a week, the lacquer will benefit from a wiping with a cheese cloth on which a few drops of kerosene have been placed. Do not wet the cloth. Use the cleaner sparingly. Immediately after this treatment, rub the surface with a clean dry cloth.

If there is coarse dirt or mud on the body, do not try to wipe it off. This requires a washing, otherwise scratches are likely.

Allow water to run over the body from a hose without a nozzle which might be banged against the lacquer. Wash off the remaining dirt with a clean sponge and plenty of clean water. Don't rub; this might scratch the car.

Dry the body with a clean, damp chamois skin. Use a straight motion from side to side or up and down rather than a circular motion during this operation. It is essential that the sponge and chamois skin be free from any grit and grease. Separate sponges and chamois skins should be used on the body and chassis.

It is not advisable to wash the car while it is standing in the hot sun or while the hood is hot, as the water dries too rapidly, leaving spots and streaks.

The Use of Soap.

Soap is not always necessary in washing the car, and in some cases may cause some harm if not properly applied. A good solution can be made by dissolving mild soap in boiling water. After allowing it to cool, add the concentrated solution to a pail of cool water. Never apply the soap itself directly to the body and use the solution only when absolutely necessary to remove grease and oil as directed.

When applying soap, wash only a small portion of the body at one time. In washing off the soap do not rely upon running water alone. It is essential that a clean sponge with plenty of clean water be used to get all the soap off the body. After the soap is thoroughly rinsed off, dry the body with a clean, damp chamois skin.

Removing Tar Spots.

Grease can usually be removed from the body by carefully using a soap solution as above directed. On cars where the grease is heavy, most of it can be removed with a cloth dampened [not wet] with gasoline. After this operation, soapy water may be used. Do not apply gasoline to the fenders finished in enamel.

Soak tar spots with lubricating oil or warm lard until dissolved. Then wipe clean with a cotton flannel cloth. Any grease or oil left on the body should be washed off with soapy water.

After washing, to polish the car, rub it vigorously with a piece of cheesecloth which has been washed and dried to remove the sizing. A clean, dry flannel may be used for the finishing touches. Use a straight motion from side to side or up and down, rather than a circular motion.

It is characteristic of lacquer to improve with use and polishing with cheesecloth as above will tend to increase the luster. If, after washing, the finish should appear slightly faded, the use of a high-grade polish will restore the color.

It may be found, when polishing the body, that traces of the color will be rubbed off on the cloth. This is a normal condition and is not detrimental to the life of the finish.

The radiator shell, headlamps, door handles and other brightly finished parts are resistent to weather and exposure and ordinarily require no attention other than that of washing when the rest of the car is washed and shining.

Cleaning the Top.

In cleaning a canvas top, the best way is to wash it with mild soap and warm water, using a soft sponge for applying the water.

Afterwards, the soapy water should be rinsed off and the top dried with a clean, damp chamois skin. Never rub the soap directly on the top.

Leather upholstery in the car should be washed with clear soft water to remove any dirt accumulation. The leather should then be dried by rubbing briskly with a clean woolen or flannel cloth.

Fabric upholstery should be kept in good condition by the use of a whisk broom and vacuum cleaner. Dirt and grit accumulation in fabric [due to its cutting action] causes more wear of the upholstery than actual use. Spots may be removed from fabric with cleaner's naphtha in the same manner as spots are removed from clothing. As cleaning fluids are often very inflammable, care should be exercised in their use.

VOICE OF THE TRAFFIC

FROM A WOMAN DRIVER.

Chicago, Nov. 28.—I am one of the down trodden, despised, much criticised specimen of the human race. I am a woman driver. It is not my intention to defend all women drivers. I am perfectly willing to admit that we are far from perfect and that many of us have no right to drive a car at all.

Unless you have strong nerves and can act first in an emergency and think afterward, you should not drive a car in Chicago. In a busy city such as this, it is something to brag about if you can drive for any length of time without an accident.

I have used my car every day for more than three years and have not had an accident yet. I have had plenty of narrow escapes, though, and only quick action on my part has averted a collision or worse.

From my own experience I would say that by far the worst hazard of auto driving is the well known jay walker. The jay walker is usually a thoughtless, selfish person, male or female, who thinks traffic signals are for the auto driver only. I have seen them dart out of a crowd at the curb and rush directly in front of a car who's driver is trying to cross the intersection before the light turns to red. The fact that the light is red for the cross street does not seem to mean anything to the jay walker. He or she thinks the autoist must stop regardless of lights.

The worst jay walker I ever heard of tried to cross my path the other day. Believe it or not, she started across Ashland avenue at Montrose, walking backwards. I had to blow my horn three times before she turned around. She stopped in time to keep from getting knocked down which was a good thing. If I had struck her, she surely would have said it was the driver's fault.

You certainly need nerves of iron to drive a car in Chicago. MRS. H. G.

UNIVERSITY AND 63D.

Chicago, Nov. 28.—The corner of 63d street and University avenue, among all corners in Chicago, is a most dangerous place for all pedestrians. At this point University avenue breaks, the west line of the south division is very nearly in line with the east line of the north division. It is a point of constant traffic and is becoming more and more so.

To make a safe transfer from one side of University avenue to the opposite side of 63d is no small problem. There are no signal lights or other warnings of any kind. There are no means for detecting the arrival of traffic should it overtake a pedestrian from the rear, which is often the fact. Not a few accidents have occurred because of the conditions. The writer has twice been caught and received injury at this point. F. A. G.

SAFE MENTAL ATTITUDE.

Freeport, Ill., Nov. 27.—During the last twenty-five years' experience in auto driving I have never had an accident of any kind. If every one would reason as I do, outlined as follows, I believe accidents would be reduced 90 per cent.

I figure every approaching driver is either incompetent, just a common idiot, or drunk. Recklessness is included in above classification of course. As to pedestrians I consider them all as dumb, just as I do a cow. Consequently I have never hit one; neither have I ever hit a car or been hit by one. PLUTO.

How are we to live—to work and play and be compensated in the future? In answer to these questions in every one's mind, the author gives us a convincing, witty, human introduction to what we may expect during the coming years, based on the marvelous facts of present-day accomplishments. He pictures a mechanized America in which man is master of the machine, and in which leisure has high practical value. Don't miss this challenging book!
Merle Thorpe, Editor, "Nation's Business," Says in His Foreword:
"For my own part, it is my deliberate judgment that in a land in which science and invention consistently demonstrate their ability to get things done with larger and larger increments of time savings, their beneficiaries will not remain permanently skeptical of the skill of applied intelligence which shows us how to use the resultant increase of leisure wisely and well. The author leads us to a pleasant contemplation of the rosy dawn of America's new day."

OLD MIKE HALL RUNS HIS RACES IN PASTURES NOW

Good One Day, Bad Next, He Won $213,220.

Five Years of Racing

The complete record of Mike Hall during the five years he was at the races follows:

[illegible]

BY FRENCH LANE.

There is one old horse, great on many occasions and most inconsistent at other times, that the racing public won't have to worry about next season.

Old Mike Hall has ended his checkered career on the turf, and if by chance you are passing through the blue grass country of Kentucky next spring, you can see him out in the meadows leading the life of Riley. If you get up a little closer to him you may discover a sad look in his eye, for a horse that has been in the midst of the turmoil of the turf on two continents so long may be a little jealous. He may prefer to be back in the thick of the fight, even though unable to accomplish much.

But Mike's days at the race tracks are over, his owner, E. M. Eastman of Chicago, says, and there will be nothing too good for him during his old age.

Mike Wins $213,220.

Mike Hall won a total of $213,220 before they led him away to leap and play in the green pastures. Any horse that winds up his career with that sort of a record is a great horse, but Mike Hall, while a topnotch horse, was one of the most peculiar ever to come along in American racing. He was great when it was least expected, and he was a very bad horse when the greatest deeds by him were anticipated.

The best example of how old Mike failed when most was expected of him came in 1929, when he was racing as a five year old. For two seasons he had met with remarkable success. He had taken all of our older route runners at different times and had shown them his heels. At the close of his campaign in 1928 he was ranked as America's champion handicap horse.

Owner Eastman wanted to give old Mike every opportunity, and he made plans to ship the stout hearted old fellow to England. He had three stakes in mind, all to be run during the fall season over the flat.

Eighth in Cesarewitch.

Mike's first start came in the famous Cesarewitch Stakes at two and a quarter miles. Mike had been in England for only a short time, but acted so well everybody thought he was thoroughly acclimated. Joe Childs, one of England's best jockeys, was engaged to ride him, and everybody in America had faith in old Mike to win. But in the large field of thirty-five he finished eighth, the Irish horse West Wicklow turning up as winner.

Mike's American followers were shocked, but they didn't lose faith in him. His next start was in the Cambridgeshire at the shorter distance of a mile and eighth. Mike Hall often had triumphed at that distance back home. He was well up in the early stages of the Cambridgeshire, but he failed to stay with the English horses. He was back in tenth place in the field of 36 when the battle ended.

That finished Mike Hall's invasion of England. C. J. Fitzgerald, who had taken him abroad, knew Mike Hall was not himself, so he passed up the third engagement in England and sent the old American champion back to the United States.

Mike Takes a Trip to Mexico.

Now let's look at the other side of Mike's up and down career. After his trip to England, he didn't accomplish much, and it looked as if his usefulness were gone. But owner Eastman, little expecting that old Mike would improve, took a long chance early last winter and sent him to Agua Caliente in Mexico, with the $100,000 Agua Caliente handicap in mind.

Even on the day of the race few persons thought Mike had a chance to win. Sun Beau was the favorite, and not in nearly two years had Mike Hall indicated that he could take the measure of a horse as good as Sun Beau.

He Is Puzzle to Trainers.

So just when everybody came to the conclusion that it was only another horse race for Mike Hall, and that he would finish far back with the also rans, he stepped out and ran one of the greatest races of his career to win the $100,000 prize.

It has been that way all through Mike Hall's racing career. The people who trained and handled him admitted that they did not understand him, and if they couldn't tell what the old fellow was going to do, how could a racing public solve such a problem?

MRS. HOOVER SEES COAST GUARD WIN PRESIDENT'S CUP

Washington, D. C., Dec. 5.—(AP)—A fighting coast guard eleven ended a three year quest for the President's cup today by defeating the Quantico Marines, 13 to 6.

Mrs. Herbert Hoover and Secretary of Navy Adams were among the distinguished guests at the game. The First Lady sat on the coast guard side but applauded both teams equally.

Entering the game undefeated, the coast guard team was put on the defensive in the first quarter when the marines swept over for a touchdown. Near the end of the third quarter the coast guard found its attack and marched down the field in a sustained drive for a touchdown and added point by place kick.

Quarter Back Edwards provided the big moment by sifting through the marine line and galloping 70 yards for the final touchdown.

NO, FOLKS, THIS ISN'T A HUDDLE; IT'S A SCRUM

Almost everybody on the field gets a kick at the ball in what's known as a scrum at rugby game yesterday at Stagg field. Chicago and Illinois, picked all-star teams, battled to a scoreless tie in the match, which was for charity. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

New Orleans, La., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—Nyack, the three year old colt by Noah from Paradox which is owned and trained by Frank Serembe, captured the Baton Rouge purse, feature at Jefferson Park today. The track still was slow, although the weather was clear, and Nyack showed a fondness for the going by dashing off from his opposition to win by four lengths. The time for the six furlongs was 1:17.

The winner paid $16.60 for $2. He came up from behind the pace set by High Foot, the Valley Lake stable's Prince Pal colt, which held on to save second by half a length from Fervor.

Favorite Out of Money.

After the placed horses the order of finish was Leros, Rip Van Winkle, Elizabeth Bolla and Miss Ramsey. The favorite was Leros at 6 to 5, with Elizabeth Bolla heavily played and High Foot the third betting choice.

Nyack was ridden by T. May and carried 106 pounds. The break found all seven away well with High Foot quickest to begin. Willie Garner urged this fellow off to a two length lead, with Nyack and Leros in closest pursuit. Leros soon had enough, while Nyack was restrained back of the pacemaker until the turn for the stretch was made. Then he moved into the lead and away almost as he pleased. The purse to the winner was $750.

Gay Prince Whipped.

In the secondary feature Gay Prince was made a 6 to 5 choice, but he, too, finished out of the money. The winner was Mrs. S. V. Bowden's Fenn, which paid $16.40 for $2. Pat Rowland was up on the winner. [illegible]

NOBODY'S BUSINESS
By Westbrook Pegler

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Dec. 5.—In the alphabetical list of colleges and universities, just a little below Harvard, you may find Hobart college, whose football team recently won a victory as great for Hobart as the Army's victory over Notre Dame. It was Hobart's first in three years, and it vindicated a facetious prediction which had become a byword on the Hobart campus that when Notre Dame finally lost a game Hobart would win one. Hobart's streak of twenty-seven consecutive defeats was broken on the day Southern California interrupted Notre Dame's victorious career.

One of Hobart's traditional rivals is Alfred college. Both are upstate New York schools and Alfred, like Hobart, often serves as a sort of sparring partner to the Jack Dempsey of the big schools. Hobart this year played New York U. and Syracuse. Alfred played Cornell. Last year Alfred attracted pitiful attention by playing Yale, and some professor at one of the winter conferences on football made this game his text in scolding the big schools for bolstering the morale of their players with empty victories over little squads engaged, not as opponents, but strictly as victims.

He said it spoke little for the spirit of the squads of the big schools that such conquests could stimulate them. Prize fight managers recognize a familiar principle behind such matches. Willie Stribling, Luis Angel Firpo, Jack Dempsey, and Primo Carnera fought and knocked out scores of Hobarts and Alfreds in their travels around the country for profit, practice, and the final moral effect of quick, emphatic victory over practically unresistant subjects.

Discovered! An Alumnus of Hobart.

I had wondered where I could find an alumnus of Hobart to obtain some information about the famous victory. Then there came a letter from Tom Johnston, who was a correspondent in the big war. Mr. Johnston was strictly a writing and reporting correspondent, and consequently is not as well known as he might have been if he had also gone in for lecturing and world traveling, but Floyd Gibbons and Spike Hunt, who traveled out of the same press camp, will give him a fine reputation as a reporter on a war story.

It turns out that Mr. Johnston is an alumnus of Hobart.

"Maybe you saw that Hobart had beaten Rochester, 13 to 7, and maybe you didn't give a damn," Mr. Johnston writes. "But you would if you knew what I know, being a somewhat professional alumnus of Hobart.

"That score ended what I am told is the longest losing streak in intercollegiate football. Hobart had lost twenty-seven consecutive games, starting with the annual big game with Rochester in 1928. Hobart was doped to win that one by about 40 to 0, but lost it 20 to 12, notwithstanding the presence on our side of two players who were mentioned on several all-American lineups. They were Beane and Gulick.

Game with Rochester Greatest of Year.

"Up at Hobart and in the schools of our little set this was held to be our best team since the war, which was a high rating because Hobart had always had good football teams and had generally been either the winner or runner up among the small colleges of New York state.

"So Hobart's game with Rochester in Rochester had become the biggest game in western New York. It was our Harvard and Yale, our Army-Notre Dame game.

"Well, Rochester, one of the richest colleges in the country, beat Hobart, one of the poorest, and this meant more to Rochester than all of Mr. George [Kodak] Eastman's millions. To Hobart the defeat meant more than all the millions we didn't have or expect to get. It was Hobart's first downward step. We had won six in a row from Rochester. There had been one grandstand finish in the series, which if it had happened in a Harvard-Yale or any Army-Notre Dame game would have become as famous as Sam White's touchdown from fumbles for Princeton. In that game Rochester had us down, 17 to 0, at the half. During the intermission our players went crazy and took off all their pads. Then they scored 42 points in the second half and won.

And This Year's Team Appeared Even Worse.

"Our 1929 team consisted chiefly of Gulick, a great quarter back, and ten other inmates for the ten other football suits. They didn't win a game. Last year's team didn't have a Gulick and lost every game, too. Rochester insulted us terribly last year. They started their second team and rolled up a score of 28 points.

"This year's team seemed worse, if possible, than last year's. The boys had a terrible season. They went through every vicissitude, such as shakeups, which included the captain, and one particularly sad defeat at the hands of Alfred. The score was only 2 to 0, but we couldn't win or tie.

"New York U. scored 65 points on us, Syracuse 49, St. Lawrence 51, Union 33, Kenyon and Buffalo each 29, and the total of 276 points against us for the season was, I believe, the highest in the land. Consequently, when the team went to Rochester this year the odds were 10 to 1 and no backing.

"At the start Rochester rushed Hobart down the field and scored a touchdown with the extra point. We got a touchdown, too, but missed the kick. But Rochester didn't swing back on us as we all expected, and the score was still 7 to 6 late in the fourth quarter.

Russian Refugee Rushes Across Goal Line.

"Then Ashton, one of our backs, threw a lateral to Seader, another back, who is a Russian refugee. Seader, of course, had never played football in Russia, and this year he had been used at guard, end, and back. He ran nearly the length of the field for the touchdown and scored the extra point on the same play.

"I know you never can tell what will happen in a Harvard-Yale game or an Army-Notre Dame game. There are the tremendous inspiration, the heroic opportunity, and all that. It may seem absurd to compare our little rivalry with Rochester to those great feuds, but an ant lugging a grain of sand is as much engrossed in his great task as an engineer moving a mountain. So when I say you never can tell what will happen in a Hobart-Rochester game I hope I am not being presumptuous. I mean relatively."

Glangesia Is Grasslands 'Chase Victor

was a bit ragged. Saltarello, Mrs. Whitney's 6 year old chestnut gelding, darted off in the lead, closely followed by Land Boy, Word of Honor, Glangesia and Troublemaker, all of which were bunched as they went over the first obstacle, a 4 foot 6 inch plain brush fence.

Saltarello surrendered the lead to Landboy before the second jump was reached and fell back to third place at the third, Word of Honor having gone ahead of him, but as the field approached the fourth the Whitney horse forged ahead to take a lead which it held for more than three-fourths of the entire race.

Whether the wide lead of approximately 300 yards was a mistake of Alex G. Wilson, his gentleman rider, or whether the comparatively young horse refused to be rated, cannot be determined, but a sad mistake it proved to be. For just when this flashy performer needed everything to push on over the last few fences, he weakened, coming in a bad third.

Northwestern will open the basketball season against Bradley tomorrow night at Patten gym.

Throughout the football race Coach Dutch Lonborg has been holding daily workouts with his cage squad, which will be called upon to defend the Big Ten championship won last year. The Wildcats will engage in five practice games before the conference season gets under way. The Bradley game will be followed by an intersectional clash with Southern California Saturday at Patten gym.

Northwestern will meet Notre Dame on two occasions, the first coming Dec. 21 at South Bend and the second New Year's eve at Evanston.

Seven Letter Men on Squad.

Coach Lonborg has a squad of 25 players from whom he will select a combination for the coming season. Included in this group are seven letter men, three of whom were regulars last year. They are Bob McCarnes, center; Joe Reiff, forward, and Bus Smith, guard.

Bob Lockhart, who starred two years ago as a sophomore, but who was out all last season with a knee injury, has rejoined the squad. However, his injury has slowed him up considerably and it is doubtful whether he will see much service this season.

Among the returning letter men who are leading the way for a regular position at guard are Saul Farber, former Crane Tech star; Bob Halls, a senior, and Lockhart. Other players from last year's squad who did not win a letter and who are showing promise are Marvin Moonshower and Charles Coleman.

Johnson at Forward.

Elmer Johnson, a reserve forward last year, seems destined to inherit Bert Riel's job at forward. Johnson, who prepped at Leyden High school in Schiller Park, is 6 feet 3 inches tall.

Several sophomores are expected to develop into valuable additions to the squad during the course of the year. The most promising forward among the newcomers is Don Brewer of Freeport, Ill. He is 6 feet tall and weighs 185 pounds. [illegible]

BRADLEY, 24; IOWA, 19

Iowa City, Ia., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—Bradley Tech defeated the University of Iowa basketball team in its opening game here tonight 24 to 19. It was the third successive year that the Peoria school has trounced the Hawkeyes.

The lead see-sawed continually in the first half with Iowa boasting a 13 to 12 advantage at half time. Later in the second period Dale Davis put Bradley ahead 18 to 17 on a follow shot. After his teammate Sanderson sank a setup, Davis went on to pop in three more field goals. He led the scoring with six field goals and two free throws for a total of fourteen points. Score:

Hunters May Find Cash in Favorite Trap

BY BOB BECKER.

Amateur inventors who have wanted to design some gadget that could be used in the outdoors have another chance to bid for fame this year. The American Humane association, 80 Howard street, Albany, N. Y., is conducting another humane trap contest. Trappers and inventors are being asked to submit designs for traps that will catch animals alive and unhurt or else kill them instantly.

The association is offering a first prize of $150 for the best trap that will take an animal alive and unhurt and a second award of $75. For the best leg-gripping trap that will hold a furbearer without injury the association will give $100. The best new trap that kills instantly will receive a prize of $[illegible].

All traps entered in this contest, which closes April 30, 1932, must be sent by express prepaid to the association headquarters at Albany, N. Y.

Traps Must Have Been Used.

The purpose of this national contest, according to officers of the Humane association, is to encourage inventors and trappers to produce traps that will take the cruelty out of trapping and make the catching of animals more humane. In this contest the judges will consider only such traps as have been actually used to take animals.

The judges want complete information as to the kind and number of animals caught in the trap which an inventor sends in, because the fact that it has been proved practical by actual use is the important factor.

One of the interesting provisions of this contest is that all traps entered in the contest become the property of the American Humane association, but all patent and manufacturing rights remain the property of the contestants. Inventors do not surrender any rights by entering the contest, and should one design a simple yet extremely efficient and humane trap, there is a good chance to secure a definite financial return from it.

Predicts Fortune to Winner.

According to the Humane association, "the man who produces a humane trap which will be universally used will make a fortune for himself and at the same time do away with an enormous amount of suffering to which wild life now is subjected."

In last year's contest not a single middle westerner won any prize money in this contest, with the exception of a trap manufacturing company in Tomahawk, Wis. All the other winners were from the east or Canada. Contestants this year have until April 30, 1932, to submit their designs.

Sing Sing Sports Wave Rolls On to Joliet, Pontiac

Prisoners in the state penitentiaries will go in for mass athletics in a big way next fall, according to Rodney H. Brandon, director of the state department of welfare.

"A football team has already been organized at Pontiac reformatory," he said, "and there will be one at Joliet next year. Our present plan is to have the institutions play an annual match, possibly on a home and home basis."

Besides the varsity squads at the prisons, Mr. Brandon is organizing hall, or cell house, squads for what are termed in collegiate circles intramural athletics. A gradual building up of the old alma mater spirit may be extended to the alumni, in the director's opinion.

BOXER SUFFERS CRACKED SKULL IN CAFE FIGHT

Pittsburgh, Pa., Dec. 5.—(AP)—Harry Pittler, 27 years old, better known as Johnny Ray, former lightweight boxer, was taken to a hospital today with a fractured skull sustained in a fight in a restaurant.

Four men—Hyman Weisman and Mike Paradise, both of Cleveland; Jesse Levine and Joseph Goldberg, both of Pittsburgh—were arrested by police, who alleged they participated in the battle. Police are trying to ascertain the cause of the fight.

DELCORTS PLAY BERWYN.

The Chicago Delcort football team will play the Berwyn Ferrets in a Midwest Football league quarter-final cup series game at Berwyn stadium today.

19 Games on K. of C. Cage Card Today

CHICAGO LEADS WORLD IN RAPID REALTY RISES

Realtors Tell of Value Advances.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

Evidence that Chicago land values have had an amazing advance over a period of years, undoubtedly the most spectacular in the world's history, is conclusively shown by the educational and statistics committee of the subdividers' division of the Chicago Real Estate board, headed by Paul D. Angell of Krenn & Dato. Mr. Angell's committee published its findings after months of research and study in an attractively illustrated and charted booklet entitled "Pages from the History of Chicago Land Values."

PAUL D. ANGELL.

It shows that the bare land in the 210 square miles in the present city limits increased from $160,000 in 1830 to $5,000,000,000 in a century. And far exceeding this proportion of increase, the land in the newly subdivided area on the outskirts of the city in fifteen representative districts shows a gain from 1910 to 1928 of 951 per cent.

The actual evidence is shown in the form of values on subdividers' plats, statistical tables and comparative photographs. This mass of facts is summarized in George C. Olcott's survey of fifteen representative districts from 1910 to 1928; in Prof. Herbert D. Simpson's chart of land values for the south and north sides and the city as a whole for 1910 to 1930, and Homer Hoyt's estimate of the total land values for Chicago in each of the peak periods from 1836, 1856, 1872, 1892 to 1926.

Here Are Some Instances.

Specific instances of this increase in land values, with original sales prices taken from subdividers' sales plats, and present valuations taken from Olcott's Blue book, are:

Lots on Irving Park boulevard, between Maynard and Mason avenues, which sold in 1914 at from $1,075 to $1,375 a lot, now have been given a valuation of $400 a front foot.

Western avenue lots, between Devon and Rosemont, which sold in 1917 at $2,000 to $2,500 a lot, are valued now at $25,000 a lot.

Lots on Devon, between Western and Claremont, which sold at $4,000 each, are now given a valuation of $50,000 a lot.

Oakley avenue lots, between Rosemont and Granville, which cost $925 each in 1917, have been valued at $175 per front foot.

On North Ashland Avenue.

On North Ashland avenue, between North Shore and Albion avenues, lots which sold in 1910 at $1,140 each are now valued at $350 a front foot.

Lots on Central avenue, Evanston, between Reese and Ewing avenues, selling at $100 per lot in 1871, are now valued at $300 a front foot.

On 79th street, between Ridgeland and Constance, $750 was paid for lots in 1910 which are now valued at $650 a front foot.

Four lots with a total frontage of 189 feet on 67th street and 125 feet on Crandon avenue, which sold in 1912 for $9,450, have been given a valuation of $200,000.

Property on Jeffery avenue, between 78th and 79th streets, which sold for $1,000 a lot in 1915, has been given a valuation of $200 a front foot.

Big Advance on the Grove.

On Essex, Kingston and Colfax avenues, between 78th and 79th, lots which brought $2,700 to $2,925 in 1925 are now reported to be worth $225 a front foot.

Lots on Cottage Grove avenue, between 79th and 80th, now valued at $1,100 a front foot, were sold in 1927 at $1,290 each.

On South Ashland avenue, between 80th and 81st, lots which sold at $2,265 in 1920 have now been given a valuation of $1,000 a front foot.

Turning to the west side, we find that lots on West Madison street, between Austin and Mason avenues, which sold prior to 1900 at $80 a front foot, have been given a valuation of $700 a front foot.

Other lots in the districts in which the foregoing lots are located all show an increase in proportion to the value of their location.

An Index to Prosperity.

"These are facts to be studied with care by subdividers, by the investing public of Chicago and the citizens of other cities," said Percy Wilson, chairman of the subdividers' division. "Here is the best index of what a century of progress actually has meant for Chicago.

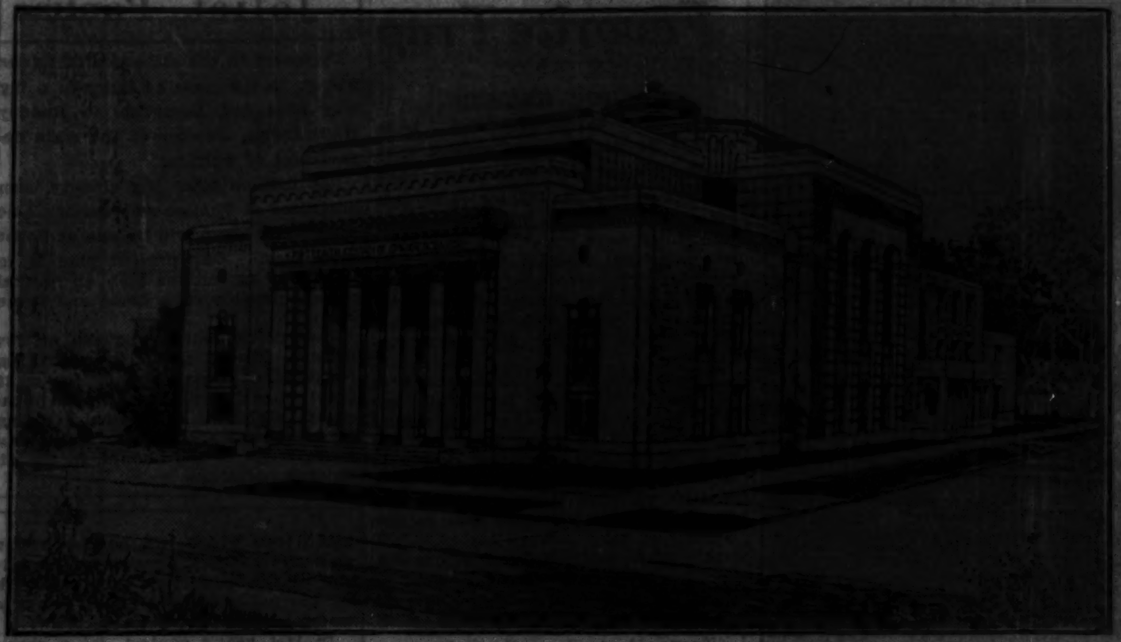
"The transition from the village of a dozen log cabins around a fort to the metropolis of today is measured by this rise in land values. The message conveyed is that again and again Chicago land values have rebounded from the depths of depression to new heights far exceeding those reached in preceding booms.

Sees Glowing Future.

"The inevitable increase of the Chicago birth rate over the death rate, the flow of population into Chicago from the surrounding country and the continued growth of the world provide the momentum that has carried land values forward to unbelievable heights in the past and that will continue to do so in the future.

"Future histories of Chicago land values, written in 1940 or 1945, will repeat this story except that the scene and locality will be different. Vacant prairie near the city and lots we could now buy on easy payments at a small investment will then be solidly built up and ground values will go higher than we now believe possible."

FIFTEENTH CHURCH OF CHRIST, SCIENTIST



This is how the Fifteenth Church of Christ, Scientist, will look when completed. N. Max Dunning is architect. Work will start shortly on the exterior of the building. Five years ago the basement was built, at the northeast corner of Central avenue and Fulton, in the Austin district, and since then has been used for both Sunday school and church services. The superstructure will be of brick and stone and will cost approximately $100,000. The interior will not be completed at this time. The main first floor entrance lobby will be built, however, and used in connection with the basement. George H. Trayser is chairman of the board of directors, Miss Luella D. Gage chairman of the building committee, and Mrs. Helen Carney is clerk of the church.

BRUNDAGE HAS A WORD TO SAY ABOUT DEFAULTS

In the recent report of the committee for the protection of first mortgage bonds, sold through or by H. O. Stone & Co., issued over the name of Avery Brundage, chairman, the reason for the enormous number of defaults is outlined. "We are in the midst of one of the greatest and most far reaching depressions ever known," he states.

AVERY BRUNDAGE.

"All kinds of business and all kinds of property have suffered. In the period of expansion preceding this depression there was a building boom which reached unprecedented proportions.

"Accompanying this boom came an overexpansion in the real estate bond business which led to much loose practice. Large bond issues were made to people with little responsibility. Property was overcapitalized and loans were made on buildings of poor design, on buildings of poor construction, on buildings in poor locations, and on buildings that never should have been built.

"Too large loans were made on leaseholds and on buildings built for some one special use. Sometimes the bond issues were equal to or greater than the real value of the properties. Bond houses became lax in enforcing the rights of the bondholders. Monthly payments were not made, deposits for taxes were not made, buildings were not kept in good physical condition and in many cases the house of issue kept up the payments after the owner had defaulted, without notifying the bondholders.

"The situation at H. O. Stone & Co. until Stone's creditors stepped in, was typical. When the bubble of inflation was pricked the unhealthy condition in the real estate mortgage field was revealed.

"As long as the era of free and easy spending existed and high rents prevailed, as long as the owners did not have to pay taxes and repair bills, interest was paid; but as soon as rents declined and the buildings grew older and the charges for upkeep mounted, there was nothing left to pay the high rates of interest and the large prepayments that the unsound mortgages carried.

"Even without the general business depression and the economic difficulties that prevail today, it is easily seen now that the real estate mortgage business would have collapsed of its own topheaviness like a building on rotten foundations.

"In order that bondholders may understand the situation clearly, we are outlining the procedure followed when an owner defaults. Terms of trust deeds vary, but ordinarily an owner is entitled to thirty days notice of a default before any action can be taken as a result of that default, and sometimes to an additional thirty day period of grace.

"Even though the net income of a property is sufficient to meet interest and principal payments, no one can compel an owner to turn over the money. If he does not do so before the period of grace has expired, the committee calls upon the bondholders to deposit their bonds in order that there may be concerted action to protect their interests, and instructs its counsel to start foreclosure proceedings.

"Threats to foreclose immediately have in several instances resulted in the deposit of sufficient cash to cover interest and principal payments. The owner of one building deposited enough cash in his own bank to pay interest, but not principal.

"At the same time it was disclosed that this bank would buy bonds at a substantial discount although it was said that there were no funds on hand to pay the maturing bonds. Following a letter from the committee threatening action, cash was immediately made available to pay these maturing bonds.

"So many properties have been found to have substantial liens against them and unpaid taxes that the committee is making an investigation with the object of forcing the owners to live up to the terms of the trust deed and place their properties in good standing."

Fairfax Apartments, Pittsburgh.

Please give me any information you can on the 6½ per cent first mortgage and refunding bonds of the Fairfax apartments of Pittsburgh. M. A. G.

The nine story Fairfax was completed in 1926 and contains 236 apartments, two and four rooms. Of these 133 are furnished. It is operated as an apartment hotel. The Commonwealth Trust company of Pittsburgh, the successor trustee under the first and refunding mortgage, has been in posession of the property, operating it for the bondholders since June 12, 1930.

According to Charles D. Hilles Jr., secretary of the committee for the protection of the holders of bonds sold through the F. H. Smith company, operating figures for the period, June 12, 1930, to July 31, 1931, show a gross income of $362,072 and a net profit of $138,304 before interest or provision for the trustees' operating commissions and attorneys' fees. The interest alone on the outstanding bonds for this period, however, amounted to approximately $163,850.

"Corporation taxes assessed by the commonwealth of Pennsylvania against the mortgagor corporation for the years 1928, 1929, and 1930 are delinquent and unpaid and, together with the accrued penalties and interest thereon, constitute a charge against the property prior to the liens of the mortgages," writes Mr. Hilles. "In addition, city and school taxes assessed against the property for the years 1930 and 1931, together with penalties and the interest thereon, aggregating approximately $50,560, are still delinquent and unpaid and also constitute a charge against the property prior to the mortgages.

"In view of this serious condition, the committee has called the bonds for deposit. At the present time it controls approximately 80 per cent in principal amount thereof and additional deposits are being made from day to day."

73 East Elm Apartments.

Can you tell us about the first mortgage 6½ per cent serial gold bonds issued by the Equitable Bond and Mortgage company on the 73 East Elm Street apartments? L. G.

The secretary of the bondholders' protective committee sends us a statement of receipts and disbursements on this property since July 24, 1930, which shows a gross income of $107,641 and disbursements of $65,319, leaving a cash balance on Sept. 30, 1931, of $42,322. He states that a bill of foreclosure was filed on the property and the Chicago Title and Trust company appointed receiver to manage the building, collect rents, pay expenses, and accumulate the net income for the benefit of the first mortgage bondholders.

"The original issue of $750,000 was dated Nov. 1, 1927, and no prepayments were made prior to the date of the default May 1, 1930," he writes. "A master's decree of sale has been entered on the property and it is expected that a date for the sale of the same will be set in due course, at which time it is the intention of the committee to notify all known bondholders."

ARCHITECTS TO DISCUSS CITY'S BLIGHTED AREAS

Reclamation of blighted areas in American cities, with special reference to Chicago, will be discussed at the monthly meeting of the Chicago chapter of the American Institute of Architects, next Tuesday evening at the Architects' club. Prof. Coleman Woodbury of the Institute of Economic Research, Northwestern university, will talk on "Economic Difficulties of Rehabilitation." Henry Wright, architect and town planner, of New York City will discuss the problem as it appears to a technician. Eugene H. Klaber, second vice president, will preside.

COLEMAN WOODBURY.

Preceding the open discussion following the meeting, there will be short talks of from three to five minutes each by a selected number of speakers. Among others it is expected that the following will offer comments: Clifton A. Bechtel, chairman of the zoning and planning committee of the Chicago Real Estate board; Louis G. Brownlow of the Public Administration Clearing house; Henry K. Holsman, chairman of the committee on rehabilitation of blighted areas, Architects' club; and Willoughby Walling, president of the Personal Loan bank.

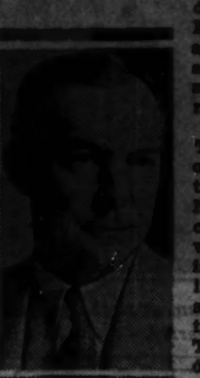
COMPLETE NEW BANK ADDITION IN RECORD TIME

Takes 9 Weeks Instead of 6 Months.

With the opening tomorrow morning of the new quarters of the bond department of the First Union Trust and Savings bank at 39 South Clark street, in the Morrison hotel building, Melvin A. Traylor, president of that institution and the First National bank, calls attention to what is claimed is a record breaking bit of construction and alteration work. The space immediately adjoins the bank's structure on the north and is now an integral part of the building.



MELVIN A. TRAYLOR.

"The remarkable thing about the job," said Mr. Traylor, "is the record time in which it was accomplished. On Oct. 1 the bank acquired the space, approximately 7,500 square feet on the street level, with the same area on four floors above and a smaller space in the basement, by lease from the Moir Hotel company, operating the Morrison hotel.

"A few days were required to provide new quarters for occupants and the work then began in earnest," continued Mr. Traylor. "Fortunately for us, there was an ample supply of skilled labor, and by working three shifts a result has been accomplished in nine weeks that under normal production would have required four to six months."

Busy Since 1925.

Mr. Traylor not only paid compliment to the men on the job, but also expressed satisfaction at the virtual completion of the rebuilding and alteration plans of the First National, which have been going on almost continuously since early in 1925.

"The bank in that year," said Mr. Traylor, "began an $8,000,000 building project, which included unification of the old Fort Dearborn Bank building with that of the First National and the erection of an 18 story addition to the north on Clark street. Consolidation of the Union Trust company in 1929 and acquisition of the Foreman banks' deposit business this year have made constant demands for more space. Such demands now seem adequately met.

New Vault Built.

"Construction of a new trust department vault, with outside measurements of 50x125 feet, has been completed, and will be put into operation coincident with the moving of the bond department. This vault is the same size and located directly below the vault of the National Safe Deposit company. Other new vault space has also been added to the banks' equipment and more coupon rooms installed for the use of safe deposit customers.

"A permanent mezzanine floor has been completed on the north, south, and east sides of the main banking room, creating 16,000 square feet of floor area, utilized by the bookkeeping and clerical staff. The space vacated by the bond department at the Monroe and Dearborn street corner will be utilized at once by the savings department, which has now the largest volume of business, both in number of accounts and total savings deposits, in the bank's history. Additional space for officers' quarters on the bank floor will be available in about two weeks and the work on the upper floors completed about Feb. 1."

MODERNIZES AND RENTS SPACE IN ASHLAND BLOCK

What can be done to rejuvenate office space in an old time office structure has been shown by Fred J. Tucker, agent of the Ashland block, at Randolph and Clark, who has modernized approximately 80 per cent of the fourteenth floor of that building, and leased it to the Union Power corporation and the Federal Service company, formerly at 22 West Monroe street, for a five year term. The new tenants moved to their new quarters yesterday. All of the floor space has been carpeted, new indirect lighting fixtures installed, modern radiator covers placed throughout and the entire quarters modernized.

HOME BUILDING AND REMODELING

HOUSE LIGHTING STARTS OUTSIDE THE FRONT DOOR

Illumination Is Vital Home Feature.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.
[Home Builders Editor.]

Lighting—a vital part it plays in determining the hominess and comfort, the beauty and livability of a home interior. Nor does appropriate lighting of the home start in the front hall. It starts outside on the front porch if one has a porch, or at the entrance door; if an apartment, it begins in the entrance hall.

LOUISE BARGELT.

We see house numbers attractively set up in boxes with tiny lamps behind the numbers. Ordinarily these tiny lamps are controlled by a switch and are operated on the same transformer as the door bell. Switch these lights on at dusk and leave them on till one retires or till dawn! Not only to welcome the incoming guest do we light our entrance doors, but for safety's sake as well.

The first choice here is a shaded, artistic light on either side of the door at the height of an average person's face. Second choice is a light on one side only, and last is the light in the center of the porch roof.

These lights may switch on from a convenient point inside the house, or from two convenient points so that it is not necessary always to go into the hall to control them. Such an arrangement is called a three way switch, costs little to install, saves steps, and operates from either point just as if the other did not exist.

Opens Into Hall.

With the front door opened, the hall appears, an important spot in the home, suggesting in its attractiveness other attractive rooms to come. There is no need to depend upon one ceiling light. Such a light is necessary or at least an equivalent substitute. A console table may have one lamp or two, with harmonizing shades that radiate and repeat the welcome extended by the softly lighted door.

In the living room where the social life of our home centers, lighting is especially important. Because lighting plays such an admitted part in the appreciation of our surroundings, this living room with its diversified uses demands various arrangements of lighting.

Many Charming Designs.

In brief, there should be general illumination for cards, games and social gatherings, obtainable by the ceiling fixture with lamps of correct wattage well shaded, or by torchieres, if enough of them are used. Then there are the portables; many types of lamps, these, including table lamps with two or three sockets for "around the table," desk lamps for "one man" close work and floor lamps suitable for reading, music, sewing and playing games.

Despite the fact that the dining room is perhaps the least used room in the house it needs adequate illumination on the table by means of a center ceiling fixture hung at such a height that there will be no light in the diners' eyes. The shade should diffuse the light in order to assist in avoiding eye strain.

Again, in the kitchen there is necessity for the enclosed translucent glassware fixture, preferably white and close to the ceiling. Use a 100 watt clear lamp or a 150 watt day light lamp in this fixture.

Here's Newest Idea.

Where there is a kitchen cabinet the newest thing is to have a light installed under the shelf and over the work table. The lighted china cabinet is another joy to the worker!

Now with the holiday season near, the home exterior deserves its share of attention. One vivid way of expressing the spirit of festivity is by strings of lovely colored lights.

Outlining the chimney or window frames with these light strings, leaving the balance of the house in darkness; the railing of porch and steps outlined with wreaths of Christmas greens, with now and then a gay colored light; small trees and shrubs at a front entrance with a flood light here and there, not too close however to detract from the beauty of the doorway.

Flood and spot lighting in the garden can be changed from the colder moon light type to gayer colors at holiday time. Red and green are always popular but some gorgeous effects are obtained by the use of orange, amber, blue and so on. For outdoor decorations nothing should be used but weatherproofed cord. It is inexpensive and will last—a lifetime. Garden lighting has become popular and it is a practical means of bringing out by night the beauties of the simplest garden plot or bird bath.

Outside outlets, installed for purely practical purposes will usually be all that is necessary to complete a glorious Christmas decoration. Flood lighting units are available at moderate price and easily handled by the novice. Incidentally they can be used in garden lighting the year round.

[Next week: Proper lighting for bedroom and bath, basement, porch, grounds, and garage.]

RADIATING CHEER

The holiday season approaches, and surely a house, festooned with lovely colored lights in celebration of Christmas joy and cheer, radiates a fitting beauty all its own!

RAIL EMPLOYES TACKLE PAY CUT ISSUE THIS WEEK

Meet Here to Study Roads' Demands.

The attention of the railroad world will be focused on Chicago this week when fifteen hundred general chairmen of railway labor unions will gather here to consider the carriers' demands for a voluntary 15 per cent reduction in wages.

D. B. ROBERTSON.

At New York on Nov. 23 the Railway Labor Executives association rejected such a proposal put forward by a committee of nine railway presidents representing all sections of the country.

Immediately after this conference D. B. Robertson, president of the Railway Labor Executives association, announced the meeting of general chairmen to be held in Chicago. The rail executives' statement indicated that individual railroads immediately would start simultaneous action for wage reductions in accordance with the terms of the railway labor act.

Act for Wage Reductions.

Since then a number of railroads have entered into wage reduction moves on their own initiative. The Georgia and Florida railroad, whose unions are members of the "Big Four" brotherhoods, tomorrow will put into effect a 10 per cent reduction in wages, already accepted by the workers affected. The Georgian and Florida is in receivership.

The Chicago & North Western on Nov. 30, after passing its preferred dividend payment for the first time in fifty years, asked its union employés to accept a voluntary 15 per cent wage reduction.

Ralph Budd, president of the Great Northern, and Charles Donnelly, president of the Northern Pacific, announced on Dec. 1 that unless the unions agreed to reductions at their meetings this week reductions would be demanded by the two railroads.

10 Per Cent Cut in Canada.

The next day news of receivership for the Wabash railroad was followed by word from Ottawa that the Canadian board of conciliation had concluded a ten day session with the recommendation that wages of union labor on Canadian lines be cut ten per cent. Later the unions intimated that they might not accept this recommendation, but the Canadian railroads immediately put it into effect as of Nov. 15.

That the railroads in the United States will insist on wage reductions whether or not the unions accept them voluntarily has been made evident during the rate controversy.

Last June, when the carriers petitioned the interstate commerce commission for a horizontal 15 per cent increase in all rates they stated that every item of their expense except labor had been cut to the limit, and they emphasized that only an increase in revenues would prevent wage cuts. Revenues have not increased. And the petition for a general boost in rates has been denied by the commission.

Show Large Drop in Income.

The bureau of railway economics announced yesterday that for the first ten months of 1931 the total net railway operating income of all class 1 railroads of the United States was $472,306,294, which was equal, in the aggregate, to an annual rate of 2.05 per cent on their property investment. In the corresponding period of 1930 their net railway operating income was $773,287,277, or 3.43 per cent on their property investment.

President Paul Shoup of the Southern Pacific in an address before the Railway Business association, in which he argued for wage reductions, declared that 45 cents out of each dollar spent by the railroads last year went to pay the cost of labor. The labor bill for class 1 railroads last year totaled $2,366,000,000.

Many union leaders have taken the stand that "labor will not consent to pay reductions to provide money to pay dividends."

"Public Sentiment for Cut."

The Railway Age, a publication which is usually in tune with the sentiments of railroad executives, in its issue of yesterday countered with the contention that "almost all classes of persons have had their own incomes reduced, and consequently there is an overwhelming public sentiment in favor of a reduction of railway wages."

"However long it may take," the article continues, "the railways are sure finally to get a general reduction under the railway labor act if the employés refuse to make it voluntarily, and if the employés, by refusing it, throw a large part of the railroads into bankruptcy, they will create a public sentiment which will be hostile to them and to all their demands for changes in wages and working conditions for years to come."

Provisions of Labor Law.

In the event that the railroads and the unions can come to no agreement there is a procedure prescribed under the law for determination of wages.

This procedure involves, where there is a dispute, three possible steps, the last of which is alternative: first, conference between the railway managements and the representatives of railway labor; second, the intervention of boards of mediation if the conference result in disagreement; third, arbitration if the two preceding steps fail or, if either party refuses to arbitrate, a finding of facts by a com-

Congress May Make Probe of Rail Situation

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 5.—Congressional investigation to determine the actual situation of the railroads and to what extent the government might extend aid will be proposed in a joint resolution to be introduced in the senate on Monday by Senator James Couzens [Rep., Mich.], chairman of the senate interstate commerce committee.

In the course of the resolution Senator Couzens asserts that "responsible representatives of the railroads have indicated" that they will seek "financial assistance" from the government. In this connection it is known that representatives of the railroads have sounded out members of congress with a plea for a 500 million dollar revolving fund.

Plans Joint Committee.

Under the Couzens resolution a joint committee would be authorized and directed to "make a general investigation and study of all matters affecting the operations of common carriers by railroad subject to the interstate commerce act, with a particular view to determining to what extent the federal government can aid during the present emergency in preserving continuous and efficient transportation service by railroad, in alleviating the financial difficulties in which many such carriers are involved, in relieving the distress of the unemployed railroad workers and in preventing further unemployment among such workers."

Although the resolution is aimed primarily at ascertaining facts regarding railroads, the language of it is said to permit investigation of automobile bus lines as well.

In the resolution Senator Couzens noted that many railroads are in "grave financial difficulties" and that all of them have sought a 15 per cent freight rate increase.

Cites Wage Cut Movement.

"There is," he continues, "a movement now in progress to reduce the wages of all railroad employés although it appears that approximately 500,000 normally necessary railway employés are now unemployed and many thousands of others have only part time employment and that the present earnings of a large percentage of the employed railway workers are less than the amount necessary for a decent livelihood.

"An emergency exists requiring that a coordinated program be developed immediately to preserve continuous and efficient railroad transportation and to avoid the imposition of intolerable burdens upon either the necessary investment or the necessary labor required to maintain this essential public service."

Special Rail Message?

Washington, D. C., Dec. 5.—(AP)—President Hoover has decided to withhold specific recommendation on the railroad situation until after certain relief moves already instituted have been completed.

The President was revealed in high sources today to be planning a special message to congress on the plight of the carriers, if the situation has not improved after steps to help the industry now being planned have been put into effect.

Principal among the ameliorating measures in his mind are the acceptances by the railroads of the conditions laid down for the recent freight rate increases allowed by the interstate commerce commission, and the consolidation plan now before the commission.

Awaits Negotiations.

The secondary consideration, it was said, was the negotiations now in progress between the railroads and the labor brotherhoods on the subject of wage reductions and better distribution of railroad employment.

The President was said to feel that any present statement by him to congress on the subject might have the effect of destroying the apparent friendliness now existing between the railroads and railroad labor.

SEARS ROEBUCK 4 WEEKS' SALES ARE 26 MILLIONS

Sales of Sears, Roebuck & Co., Chicago mail order and chain store concern, were somewhat lower for the four weeks ended Dec. 3 than in the preceding four weeks and also were lower than a year ago. However, the decline in the latest period compared with a year ago was smaller than for the preceding period.

Sales for the twelfth period of the company's thirteen month year totaled $26,828,020, compared with $27,145,925 in the preceding period and $32,243,421 in the corresponding period in 1930. The decline from a year ago was $5,415,404, or 16.8 per cent. Sales thus far this year have totaled $314,041,553, compared with $351,306,974 in the same time last year, a decline of $37,265,421, or 10.6 per cent.

Canadian Dollar Dips Lower; Quoted at 84¾c

New York, Dec. 5.—(AP)—The Canadian dollar dipped to a new low price today, having an exchange value that was 15¼ cents lower than the American dollar, the quotation here being 84¾ cents.

Ever since the Canadian dollar had been restored to parity with the American dollar after the world war, the two North American money units had held practically the same value. Decline of the Canadian currency has been precipitated by England's abandonment of the gold standard.

NEW FINANCING FOR 11 MONTHS OVER 2 BILLIONS

Stock Issues Decline to Low Mark.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Dec. 5.—New public financing in the United States in the first eleven months of 1931, including issues of bonds, notes, and stocks, but excluding domestic and Canadian municipal flotations, amounted to only $2,204,678,000, according to a compilation by Otto P. Scharschild, editor of American Underwriting Houses and Their Issues, and manager of the National Statistical Service.

The total represents a drop of 54 per cent from the amount in the corresponding period in 1930, when new financing aggregated $4,894,720,000, and a decline of 62 per cent from the figures for the first 11 months of 1929, when new securities totaled $5,920,260,000 were marketed.

Bonds Constitute Bulk.

Of the new offerings this year, bond and note issues accounted for $2,096,011,000, or 95 per cent of the total with the stock issues amounting to only $108,667,000.

New public utility financing reached $1,338,543,000, or more than 60 per cent of all. Domestic railroad financing came next with $370,611,000, or about 16 per cent. Canadian corporate and other foreign issues were marketed in the amount of $160,477,000. The greatest drop was in the financial and investment company classification to $17,650,000, from $283,420,000 in the first eleven months of 1930 and $2,135,175,000 in the 1929 period.

Although new financing was fairly heavy in the earlier months of this year, the poor showing of the last three months was marked. November's total was only $48,588,000, of which bonds and note issues accounted for $48,173,000, and stocks $415,000.

How They Rank.

The Chase Harris Forbes corporation led investment houses in the first eleven months of 1931 not only in syndicates headed, but also in business participated in either as syndicate head or as participant. This house headed banking groups that offered $307,770,000 in new securities and participated in total business of $949,913,000. Halsey, Stuart & Co., Inc., ranked second in heading syndicates which marketed $264,306,000 securities. J. P. Morgan & Co. came next with $241,000,000. In total business participated in either as syndicate head or participant, the Guaranty company of New York was next to Chase with $638,200,000 and the National City company was third with $592,745,000.

OCTOBER NET OF CLASS 1 RAILS IS 64 MILLIONS

Class 1 railroad earnings for the first ten months of 1931 were off 38.9 per cent from 1930, which foreshadows the smallest year's total in more than a decade. The net operating income indicated for 1931 is roughly 50 per cent under the record breaking revenues of 1929.

Net operating income of class 1 railroads in the United States during October was $64,020,077, against $112,386,243 in October last year, the bureau of railway economics reports. For the first ten months the net operating income was $472,306,294, compared with $773,287,277 for the corresponding period of last year.

Wall Street Awaits Terms of New Gov't Financing

New York, Dec. 5.—(AP)—Wall street was busy with conjecture today over the terms of the government's Dec. 15 financing, announcement of which is expected early next week.

The government will issue new securities to refund approximately $1,000,000,000 of maturing obligations, and at the same time is expected to provide for other needs.

In usually well informed banking quarters, new government securities in the amount of about $1,300,000,000 are expected. Gossip in market circles said the financing would be in short term securities, mentioning a possible issue of $300,000,000 in six months 2¾ per cent notes, $400,000,000 in nine months 3 per cent notes, and $600,000,000 in one year 3¼ per cent paper.

GOV'T TO COVER 100 MILLION LOSS OF BANK OF FRANCE ON POUND

[Copyright: 1931: By the New York Times.]

PARIS, Dec. 5.—The French cabinet at a meeting today decided that the government would cover losses of the Bank of France resulting from the fall of sterling since the abandonment of the gold standard by England. These losses are understood to amount to $100,000,000.

The situation of the Bank of France has been for the last few weeks the subject of a good deal of public criticism. Its losses on sterling account were known to be far in excess of the declared capital of the bank, a situation in which in French law calls for liquidation. Bank shares which were 23,000 francs some months ago have been falling steadily and from 12,000 at the beginning of this week they declined to just over 10,000 francs today.

It is the understanding that the cover scheme proposed by Finance Minister Flandin and approved today by the cabinet will be similar to that employed to compensate the bank for its loss of gold seized in its branches in Russia at the time of the bolshevik revolution.

The bank, as in that case, will be given treasury bonds which must amortize in similar conditions. It is understood the bank was the holder of $300,000,000 worth of sterling when the gold standard was abandoned. One-third of that amount has been lost. The French treasury itself is a considerable holder of sterling.

Ever since the pound began to fall the Bank of France has refrained from seeking to realize on its sterling holdings, feeling the effect of any massive offer on the market would be catastrophic. The situation, with over 30 per cent loss on such a large amount had, however, become uncomfortable for the bank.

CHICAGO STOCKS TURN UPWARD AS WEEK ENDS

Stocks on the Chicago exchange ended a week of almost continuous declining prices yesterday with a moderate rally. The upturn was caused in a large measure by the covering of shorts and the week end evening up of commitments by professional traders. Volume of trading was not heavy amounting to approximately 50,000 shares.

The denials that Germany will desert the gold standard had some effect on sentiment in the financial district but by no means removed the uneasiness which is felt over the foreign situation. Some observers attributed the moderate strength in the market to the new credit proposals by the Hoover administration but it was difficult to see any direct response to those developments.

The utility and automobile accessory shares featured the trading here. Insull Utility common responded with a fractional gain the announcement of the declaration of the regular quarterly dividend of 1½ per cent. Commonwealth Edison was strong on moderate trade, rising over 2 points to close at 239½. Continental Chicago preferred steadied after three days of decline and finished a fraction higher. Among other active shares gains ranged from a fraction to a point.

Copper Producers Delay Plan to Fight Competition

Washington, D. C., Dec. 5.—Copper producers and congressmen from the copper states have decided after an informal conference to postpone formulation of definite plans for combating foreign competition until after a report is delivered to the senate by the tariff commission.

The report, which is to show the cost of producing copper at home and abroad, was called for under a senate resolution last session. The report is expected early next week, but Senator Vandenberg indicated the plan for congressional action might not be complete until after Jan. 1.

Missouri Pacific Profit for 10 Mos. Is $2,514,648

Net income of Missouri Pacific for the ten months ended Oct. 31, 1931, was $2,514,648 after taxes and charges, equal to $3.50 a share on 718,001 shares of 5 per cent preferred stock, on which there is an accumulation of unpaid dividends. This compares with $6,005,184, equal to $8.36 a preferred share, and after allowing for only regular ten months' preferred dividends, to $3.64 a share on 828,395 common shares, in the corresponding period a year ago. For October net amounted to $326,833, against $1,021,419 in the same month last year.

HOUSE BUILDING IN FACTORIES TO CUT COST URGED

Plan to Prevent Waste of 53 Per Cent.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—Build the small house in the large factory. Then ship it in pieces [the technical term is "fabricated aggregates"] out to any Lover's lane you please; assemble these "aggregates" with easy efficiency; and you'll eliminate at least some of the estimated 53 per cent waste that is now charged to the process of individualized building.

This is the theory which the committee on technological developments headed by George K. Burgess, director of the bureau of standards, advanced today at the closing session of the president's conference on home building and home ownership.

Inefficiency Is Cited.

Backing up its 53 per cent statement with figures from the department of commerce, the committee estimated that some 34 per cent of the present waste was due to inefficient methods and obsolete machinery. The report pointed to the slowness of the small home builders in adopting new methods, saying: "Although for office buildings, shops or factories, new methods and materials will be adopted overnight if shown to be practicable, conservatism in the building of the small home continues."

New methods, under the supervision of skilled experts, could be tried out in the laboratories of large construction factories, the plan suggests. The methods and materials that stand the test would then be adopted on a mass production scale that would keep the individual home fires burning in a super-scientific way.

Research Bureau Urged.

And even if this "fabricated aggregates" system of house building doesn't come into immediate existence, other committees of the conference today stressed the importance of some sort of central bureau of research, which should include, besides the basic research, a division of information, and one of demonstration.

Do away with haphazard building, and with haphazard laws, the conference in many of its committees demanded in its parting recommendations.

FOREIGN TRADE SHOWS INCREASE OVER SEPTEMBER

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 5.—With October merchandise exports aggregating 204 millions compared with 180 millions the previous month, commodity shipments from the United States increased over the September level to 29 markets abroad.

According to detailed foreign trade foreign figures for October with 39 countries, imports during the same month increased over September from 20 countries and were valued at $170,365,926, as against $168,706,691. October exports continued considerably below those of the same month last year, however, the reduction amounting to $122,191,769.

The export trade was featured by a marked increase in shipments to Great Britain and Germany, and by reductions in those to Canada and soviet Russia. Retaining its position as the principal consumer of American goods, Great Britain purchased commodities worth $50,559,335 in October, compared with $34,589,023 the month previous; Germany took commodities valued at $17,352,152 in October, compared with $12,837,133 in September.

Still unable to obtain the credit facilities it has sought from American manufacturers, soviet Russia reduced its requirements for United States merchandise from $10,500,292 in September to $3,671,485 in October. Informal government advices to manufacturers that they remain cautious in their credit extensions to Russia were regarded as justified in administration circles in view of the statement yesterday by Boris E. Skvirsky of the soviet information bureau that his government had an unfavorable trade balance in the first nine months this year of upward of 100 million dollars.

Weekly Debits Increase Reserve Bank Reports

Debits to individual deposit account reported to the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago for the week ended Dec. 2, 1931, by 182 banks in thirty-seven leading clearing house cities in the Seventh Federal Reserve district, aggregate $922,042,000, an increase of 2.9 per cent, compared with a week ago [$896,246,000].

Rally Brings Brisk Upturn in Wheat Pit

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

A better tone in the New York stock market yesterday put wheat bears on the defensive and while there was a fractional decline early the finish was on a strong rally with prices about the top with net gains of ⅝@1⅜c with the December leading. The December close was at 55⅝c while March was 57c; May, 58⅝@58¾c; and July, 57⅝@57¾c.

The pit traders were inclined to feel friendly to the selling side of wheat early despite relatively strong cables from Liverpool, but on the break which carried May down to 57c, or ½c under Friday's finish there was buying on resting orders and later commission houses and some of the local operators took the buying side on the strong close in stocks. The buying disclosed an oversold condition and a rally of 1⅝@2c from the low point followed, with the bulge checked by selling against offers.

Argentina Crop Estimate.

Despite a decrease of nearly 20 per cent in the acreage seeded as compared with the previous year Argentina is expected to harvest a fairly liberal wheat crop this season, a preliminary official report placing the total at 219,000,000 bu, compared with 239,000,000 bu in 1930, and 312,000,000 bu in 1929. After allowing for a carry-over of around 15,000,000 bu there is 144,000,000 to 154,000,000 bu available for export for the 1931-'32 season. The government figures were 11,000,000 bu in excess of Broomhalls recent estimate. The Buenos Aires market closed ⅛c lower for the day with December at 41⅛c.

Indications are for small world's shipments of wheat to be shown in Monday's statement and Liverpool closed ¼@½d higher on this prospect, part of the advance representing a lower rate of exchange. Actual prices on a gold basis were ⅛c higher to ⅛c per bu lower with December around 55⅝c. Winnipeg was dull but closed 1@1⅛c higher with December at 60⅝c in Canadian currency which was quoted at 14¾ per cent discount.

The relative stability in sterling exchange has brought in a better export demand and sales of around 1,000,000 bu Manitobas were indicated, but all the business could not be traced. Main sales were of Manitobas from the Pacific coast.

Short Covering in Corn.

Corn futures declined ⅛@¼c in the early trading to a new low on the present downturn, but active short covering developed with a rally of 1@1¼c from the inside figures and the close was at net gains of ⅛@¼c, December being 36⅛c; March, 39⅝c; May, 41½@41⅝c and July, 43½@43⅝c. Trade was mainly of a local character with strength in the wheat and stock market having some effect. Country offerings were again small, while shipping sales aggregated 21,000 bu for the day. The basis in the spot market was ¼@½c lower.

Trade in oats was not large and the market was affected mainly by the action of corn, declining early only to rally later and finish unchanged to ⅛c lower with December at 24⅞c; May, 26⅞@27c, and July, 26⅜@26½c. Shipping demand was only fair with sales of 30,000 bu.

Rye closed unchanged to ⅝c higher, the market failing to reflect the sharp upturn in wheat due to easiness in Winnipeg. No export sales were indicated. December closed at 42c; and May and July at 46⅞c.

EXPERTS FAVOR AGREEMENT ON SILVER EXPORTS

Spokane, Wash., Dec. 5.—(AP)—Silas H. Strawn, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, announced today plans for an export sales agreement between American silver producers and the government of India to increase the price of silver.

Strawn told the western division convention of the United States chamber that the plans were worked out by the experts committee of the International Chamber of Commerce and will be submitted to the International chamber council when it meets March 1 in Paris. He intimated he expected favorable action on the program at Paris, with agreement by American silver men and the government of India also.

Pittman Opposes Plan.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 5.—(AP)—Senator Pittman wired the president of the Silver association of the United States at Spokane today that an agreement between silver producers and India for stabilizing the price of silver is "impossible of accomplishment." The Nevada Democrat urged W. Mont Ferry, president of the association, to oppose adoption of such a move.

Stabilization can be achieved only through an international agreement to stop debasing or melting up circulating silver coin, he said.

American Steel Boosts Price of Wire $1 a Ton

New York, Dec. 5.—(AP)—An advance of $1 a ton for first quarter business on wire has been made by American Steel and Wire company, a United States Steel corporation subsidiary. The advance applies generally throughout the list and became effective Friday. As a result, standard wire nails in the Chicago district will be $2 a keg.

Wire nails have been advanced $1 a ton to $1.95 a keg for first quarter delivery by Pittsburgh producers. No change has been made there in plain wire, which is 2.20 cents a pound, but wire rods have been increased $2 a ton to $37.

Chevrolet Motor Company Presents New Models

The Chevrolet Motor Car company, a division of the General Motors corporation, yesterday presented its new 1932 cars to the public in dealers' showrooms throughout the country. The new models will be in the price range that has prevailed this year. The new car is being produced in twenty-one plants in the United States and has given employment to a full force of men.

GERMAN ISSUES, RAILS FIRM IN BOND MARKET

New York, Dec. 5.—The bond market strengthened today. The principal activity in the short session came in the rails and German government issues. The latter advanced from 2 to 6⅛ points upon official denials of rumors that Germany intended to abandon the gold standard.

Among the buoyant rail bonds were those of Baltimore and Ohio 4½s of 1960, Chicago Great Western 4s, Chicago, Milwaukee and Pacific 5s, Denver and Rio Grande 5s of 1978, Erie refunding and improvement 5s of 1975, Great Northern 7s of 1936, Illinois Central issues, all Missouri Pacific loans, and those of the New York Central, St. Louis and San Francisco, Rock Island, and Southern Railway. On the other side, however, Canadian National Railways were down as much as 4⅝, Great Northern 5½s 6⅛ points, Wabash 2, and New Haven noncallable 3½s lost 26 points on a sale of five bonds.

BY FRED HARVEY.

New York, Dec. 5.—The world looked a little brighter to the stock jobbing gentry today. Dissipation of fears regarding Germany's financial and political situation by reassuring dispatches from Berlin caused many who had sold shares yesterday to buy them back again at advancing prices.

All divisions of the market profited from the turnabout. Such industrials as United States Steel and American Can rallied from 2 to 3 points. The utilities were in demand and the rails had one of their best days in weeks, recovering from anywhere from 2 to 4 points of the heavy losses they have been suffering for these many weeks.

Buying Is Cautious.

It was not a rush order buying wave by any means, however. The coming week is fraught with too many uncertainties for the average trader's peace of mind, what with congress about to begin its winter season of tinkering, the meeting of the rail heads in Chicago to act on wage reductions, the New York Central and New Haven dividends to be passed upon and the various debt and political conferences abroad pending. Not that the street is looking for any serious trouble from any of these sources, but the general attitude is to be on the safe side and do a little "watchful waiting" until the straws begin to blow.

Probably the chief concern is with the activities of congress. Of late, however, there has been a disposition to minimize the danger of "hurtful" legislation at the hands of the nation's lawmakers in view of the dreadful chastening business and industry have received from the depression, but most traders will feel better when the first hopper of bills are available for analysis as a criterion of the congressional mind.

Recovery of Rails.

Word from Washington that President Hoover will ask congress to make available a $500,000,000 fund for loans to take care of maturities and forestall receiverships threatening lines in financial difficulties was regarded as responsible for much of the show of strength in the carrier department today. The recovery here was led by the highest grade issues of the group such as Atchison, New York Central, Union Pacific, New Haven, Pennsylvania, and Baltimore and Ohio. There was scarcely a rail on the list which did not attract enough offerings to share substantially in the rebound.

Strength in the railroad bond market was another contributing factor to the progress of this department.

An individual sensation of the two-hour trading session was a spectacular upturn in Auburn Auto. Tips have been going the rounds for days that an abnormally large short interest had been built up in this volatile issue and more than one broker has been moved to warn his clientele that some fireworks might be expected if a sudden news development should couse a sharp advance in the general list. Today's display of bullish sentiment proved to be the big gun and the price went bounding up nearly ten points to a chorus of agonized cries from traders who had got caught out on a limb.

Motor Issues Improve.

Other motors improved. General Motors advanced a point and Nash and Chrysler did almost as well. Western Union and American Telephone showed gains of around 3 points each. Tobacco and oil shares moved along with the trend.

Reports that the management of Radio-Keith-Orpheum had reached an agreement with the minority stockholders committee on a refinancing plan failed to help the shares of the corporation to any noticeable extent. Pullman responded with a gain of a point or so to reports that the interstate commerce commission will grant the company the 20 per cent extra charge it is seeking for double occupancy of a berth.

Graham-Paige Co. Reports $1,400,391 Quarterly Loss

New York, Dec. 5.—(AP)—Graham-Paige Motors corporation today reported September quarter net loss of $1,400,391, compared with net loss of $1,347,924 in the corresponding period last year.

RECEIVERSHIP OF WABASH HINDERS MERGER PLANS

See Final Ending of Fifth Trunk Line Schemes.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Dec. 5.—Declaration of a receivership for the Wabash railway has provided another in a series of unusual events. Ownership of the 2,000 mile line has changed hands twice in the consolidation battles of recent years.

Early in the century it was an important link in the shortlived Gould transcontinental system. It figured in the interstate commerce commission's proposal for a fifth trunk line in the final consolidation plan issued in December, 1929.

Declaration of the receivership would seem to make a final ending of the proposed fifth trunk line. Under the four system plan, however, the Wabash would go to the Pennsylvania railroad, its present owner, and the Ann Arbor would go to the Baltimore and Ohio. Foreclosure proceedings would facilitate acquisition of the Ann Arbor by the B. & O., although the latter road would probably defer this action until a recovery in business provided more funds for the transportation industry.

Loree Abandons Plan.

Under the original Gould plan the Wabash was to be linked with the Missouri Pacific, Western Pacific and certain eastern lines to bridge the continent. But financial difficulties caused failure of the plan. In 1927, L. F. Loree, president of the Delaware and Hudson, acquired control of the Lehigh Valley and Wabash, with the intention of creating a fifth trunk line to the west. Opposition of the existing trunk lines caused him to abandon this plan and he sold the Lehigh Valley and Wabash to the Pennsylvania railroad for $60,000,000.

For the holdings of Wabash and Lehigh Valley acquired from the D. & H. and in the market, the Pennsylvania railroad paid $106,000,000. It at no time received a large return from this investment and at the present time, through omission of dividends on the stock involved, is receiving no return whatever. Meanwhile, the Pennsylvania is making expenditures on an electrification project which will cost $100,000,000.

Gets No Support.

After Mr. Loree abandoned his plan, William H. Williams, chairman and later president of the Wabash, presented to the interstate commerce commission another plan for making the Wabash a trunk line. Under Mr. Williams' plan, the Wheeling and Lake Erie, Pittsburgh and West Virginia and other lines would have been included. Mr. Williams obtained no financial support for his plan and it may be considered to have come to an end when he died of heart failure recently in St. Louis.

In its final consolidation plan the commission would have added the Seaboard Air Line to the other roads Mr. Williams had proposed placing in his system. The Seaboard Air Line went into receivership a year ago.

An objection raised to the fifth trunk line when it was proposed by the commission at a time when all component parts were solvent was that such a system would be under the dominance of the Pennsylvania railroad. This was because the Pennsylvania not only controlled the Lehigh Valley and the Wabash but the Pittsburgh and West Virginia and the Norfolk and Western, which road the commission would have had to include in the system.

Ill Luck for Years.

Ill luck has dogged the Wabash for years. The original unit of the present system was known as the Northern Cross railroad which was chartered in 1837 to run from Quincy, Ill., to the Indiana state line. The present company was incorporated in 1915 to acquire the property of the old Wabash railroad which was sold under foreclosure. Under Mr. Williams' management the earnings were increased to a point where substantial disbursements were made on its two preferred issues between 1925 and 1929. It never paid a dividend on common.

The road participated in litigation of national importance when in 1930 the United States Supreme court ruled unanimously against a suit brought in behalf of holders of its 5 per cent profit sharing preferred A stock to establish a dividend credit in respect of earnings for years in which no dividend of this kind was declared and to enjoin payment of 5 per cent convertible preferred B stock and common stock dividends until full dividends on the preferred A stock were paid. This decision upheld the management in its policy of using earnings for improvements in nondividend and partial dividend years.

Trace Difficulties.

Ever a unit in merger operations, the difficulties of the Wabash may be traced in part to such operations. A substantial portion of the $60,000,000 in refunding and general mortgage bonds went for the purchase of stock in the Lehigh Valley, Ann Arbor and Wheeling and Lake Erie.

The latest receivership for the Wabash was declared within a few days after a formation of an association headed by Frederick I. Cox, former member of the interstate commerce commission, for the support of the proposed Wabash-Seaboard system.

TREES OF LARGE GIRTH MAY BE TRANSPLANTED

Moved with Dirt Ball in Dormancy.

BY PAUL POTTER.

Few persons realize that trees which have attained the girth and height of maturity in one location for as long as half a century or more can be moved to a new location with relatively small danger to the life of the tree and a fair amount of simplicity involved in the transplanting.

Many home owners have discovered the process of moving shrubs and small trees to more effective and suitable positions in their yards. These one man jobs, which are often accomplished by ambitious women gardeners, are found most applicable to the early winter or early spring periods when freezing weather has forced the plants into complete dormancy.

An instance of the more spectacular work of moving large specimens occurred several days ago in Evanston, Ill., where a tree no longer desired by one home owner was spoken for by a friend who paid for the moving job, a cost of several hundred dollars. Over city streets for a distance of several blocks, an elm 22 inches in diameter and 30 feet in height was moved from the home of E. R. Jacobs, 1251 Asbury avenue, to that of Chester D. Tripp, 1404 Forest avenue.

Sever Lateral Roots.

The first step by these commercial tree movers was to have two common laborers dig down vertically a distance of three feet on a circle 15 feet in diameter around the tree. This preliminary digging served to sever all the lateral roots.

Then the experts began work with a power winch mounted on a truck. Cables were attached to the trunk and the elm pulled down to the ground, at the same time forcing the base of the tree to come out of the ground with a sufficiently large ball of earth attached to facilitate replanting.

The soil happened to bee a loose sandy fill in which some cinders had been mixed decades ago, but the foreman explained that in a clay soil the ball would have been much larger and more typical of the average job.

Wrap Dirt Ball and Roots.

Several tons of earth and roots, however, remained and these were wrapped in burlap to keep the remaining root system and earth intact for replanting. As the tree was tipped over it was rested near its base on an eight wheeled dolly to which the truck was attached later for the pull down the street.

But before the crew moved the tree into the street for that actual transportation, the large and small branches were "tied in" so that when all the preparations were completed the spread of the branches had been cut down to a few feet.

This permitted moving without serious damage to any of the branches which were left untrimmed until the tree was set up the next day. On the way to the new location the truck, trailer and the trunk and branches passed under an elevated railroad bridge and through traffic without difficulty.

Equipment Only Limit to Size.

Foreman Ted Booterbauth explained that the equipment alone was the limiting factor in determining what size tree could be moved. He explained that his crew recently moved a copper beach specimen 52 inches in diameter, measured a foot above the ground.

Often the job is done with the tree remaining in a vertical position throughout the process, according to Booterbauth. This is customary when there is no necessity of tying in the branches. He also explained that the moving time for large trees is not confined to freezing weather, as many experts recommend.

"Any time after the leaves are shed is suitable for moving and is certain to inflict no damage on the tree. If the leaves have fallen the tree is dormant," said Booterbauth. "If we do wait for the ground to be frozen solid, that is in a case where the moving is to be done across soft ground where our equipment might otherwise become bogged down in mud."

Must Feed Moved Tree Liberally.

Many Chicagoans, especially in suburban areas, have not cared to wait scores of years for a specimen tree of desired size on their grounds. Nurserymen sometimes explain that moving large trees incures liability as to whether the tree will live because of its limited root feeding system after the tree has been moved.

Tree movers recommending that nearly any size can be moved, explain their practice by saying that they lose so few because they feed heavily with a nitrogenous fertilizer the first growing season after the moving job.

In addition, as the tree is set into its new location, black dirt in the fill is mixed with peat moss, which helps in succeeding seasons to hold moisture and thus facilitate the feeding of the tree with moisture and plant food.

Recommend Size of Dirt Ball.

A customary rule in the preliminary digging is to cut out a circle as many feet in diameter as the diameter of the tree in inches. Thus a tree 20 inhes in diameter usually is taken out with a ball of earth 20 feet across.

Movers also have found that a tree "broken over" out of a clay soil comes out with such a heavy ball of earth that burlap is unnecessary during the moving process.

Installment Investment Certificates.

The installment investment bond or certificate is a fixed obligation to pay the holder a certain amount of money at a given future date.

It is a cross between a savings account and an insurance policy and is designed to meet the needs of those who wish to make comparatively small periodic investments out of their current savings and who prefer safety rather than high yield.

The purchaser also usually has in mind the idea of disciplining himself to a certain extent by entering a contract to continue his savings program over a period of years. Should he withdraw before the expiration of the contract he may forfeit a portion of his investment. In this respect the investment certificate is similar to an endowment insurance policy.

Buying installment investment bonds is not to be classed as deferred payment buying. Payments on account are deposits. The investor is saving for future use. He is not purchasing something for immediate consumption and paying for it later on.

This type of investment is not new. A number of large companies have been selling investment certificates for years and they have been able to retain the confidence of a steadily growing clientele.

An individual entering into an arrangement of this kind does so primarily because he wishes to invest his money with a minimum of risk. And most of the certificates are bought by people whose savings represent their entire capital. They can ill afford to take a chance on speculative securities.

It is well to scrutinize any such plan carefully before signing a contract. The success of the leading companies in this field has naturally attracted others whose propositions, when analyzed, are not so sound.

When properly backed by sound securities and managed by experienced, honest, capable men, companies selling installment certificates provide an attractive form of investment especially for the wage earner and the salaried employé. An investigation will reveal whether the certificates in question are being sold by such a company.

The strength of any plan of this kind depends primarily upon the ability of the obligor to meet the certificates at maturity. It must closely adhere to a definite, sound program. There can be no guesswork.

The securities back of the certificates should be sound and well diversified; adequate reserves should be maintained and operating and solicitation costs should not be too high.

Surrender values vary. These can easily be ascertained by the investor before he signs up.

BRITISH POUND IN CENTER OF FINANCE STAGE

Occupies Spotlight in the London Markets.

BY SIDNEY CAVE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Dec. 5.—The spotlight on the financial stage centered on the pound sterling this week, overshadowing all other city considerations. Considering the shock to the British national pride in finding that $3.23, instead of $4.86, would buy one pound sterling, the financial district and the stock exchange have borne the blow stoically, calmly and with commendable steadiness.

Despite the fact that the French papers have been screaming, "near panic follows fall of pound," London has seen no such signs. The violent fluctuations of the exchange is "primarily due to factors not within our control which coincided with heavy seasonal and other demands for imports," Neville Chamberlain, chancellor of the exchequer, told the house of commons Thursday, adding that he saw no reason to view the recent fall of the pound with apprehension.

Sterling Runs Wild.

Sterling certainly has run wild in the last few days. The New York rate Wednesday touched $3.23 — the lowest point reached since Feb. 4, 1920, and within three cents of the lowest ever touched. A violent reaction occurred at this point under the influence of American and home buying, and something of a rush to cover short sales shot the rate up to $3.45. Since then the pound has been fluctuating a great deal, but the week-end saw more narrow movements.

The spectacular break in sterling was ascribed as due to a variety of reasons. The chief ones were the seasonal factor of large payments for imports, raw materials and foodstuffs; resumption of the withdrawal of continental funds from London; some price speculation; the narrowness of the market, the comparatively small operations in dollars either way having quite a big effect on the rate.

Continental selling was probably the worst factor, but the volume of business was comparatively unimportant, which explains why foreign exchange dealers are not attributing undue importance to sterling's movement. In some quarters the significance of the movement was exaggerated. There was nothing to support the suggestion that French politics were behind the selling.

French Interests Heavy.

Bear operations by continental interests undoubtedly have been in progress but considering the heavy sterling interests of the Bank of France, it is regarded here as extremely unlikely that France would participate to bring about a fall in the value of the pound. A genuine demand for foreign currencies necessary for the repayment of recent heavy imports has been in evidence and absence of the demand for British currency momentarily was largely due to severe restrictions in exchange transactions introduced by many foreign countries.

In the face of these restrictions British importers found it impossible to bring home cash for their goods, while many countries operating overseas were also prohibited from remitting profits to London.

Sterling's break has been the chief reason for the firm maintenance of the discount rate in the money market which might otherwise be weakened under the influence of a relaxation in pressure for money and a fall in short loan rates. The discount rate is likely in the near future to be kept close to the bank rate.

The market received the Bank of England's decision not to increase the fiduciary note issue with satisfaction.

Rise in Note Circulation.

This week's return from the Bank of England shows an increase of £4,[illegible]66,771 in note circulation and a decrease of £4,141,689 in the reserve, which is thus reduced to £28,141,694. Bullion was slightly lower at £121,[illegible]344. A year ago the total was £155,437,094.

Large amounts of gold continue to arrive here from India, South Africa, and elsewhere, although little actually passes through the market. None of it is being retained here, the customs returns showing America, France, Switzerland, and Holland still heavily importing gold from London.

General business on the stock exchange sunk to a low ebb with public interest evaporating.

PARIS PRICES SHRINK

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, ec. 5.—The Paris bourse was characterized this last week by steadily descending prices. The week started with leaders of all sections a fraction under the previous week's closings, then a slight rally occured on Tuesday, which aroused hopes that the public again was taking interest. Wednesday was a notable day for lower prices throughout the list and the two days following showing alternating rises and declines, with recessions in the majority.

The sudden fall in the price of pound sterling was given as the reason for the depression during the early part of the week, but this was disproved by rises of the last two days against the share market trend.

Top yesterday, $6.10; average, $5.50.

Estimated receipts at Chicago Monday: Cattle, 18,000; hogs, 63,000; sheep, 30,000.

Hogs held firm on the week-end session, but quotations are still as low as any time since November, 1899. The extreme top and general average prices remained unchanged yesterday at $4.30 and $4.20, respectively, and compared with $4.60 and $4.40 the previous Saturday.

With the exception of stock weighing under 170 pounds, all classes were in fair demand at the close of the week. Underweights and pigs were a drug on the market and are coming in larger numbers from points where feed is short and producers in these sections are liquidating feeding pigs rather than ship in grain to feed. Most pigs here yesterday sold at $3.00 @3.50. Only a few scattered offers and bids were reported in the hog futures market. March and May contracts were offered at $5.75 and bid $5.00, while December hogs were bid $4.20 and offered at $4.50. January hogs were bid $4.50.

Receipts Are Heavy.

The hog market handled the largest receipts since January, 1928, during the last week. Eleven points received 847,000 head, the greatest for November since 1924. The previous week's receipts at eleven markets were only 561,000 and a year ago the week's total was 681,000. All leading distributing centers were loaded down with fresh pork and price cutting was in vogue most of the time, with the closing range for fresh loins at 8 @9½c.

Outsiders bought only 15 per cent of Chicago receipts, consequently there was an accumulation here that proved disastrous to wholesale prices. The general average price of hogs for the whole week at $4.30 made a new weekly low and compared with $8.20 a year ago. The cutting of hog prices was not so drastic as the cutting in prices of pork, where big sacrifices were necessary to keep supplies moving.

Cattle Finish Lower.

Buyers were not slow in taking advantage of their positions when receipts exceeded requirements of the trade the last week, and the general average price of cattle was cut down to $7.35, showing a loss of $1.20 compared with the previous week.

The price was lowest since week ending July 4. Much of the decline in the average price of steers is attributable to the poorer quality of offerings. Cattle selling at $11.00@12.85 comprised a small part of receipts, while the big end of offerings sold within a range of $5.25@9.50. The extreme range of prices continues wide, but bulk of sales are narrowing down.

The country is liquidating a great many cattle lacking finish and many thousands of these are selling at $5.50 @7.00. Good fleshy steers that lack that finishing touch essential in stock to bring top prices, comprise a big share of receipts and sell at $7.50@8.50. Total receipts of all kinds of cattle for the week were largest since November, 1930, the Chicago total at 59,700 being only 2,000 under the largest weekly total in three years.

Lamb Market Firm.

After buyers had cut 50c from lamb quotations on the opening day of the week, both sides seemed satisfied with the level of prices and the movement of stock was better. The market kept remarkably stable all week, daily top prices holding at $6.00@6.10 and daily averages at $5.50.

Owing to last Monday's slump the average for the whole week at $5.50 was 30c under a week ago and not much above the lowest weekly average of the year. Little change was noted in the wholesale market for fresh lamb closing quotations for carcasses at 9@13c compared with the same range a week ago and with 10@14c a month ago.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 20,000 cattle, 63,000 hogs, and 30,000 sheep, against 29,430 cattle, 70,504 hogs, and 28,987 sheep a week ago, and 15,993 cattle, 54,344 hogs, and 16,840 sheep the corresponding day a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 54,000 cattle, 250,000 hogs, and 90,000 sheep, against 49,942 cattle, 197,275 hogs, and 91,748 sheep a year ago, and 45,369 cattle, 234,712 hogs, and 80,034 sheep two years ago.

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

A large percentage of wheat traders are friendly to the buying side on breaks, but they are afraid to extend their operations to any great extent, owing to the uncertainty regarding action of the New York stock market and foreign exchange. The latter continues extremely low and in some instances its influence is said to be overestimated as a market factor. The fact remains, however, that with money conditions unsettled, there is no desire on the part of traders to extend their commitments because of the narrowness of the trade. Expectations are that Monday's news will be more bullish. The trade is said to have covered their short lines at the last to be in shape to take advantage of any striking development over Sunday.

Richard Uhlmann of the Uhlmann Grain company says general conditions surrounding the wheat market, as he sees them, show no change. Certain groups continue to play the bull side and the theory that the cut in winter wheat acreage will bring about better conditions next spring. Others, however, look at the extremely large supplies and the poor demand, which contention brings about the belief that even low level is not tempting enough upon which to make purchases for permanent keeping. "Our idea is that prices in Chicago remain too close to those in Liverpool," he says. Stocks of wheat and flour in the United Kingdom are 20,500,000 bu against 14,000,000 bu last year.

At the end of November farmers in the United States had marketed 63.2 per cent of their marketable wheat crop, compared with 69.1 per cent last year and a normal of 71.1 per cent, as indicated in a report by Nat C. Murray to Clement Curtis & Co. By Dec. 1 the corn disappearance was 13.3 per cent against 21.6 per cent last year and 18.3 per cent in 1929. Disappearance of oats to Dec. 1 was apparently 46.4 per cent, last year 44.3 per cent, and two years ago 43.4 per cent.

A cable from Melbourne says that while it is possible Australian wheat cargoes afloat may be purchased by any country, there is no evidence that wheat is being shipped to Russia in any chartered vessels and the trade scouts at the idea of regular weekly shipments to Russia.

Commission men in close touch with shippers throughout the corn belt say relatively high prices continue to be paid in the west and northwest for corn and it seems the immediate course of prices is dependent largely upon the attitude of producers in marketing their surplus.

CASH GRAIN NEWS

There were reports of a liberal export business having been put through in Manitobas, largely from the Pacific coast, and figures as high as 1,000,000 bu were heard during the day. Winnipeg messages, however, claimed there was no evidence of export sales in that market. In the last few days around 1,000 bu barley afloat for the continent has been sold.

Chicago handlers sold 28,000 bu wheat; 21,000 bu corn; 30,000 bu oats, and 9,000 bu barley to the domestic trade. Deliveries on December contracts aggregated 240,000 bu corn and 365,000 bu rye.

A firm undertone prevailed in the cash wheat market with No. 1 red quoted at 4@4½c over December; No. 2 red, 3½@4c over; No. 1 hard, 3½@4½c over; No. 2 hard, 3½@4c over; No. 2 yellow hard and No. 2 mixed, 2@2½c over the December.

Cash oats were in fair demand with the basis steady. No. 2 white was 1½@2½c over, and No. 3 white, ½@1¼c over December. No. 2 rye was nominally 4@10c over the future.

Official receipts of grain at Chicago Saturday: Wheat, 8 cars; corn, 131 cars; oats, 12 cars; barley, 6 cars.

BUTTER AND EGGS HIGHER

Butter and egg futures again scored a sharp advance from recent record lows on the Chicago Mercantile exchange yesterday, gaining ⅜@⅝c for the day. Potato futures were unchanged to 1c lower. The support in butter resulted largely from weather reports, the storage figures continuing bearish. Short covering was active in the December deliveries and new buying also entered when the markets started moving forward. Reports of snow in production states brought hopes that production would be checked to some extent. The markets closed at or near the day's high points. Sales: Butter, 1,670,400 lbs.; eggs, 1,512,000 doz.; potatoes, 500,000 lbs. Deliveries: Butter, 5 cars; eggs, 1 car. Prices follow:

WHEAT IN ARGENTINA

Beneficial rains were reported in southeast Argentina Friday which will help late sown wheat in the Bahia Blanca district, says Broomhall. There were also showers in the north, which will delay threshing and cause further sprouting of exposed wheat. Harvest operations in the Argentine are carried on in a primitive way, although the government is building small elevators this year.

RAIL EMPLOYES TACKLE PAY CUT PROBLEM HERE

Meet This Week to Study Roads' Demands.

mission appointed by the President of the United States.

On the basis of the payroll of 1931 a 10 per cent wage reduction would save the railways about $215,000,000. Representatives of the railroads have pointed out that although rates of pay have not been cut, the actual payroll has been reduced about 27 per cent since 1929, due to layoffs and part time employment. In 1929 wages totaled $2,941,000,000, and this year they will amount to an estimated $2,145,000,000.

The Railroads' Dilemma.

The railroads are between three fires. Labor thus far has refused to accept lower rates of pay. Bankers are continually calling attention to the fact that unless the roads can earn a return on money invested in them, investors will not jeopardize their capital by buying railroad securities. And the interstate commerce commission's policy of periodically raising rates horizontally has brought the commission to a point where it considers additional general increases inadvisable.

Instead, the commission has suggested increased rates on a limited number of commodities and taking the additional revenues that might thereby accrue to the stronger roads and giving them to the lines that are in deepest difficulties.

Since the commission's refusal to grant the 15 per cent freight rate increase, railroad men have openly criticized the policies of that body.

"No matter how energetic or intelligent the efforts of railroad management," says John J. Cornwell, general counsel for the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, "it had just as well be understood that the railroads cannot be kept safely solvent if they are to be hobbled and hamstrung by one branch or bureau of the government while another branch taxes them and uses the money to build up and maintain unregulated, tax-free competition.

"No high grade intellect is needed to know that such a policy must necessarily be ruinous to the rail carriers and to the country also."

The Railway Age says there are three possible approaches to the railroad problem—"railroad freedom, government regulation, and government ownership."

"It will be said by some," declares this journal, "that the granting of more freedom to the railways would create chaos in transportation. There is chaos now, after twenty-five years of effective federal regulation by commission; and government policies, not railway management, have created it."

Earnings Below 5 Per Cent.

In the transportation act of 1920, when the railroads were returned to private operation, congress instructed the commission to enable the railroads to earn 5¾ per cent on their investment. In no year since have earnings averaged as high as 5 per cent.

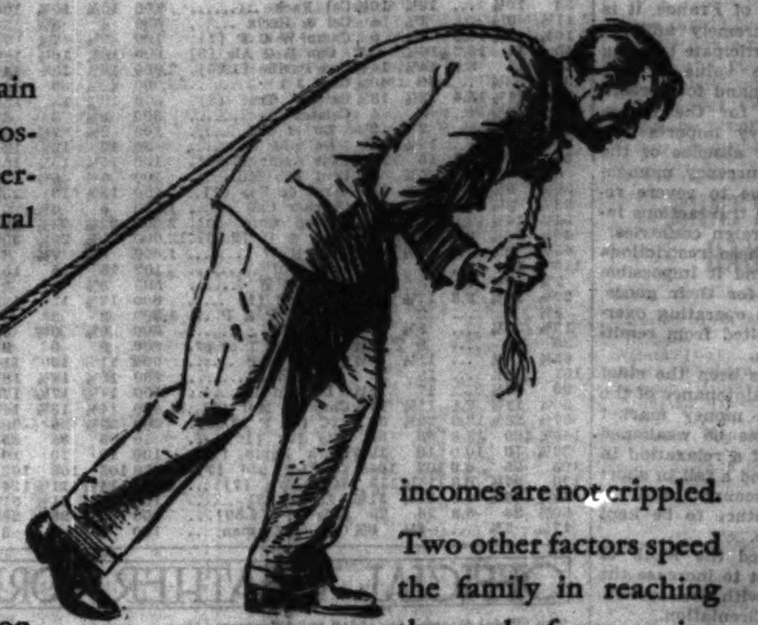
"The theory of the law," the carriers said in their petition for a freight rate increase, "is that railway property is private property affected with a public use; that in being devoted to such use it foregoes exceptional opportunity for the assurance of fair return.

"If the sacrifice already made under conditions of prosperity is to be greatly enlarged because of conditions of adversity, the result is that railway property has become public property affected with a private obligation to maintain it.

"It cannot be expected that investors in railway securities will assume and perform such an obligation."

This is the picture confronting the general chairmen of the railroad labor unions on the eve of their assembling to consider their attitude toward the employers' demands.

Debts need not handicap the family's return to prosperity . . . . .



When the family's wage earner gets a job again he cannot start at scratch on his return to prosperity. His debts owed to the grocer, the merchant, the landlord may amount to several months income.

The family of moderate means may be only $300 or $200 behind, but whatever the amount, the handicap of debt worries must be removed before the starting line is reached on the return toward normal times.

Modern thinking and modern legislation recognize the family's need for borrowing power to meet emergencies like that now confronting thousands of families.

In this city and 89 others there are offices of Household, America's foremost family finance organization. To them families may come and borrow up to $300 on their signatures and the securities which are in almost every household, and repay their indebtedness at once.

Their credit is immediately restored. They return to the market as buyers without further delay. And they can repay the loan over a period as long as twenty months in sums so small that incomes are not crippled.

Two other factors speed the family in reaching the goal of prosperity. First, Household has voluntarily reduced its charges on loans above $100, making the price of money at retail as small as is possible through large volume and efficient management.

Second, Household managers, through their experience with thousands, give sound advice in helping each family to expend its income wisely and get out of debt as rapidly as possible.

MONEY MANAGEMENT FOR HOUSEHOLDS, a helpful booklet on budgeting family income, leading to the happiness of financial security, is offered without charge to all. Telephone, call, or write for a copy.

Permanent Business

Unlimited Earnings Real Opportunity for Producers

Once in a decade there is an outstanding specialty that makes big earnings for the man who gets in on the ground floor, and affords a big man an opportunity to grow to his fullest capacity with the development of the business. This enterprise is an outstanding example.

We are marketing a product which is revolutionary in performance. In most cases, this product will pay for itself in less than a year, often in a few months, and give a result as far ahead of present systems as the automobile is ahead of the horse and buggy.

The demonstration can be made in a few minutes and the results are startling and instantaneous.

This is a high grade proposition and has nothing about it of a peddling nature. Sales are made direct, but at the present time, to business houses, factories, chain stores and large organizations. Commissions on each sale will run from less than $100.00 up to $1,000, and in some cases several thousand dollars per sale.

Some comparatively small sales will lead to a very large volume of business. The earning possibility for high calibered men who are closers and doers and not just dreamers are tremendous. This business is being rapidly developed in a national way. Sales quotas on territories are already fixed as high as $100,000 a month. Territorial Managers who have made outstanding national successes have instantly been attracted to this business.

The territories of Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin, and Michigan are being handled from the address given below.

As soon as an organization is secured, sufficient to produce a nominal volume of business, a large full page weekly advertising campaign will be inaugurated in the Chicago Tribune.

We are especially interested in applicants who have had merchandising and specialty sales experience and who have earned $10,000 a year or more over a period of time, men who are courageous and industrious and who have real sales ability, and are willing to work for a worth-while success.

References will be required, indicating integrity and reliability as well as ability. Please do not call unless you are in earnest and can qualify. If you are one of the right men, this will probably be your last job and it will make you all the money you will ever need.

Call 9:00 to 11:00 A. M. or 2:00 to 4:00 P. M.

AAA MEN

Steady Workers Seeking A Future That's Permanent

will be given the opportunity they have long been looking for Monday. C. F. AVERILL, who came into this business an untrained man, and who has made as high as $3,900 for one month's work in the field—his best month in the field with our new product made $1,700 cash—will give his famous $1,000 demonstration here Monday. Last week Mr. Averill selected 16 men for this business. 9 of them were inexperienced. One of these already has made $210 in less than one week; one, $95; three, $70; four of them made $55. How is that for new men, in a new business, for their first 5 days' work? If you think no one is making money now, then you are all wet. We are. We have an organization of real money makers here in and around Chicago. Without fear of contradiction, we have the highest paid sales organization in America. Think that one over. We make no statements we cannot prove. We had 3 men last month who made over $1,000 each for their month's work. And the best part of it is over fifty per cent of our men come to us without any previous sales experience.

If you think you would like to learn to sell, or if you can sell goods, then stop wasting your time on a deal where men are not making money and come in and see a real live deal and a live organization and a brand new article that has real appeal and no competition. If you want to make money, you must go where it is being made. If other men are doing it, you sure can learn, too, if you are willing to try. In order to qualify, you must be of neat appearance, willing to work 8 to 9 hours a day as instructed, be able to give good character reference, and a resident of Chicago or a radius of 75 miles.

MR. AVERILL will give his famous talk and demonstration promptly at 9:45 A. M., at 11 A. M., at 1:15 P. M., 2:30 P. M., 3:45 P. M. Monday. Don't miss this; it may be your big opportunity. This ad won't be in tomorrow's paper, so cut it out now. CALL 10TH FLOOR MATHER TOWER BLDG., 75 E. WACKER-DR., CHICAGO.

LOANS.

Personal, Property, and Salary.

Why pay more than Household's low rate?

The nationally known Household Loan Plan offers cash loans of $50 to $300 to husbands and wives at reasonable rates.

Household's rate on all loans above $100 is almost one-third lower than the maximum permitted by the small loan law. We voluntarily established this low rate in 1928 and our customers have benefited ever since. This rate remains the same until the loan is paid off. It does not increase as the unpaid balance decreases.

FOR EXAMPLE: The average monthly cost of a $200 loan repaid in 20 equal monthly payments is $2.66. This is the lowest cost in Chicago.

Get the Cost in DOLLARS Before You Borrow.

Commonwealth Customers Pay LESS for LOANS

$2.93 is the average Monthly Cost of a $225 loan under COMMON-WEALTH'S Reduced Rate. This allows 25 months for repayment. There is no lower cost than this in Chicago.

COMMONWEALTH'S rate on amounts above $100 is substantially lower than the lawful rate usually charged.

THE personal property which nearly every family owns and the signature of husband and wife enable one to secure any amount up to $300 quickly and easily.

THERE ARE NO fees or deductions. You may take 25 months or pay all or part sooner. Interest, at the Reduced Rate, is charged only while you keep the money.

Little Orphan Annie
"DADDY" SEEMS TO BE THINKIN' AWFUL HARD 'BOUT SOMETHIN'—GUESS WE'D BETTER NOT BOTHER HIM NOW—
WHEW! WHAT A DECISION TO HAVE TO MAKE—DOC LENS WANTS TO TRY OUT HIS NEW OPERATION ON ME—SAYS EITHER MY SIGHT WILL BE COMPLETELY RESTORED, OR ELSE—OR ELSE I WILL BE COMPLETELY DONE FOR—
SAYS IT'S A HUNDRED TO ONE HE'LL FAIL—THAT'S A LONG SHOT TO TAKE WITH ONE'S LIFE—BILL SAYS I'M A SAP EVEN TO CONSIDER IT—STILL I'VE ALWAYS TAKEN CHANCES—HM-M—A HUNDRED TO ONE—
IS IT WORTH THE RISK? HERE I HAVE A TREMENDOUS FORTUNE—EVERY COMFORT—WHAT ARE EYES, AFTER ALL—I WHIPPED 'EM ALL WITHOUT 'EM—
OH, "DADDY"—SANDY AND I ARE GOIN' OUT FOR A LITTLE WALK—DON'TCHA WANT TO GO, TOO—
OH, I GUESS I WON'T GO THIS TIME, ANNIE—BE CAREFUL AND DON'T STAY OUT TOO LONG—
WE'LL BE CAREFUL—AND WE'LL BE BACK IN AN HOUR—G'BYE, "DADDY"— SMACK!
THE LITTLE DARLING—WHAT A GIRL—AND I WAS AFRAID TO LET HER FIND OUT I WAS BLIND—AS IF THAT COULD MAKE ANY DIFFERENCE TO A KID LIKE ANNIE—
SHE'D MISS ME, IF THE OPERATION WENT WRONG—AND THE OPTIC NERVE IS A DANGEROUS THING TO TAMPER WITH—STILL, DOC LENS IS A FINE SURGEON—AND ONE CHANCE, EVEN IN A HUNDRED, IS ONE CHANCE—
TO SEE AGAIN! LET ME GET THIS THING STRAIGHT—IF I WIN, I'LL HAVE EVERYTHING—HEALTH, WEALTH AND EYE-SIGHT—BUT IF I LOSE—WHAT THEN?
WELL, IF I LOSE, I WON'T KNOW A THING ABOUT IT—AND AS FOR MY FORTUNE, I CAN HAVE THAT FIXED SO ANNIE WILL ALWAYS BE WELL CARED FOR—SHE'LL MISS ME—BUT SHE'S YOUNG AND WOULD SOON GET OVER IT—
IT COMES DOWN TO THIS—AM I GAMBLER ENOUGH TO RISK MY LIFE AGAINST THE CHANCE OF REGAINING MY SIGHT? IS MY EYE-SIGHT WORTH THAT MUCH TO ME?
YES! I'LL CALL DOC LENS AND TELL HIM TO GO AHEAD—IT'S MY LIFE—IF I WANT TO RISK IT, THAT'S MY BUSINESS—IF IT WERE ONE CHANCE IN A THOUSAND, I'D BE A COWARD NOT TO TAKE IT—AND NO ONE YET EVER CALLED OLIVER WARBUCKS YELLOW—
WELL, FOLKS THIS MAY BE WARBUCKS' LAST APPEARANCE IN THE FUNNY PAPER—

UNCLE WALT, I'VE MADE 70 CENTS FOR CHRISTMAS. HOW CAN I EARN SOME MORE?
I TOLD YOU I'D GIVE YOU A CENT A BUCKET FOR CARRYING OUT ASHES
AND THERE ARE LEAVES TO BE RAKED AND THE YARD TO BE TIDIED UP.
BUT I DID THAT ONCE.
WHEN I WAS A BOY I HAD TO DO THOSE THINGS AND NEVER THOUGHT OF GETTING PAID.
UNCLE WALT, YOU LIKE TO WORK DOWN AT THE OFFICE, DON'T YOU?
YES, I DO IT'S BEEN A TOUGH YEAR BUT I DON'T KNOW ANYTHING ELSE I'D RATHER BE DOING WHY?
THAT'S WHAT I'M AFTER— A JOB LIKE THAT TO DO AN' GET PAID FOR IT TOO.
THAT'S THE WRONG WAY TO LOOK AT IT. YOU HAVE CLOTHES AND A WARM COMFORTABLE HOME, HAVEN'T YOU!
YES, BUT—
AND YOU HAVE ALL YOU NEED TO EAT AND A CHANCE TO GO TO SCHOOL!
YES, BUT CHRISTMAS—
HECK! I'VE CARRIED THE KEYS AWAY WITH ME. AUNTIE BLOSSOM WANTED TO USE THE CAR.
SHE'LL BE AWFULLY PEEVED. IS IT WORTH TEN CENTS TO GET 'EM BACK TO HER?
THE LITTLE RASCAL! HE CHISELED ME OUT OF A DIME BUT YOU'VE GOT TO HAND IT TO HIM!
AUNTIE BLOSSOM, I CARRIED THE CAR KEYS BACK A LONG WAYS TO YOU. IS IT WORTH A DIME?
FINE: YES TELL UNCLE WALT I SAID YOU DESERVE THAT MUCH FOR BRINGING THEM.

Hello boys!

Build 'em yourself with

ERECTOR

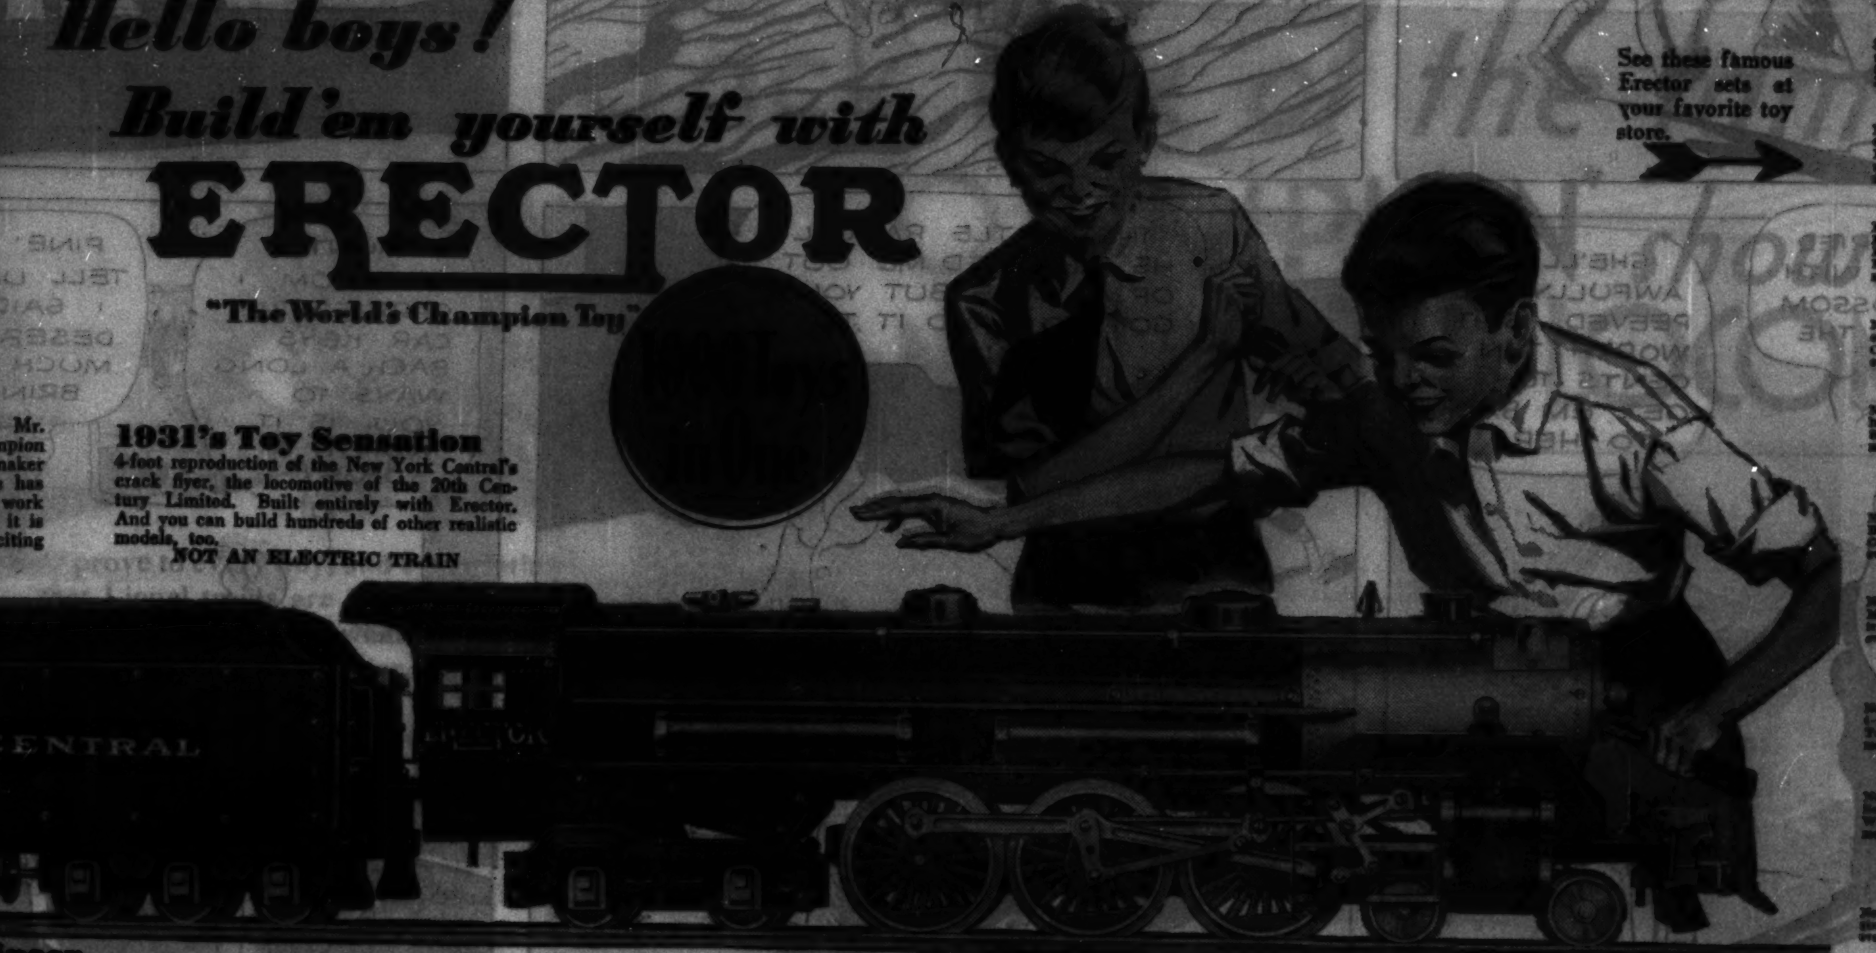
"The World's Champion Toy"

Millions of boys know Mr. A. C. Gilbert, champion athlete and champion maker of things boys like. He has devoted his life to the work of making Erector what it is today . . . the most exciting sport any boy ever had.

1931's Toy Sensation

4-foot reproduction of the New York Central's crack flyer, the locomotive of the 20th Century Limited. Built entirely with Erector. And you can build hundreds of other realistic models, too.

NOT AN ELECTRIC TRAIN



YORK CENTRAL

See these famous Erector sets at your favorite toy store.

Be a real engineer

Step up boys, and see a railroad locomotive built, right before your eyes. Watch a big steam shovel constructed, part by part.

Not by great engineers, but by boys just like you. Why, you yourself can reproduce the greatest feats of the world's famous engineers! You don't know how smart you are, you haven't even dreamed of the exciting thrills a boy can have, until you open up a set of my new Erector.

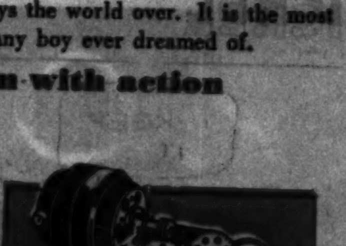
Be the wonder of your neighborhood

Your friends will flock to your home to see you build things with Erector. Excitement! Boy, Erector brings you thrills you never thought possible and fun you'll never forget, no matter how long you live. Once you get your Erector, you'll be sitting on top of the world.

My crowning achievement

Boys, I've worked many years making Erector better and more exciting every year. Last year boys by the million called Erector the world's greatest toy. But the 1931 Erector is far more than a toy! It dwarfs all my previous efforts. It is the pathway to engineering fame for clever red-blooded boys the world over. It is the most exciting sport any boy ever dreamed of.

They hum with action



Yes sir! With Erector you can build real models of great locomotives, traveling cranes, ferris wheels, airplanes, and hundreds of other modern inventions.

But that's not all. When you've built them with your own hands, hook them up to the powerful Erector electric motor, and they go into action just like the big ones that engineers build. Erector brings you more real sport and fun than a whole year of 4th of July's.

What you get with Erector

Lift the lid of the red brass-bound chest in which Erector comes to you. See the hundreds of Erector parts. Steel girders with interlocking edges, both straight and curved, made of real structural steel. Wheels, gears, boiler, steam shovel, pulleys, cams, axles, and many other parts for building hundreds of models. But that is not all. No sir! You also get the powerful Erector electric motor and many other feature parts, for automobiles, aircrafts, and other models. All Erector parts are interchangeable. Every part necessary to build Erector models comes with Erector.

With Erector comes the big Erector "How to make 'em Book" which pictures and describes every step in the building of each and every model. Any boy who can read can be a boy engineer with Erector.

How to get Erector

There is something about Erector that will fascinate your Dad. Send for the Erector catalog (see coupon). Show it to your dad. Take him to the nearest toy store. Let him see the sport and scientific thrills that only Erector can give. Christmas will soon be here. Tell your Dad Erector is what you want. He'll be pleased, and he'll probably sit on the floor with you Christmas morning and help you build your first Erector model.

95 cents and up

Even though I've improved Erector this year, I've also reduced Erector prices so that more boys can share the thrills of building engineering models. Of course, the bigger the set, the higher the price. But there is an Erector set for almost any price your Dad wants to pay. I wish you a merry Christmas and hundreds of happy days next year with Erector.

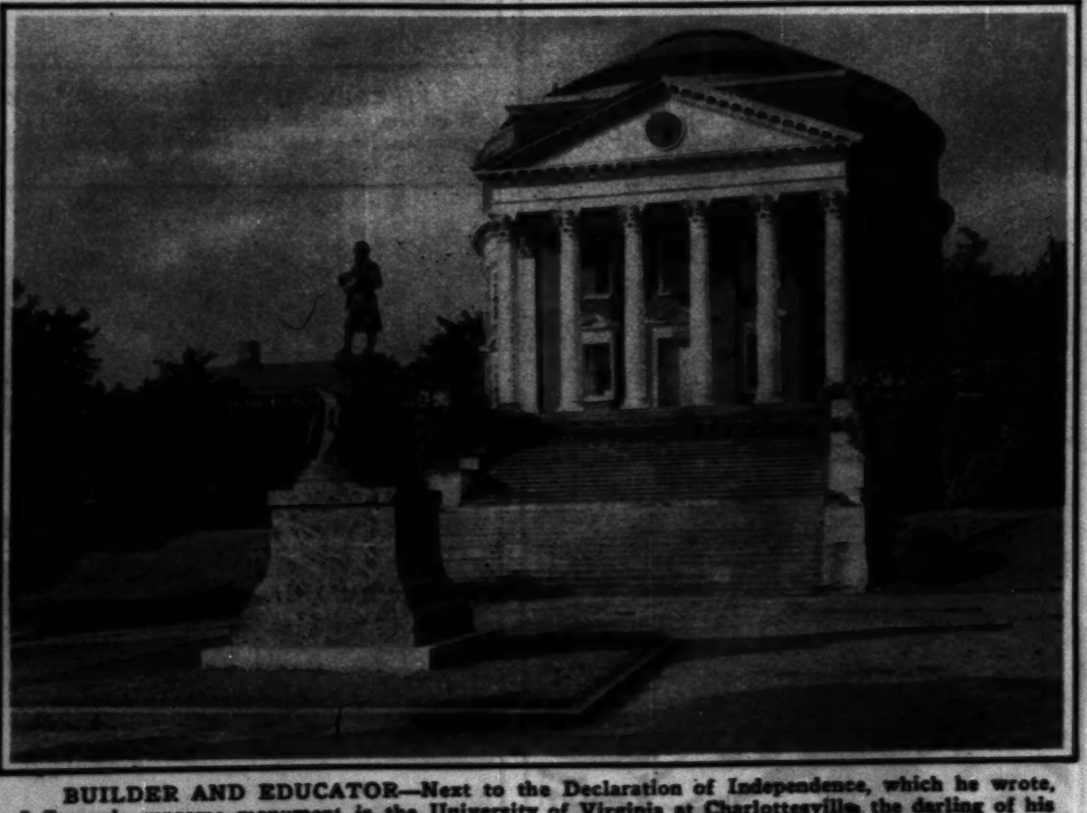
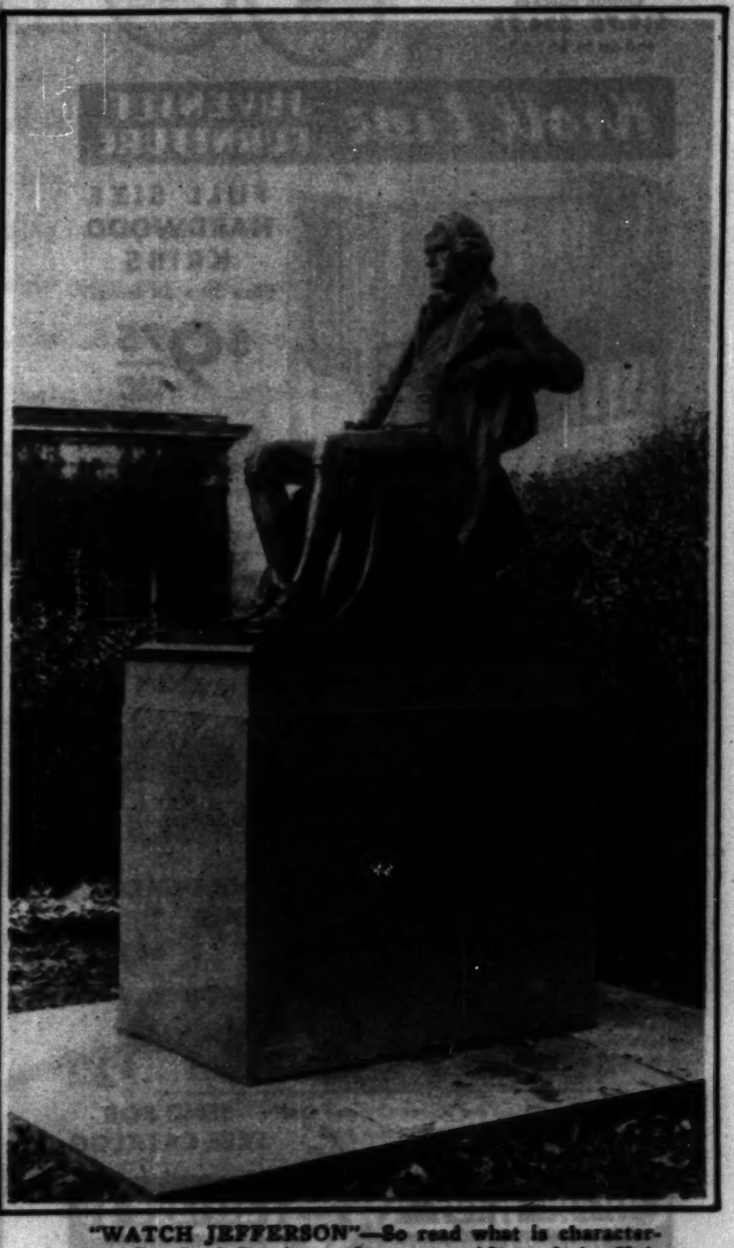
MONTICELLO—Thomas Jefferson realized his boyhood ambition in the building of this Virginia hilltop mansion which overlooks his birthplace in the plain below and the city of Charlottesville. "All my wishes end where I hope my days will end, at Monticello," said the republic's retiring third president. The building of Monticello started in 1770, when Jefferson was 27 years old, and for fifty years it was his home. Today, after many vicissitudes and four ownerships, the estate is a national shrine under the protection of the Jefferson Memorial Foundation, and is visited by 60,000 pilgrims annually from all parts of the world. In this picture a group of the University of Virginia Players is seen in a recent costume fete on the lawn at Monticello, with Henry Rogers Pratt, seated at the right, impersonating the many-sided master of Monticello as a violinist, providing music for a minuet of the olden time. Elsewhere in today's Tribune is the first of a series of articles by James O'Donnell Bennett on the life and works of Jefferson.

JEFFERSON THE MUSICIAN—Two of the Virginia players re-enact this scene of the venerable Jefferson taking his music lesson from Francis Hopkinson, said to have been the first American composer, in the sun room at Monticello. After 105 years Jefferson is still so commanding a figure in the region that the inhabitants of Albemarle county still pronounce the name "Monticello" with the Italian "ch" sound, "because," they say, "Mr. Jefferson wished it pronounced that way."



BUILDER AND EDUCATOR—Next to the Declaration of Independence, which he wrote, Jefferson's supreme monument is the University of Virginia at Charlottesville, the darling of his old age. "I am closing," he wrote, "the last scene of my life by fashioning and fostering an establishment for the instruction of those who come after us." Grounds and buildings of the school Jefferson planned to the minutest detail. The result President Roosevelt declared to be "the most beautiful academic scene in America." This picture shows the "Rotunda," which houses the university's library. Before it stands Sir Moses Ezekiel's statue of Jefferson, mounted on a Liberty bell.

HONEYMOON LODGE—To this little home, a few hundred feet from the then unfinished mansion, Jefferson, in 1772, brought his bride, the beautiful young widow, Martha Wayles Skelton, and here the young couple began housekeeping. Honeymoon Lodge still stands and is seen here as the background of another incident in the University Players' fete. The living descendants of Thomas and Martha Jefferson number 800, and every April 13, Jefferson's birthday, many of them meet at Monticello for a commemorative dinner.



"WATCH JEFFERSON"—So read what is characterized by Dr. Paul Barringer, former president of the University of Virginia, as the shortest letter ever written. It was sent by Benjamin Franklin to George Washington. Here is Karl Bitter's statue of Jefferson on the University of Virginia campus. To the east and directly opposite rises a replica of Houdon's celebrated statue of Washington, looking straight at Jefferson. "Still watching him," says Dr. Barringer.

A FLOW OF RADIO "CONSCIENCE MONEY" followed the tour of this little truck. In England, where radio broadcasting is supported by the taxes imposed upon the owners of receiving sets, the owners frequently neglected to pay the government its fees for entertainment, whereupon a fleet of these "radio set detectors" were sent about London's streets and 400,000 owners hastened to pay their delinquent taxes. There is some claim that the detectors are valueless as such, but the authorities point to their great success in making the public "radio tax conscious."

THE USE OF PIGEONS by the German army has been greatly augmented. In the picture at the left a member of the pigeon patrol is shown wearing the specially constructed knapsack in which the birds are carried, their heads uncovered to familiarize them with the landmarks of their "homing" district. At the right are two pictures made by a newly devised automatic camera which is carried by the pigeons in flight. The pigeon's wings can be seen at the sides of the top picture. THE "VACUPLANE," a form of aircraft devoid of wings in the ordinary sense, but topped by a cellule, or lifting surface, was recently demonstrated at the University of Miami, Fla. The 84 feet of lifting surface was found sufficient, in these tests, to lift 1,051 pounds of gross weight at a take-off speed of 55 miles an hour, and acting as a parachute in descent, the cellule, after some refinement of construction, is expected to permit the plane to land at a speed of less than 20 miles an hour inside of 30 feet; at present it closely approximates that performance. The picture above gives a three-quarter view of the "Vacuplane" with its tapered cellule above the cabin.

A FRONT VIEW of the plane that is sucked up into the air. In its tests the "Vacuplane" left the ground after a run of 75 feet. Its inventor, Edward H. Lanier of Covington, Ky., spent two years of experimental work on this aircraft, which is said to contribute largely to the greater safety of operation and performance of heavier-than-air machines.

MAROONED BY THAMES FLOODS, but with their interest undampened, these two young Londoners are pictured watching the practice row of a university team. High tides and frequent November rains caused considerable flooding, but no appreciable damage, in the vicinity of the English capital.

ALKA-SELTZER

The Pain Relieving Alkalizing Effervescent Tablet Will Help Keep You on Your Job!

YOU have probably suffered, lost time and had short pay envelopes the past year because of sickness. Nine out of ten people have.

How often have you lost a day's pay because Colds, Headaches, Stomach disorders or some other everyday illness kept you off your job?

The lost wages and expense of preventable illness would take care of every unemployed man and woman in United States.

When you are sick, you cannot keep on working and suffering—giving only a half a day's work for a full day's pay. That's one sure way to lose your job.

Get Well and Keep Well. Headaches, Colds, Gas on the Stomach, Sour Stomach, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Lumbago, Muscular Pains, Sciatica, Fatigue or that "Morning After" Feeling, are all caused or made worse by

Too Much Acid

When you over-eat—or when you eat too many acid-producing foods such as bread, meat, eggs and pastry, and too few of the alkaline-producing foods such as fruits and vegetables—then your system becomes too acid—your resistance goes down and you become an easy victim to everyday aches and pains.

That's the time to take ALKA-SELTZER. A Tablet of ALKA-SELTZER in a glass of water makes a harmless, effervescent drink that gives you double relief from your troubles.

1—It relieves the pain and discomfort promptly and safely.
2—It corrects the excess acid condition in the body and removes the cause of sickness due to too much acid.

Alka-Seltzer is new—and different. It is a scientific product—a corrective alkaline drink that first relieves the pain of everyday ailments and then corrects the excess acid that causes the trouble.

COLDS When you have a cold, it is a sure sign you are suffering from excess acidity. Your body always contains too much acid when you have a Cold. Alka-Seltzer relieves the stuffed-up, heavy feeling almost immediately. A few tablets correct the excess acid condition and clear up the Cold in a few hours.

Headache. Alka-Seltzer will relieve the pain and get rid of the excess acid that causes headaches.

Gas on Stomach, Heartburn, Sour Stomach. You never enjoyed such prompt, pleasant, relief as one or two Alka-Seltzer Tablets in a glass of water will give you.

Neuralgia, Rheumatic, Sciatic and Muscular Pains. Just try Alka-Seltzer. You will be glad you have found such a pleasant, easy way to relieve these pains.

"That Tired Feeling." When you feel tired, it is because part of the sugar in your body has turned to acid. Correct the excess acid by taking one or two Alka-Seltzer tablets. You will feel rested and refreshed in a few minutes.

That "Morning After" Feeling. Too Much Eating and Drinking always cause an over-acid condition. Headache, an up-set stomach and a general "Morning After" feeling are pretty sure to follow. Clear up your head and settle your stomach with ALKA-SELTZER.

Alka-Seltzer makes a clear, sparkling harmless drink that is as pleasant to the taste as mineral spring water. Many people have told us that Alka-Seltzer is the best thing that they have ever used.

DELECTABLE PRESENTS for CHRISTMAS GIVING

Lingerie, Furs, Jewels, Gloves from Gay Paris

Many of These Charming Accessories May Be Made by Amateurs.

By Bettina Bedwell.

PARIS.—[Special.]—Rain beats up and down the Rue de la Paix. Gorgeous dresses hang limp along the racks in the couture salons above the famous street. Nobody cares to look for them under their linen coverings. All eyes are seeking the lighted windows of the shops below, tricked out with the bravery of holly and trinkets in the Christmas spirit. Mighty lists crowd the miniature muff purses of the smart shoppers along the way.

The great pre-holiday hunt is on, in Paris as over the rest of the world, for suitable gifts to give on Christmas or New Year's morning. Cobwebs of silken lingerie, made by hand in the French manner; jewels for the grand duchess; furs, gloves and vanities; books for the serious and etchings for the artistic; distracting toys for the littlest Parisiennes; everything for every taste, and what fun seeing and selecting!

Christmas displays this year have new manners. They're decorative and they are useful. Even the Yuletide present must earn its keep, according to the fashions of these lean times. Shopping is a highly specialized business, and you must know the tastes and yens of every recipient-to-be on your list if you are to do your Christmas shopping in the chic way.

Should you give lingerie, let it be tailored and trim for the woman who likes to be that way inside and out, and frivolous with laces and tucks for the woman who wants to look delicate and feminine to the skin. Both kinds of lingerie are smart, but it's no good giving either to the wrong woman and thus showing yourself all out of step with her yearnings.

New Night Gowns.

A lingerie present that is esteemed by the fashionable woman this season is the new nightgown that looks more like an evening gown than it does like the shapeless slip heretofore employed to sleep in. These gowns are made like tailored dinner dresses or are shirred and flowing to suit every taste, but they have bodices and skirts, and often sleeves, too.

Any girl who is clever with a needle can make a gown like this for some important name on her list. A model of this type from Annek is shown in the center of our sketch. It is made of white georgette with a little fitted bodice, all shirred, and has short shirred sleeves. A ribbon girdle passes through the lowest row of shirring and ties in front. The skirt is full and straight.

Smart, too, is the lounging robe that is cut like the double breasted topcoats smart women wear on the street. This makes the most attractive of gifts for almost any woman, and a specimen is shown just on the right of the center figure. It is made of pale blue quilted satin, this one, with revers and collar and tie-on girdle of black velvet. The double breasted closing fastens over velvet buttons, and the cuffs are velvet banded.

Slips Are Longish.

A third bit of lingerie that is the highest fashion in Paris is the longish slip, which Parisiennes wear with culottes instead of the more ordinary chemise. A slip from Worth is shown just on the left of the center figure, to illustrate the type that Paris prefers. This slip is made of pale pink crepe de chine, and fits without any wrinkles or gathers, as a style bred slip must under the new fitted fashions of winter.

A satin ribbon is shirred under the slip, at the waistline, and ties in a flat bow in front. Point lace makes the yoke and the band at the bottom.

There are, of course, many other bits of lingerie in the Christmas spirit, and among them is the lingerie blouse that goes so well with the tailored suits of this season. Lingerie blouses made of chiffon, the washable kind, are something chic, and no woman in her right mind can resist them. In the upper right hand corner of the center panel is sketched one of these chiffon blouses, designed by Worth, who began this fashion. It is made of bright green chiffon, a simple kimono cut, with a short peplum attached below the waistline. The short sleeves are bordered with plaited frills, and a similar frill edges the peplum, goes up the two sides of the jet buttoned closing and around the neck to make a collar.

Charming Accessories.

At the bottom of the center panel are the two sizes of handkerchief Paris approves for Christmas gifts. The yard square of chiffon with a lace border and the tiny linen embroidered hanky of the Second Empire. Just on the right is the newest clip pin—a diamond feather, that is bendable. Some women wear these in their hair of an evening. Next on the right are the smartest, by several miles, evening gloves from Alexandrine. They're short, made of glace kid, button tight around the wrists and are trimmed with old fashioned pinking. These are the new gloves worn by the smartest women in Paris. Below is a pair of [illegible] suede gloves (that lots of women [illegible] prefer).

In the panel on the left is the newest kind of fur set, in the manner of [illegible], and a precious Christmas gift for some lucky gal. The double crossing scarf of ermine, that buttons at the back of the waistline, has the grand chic of Paris, and the lit-

Screens in Many Shapes and Sizes Conceal Eyesores

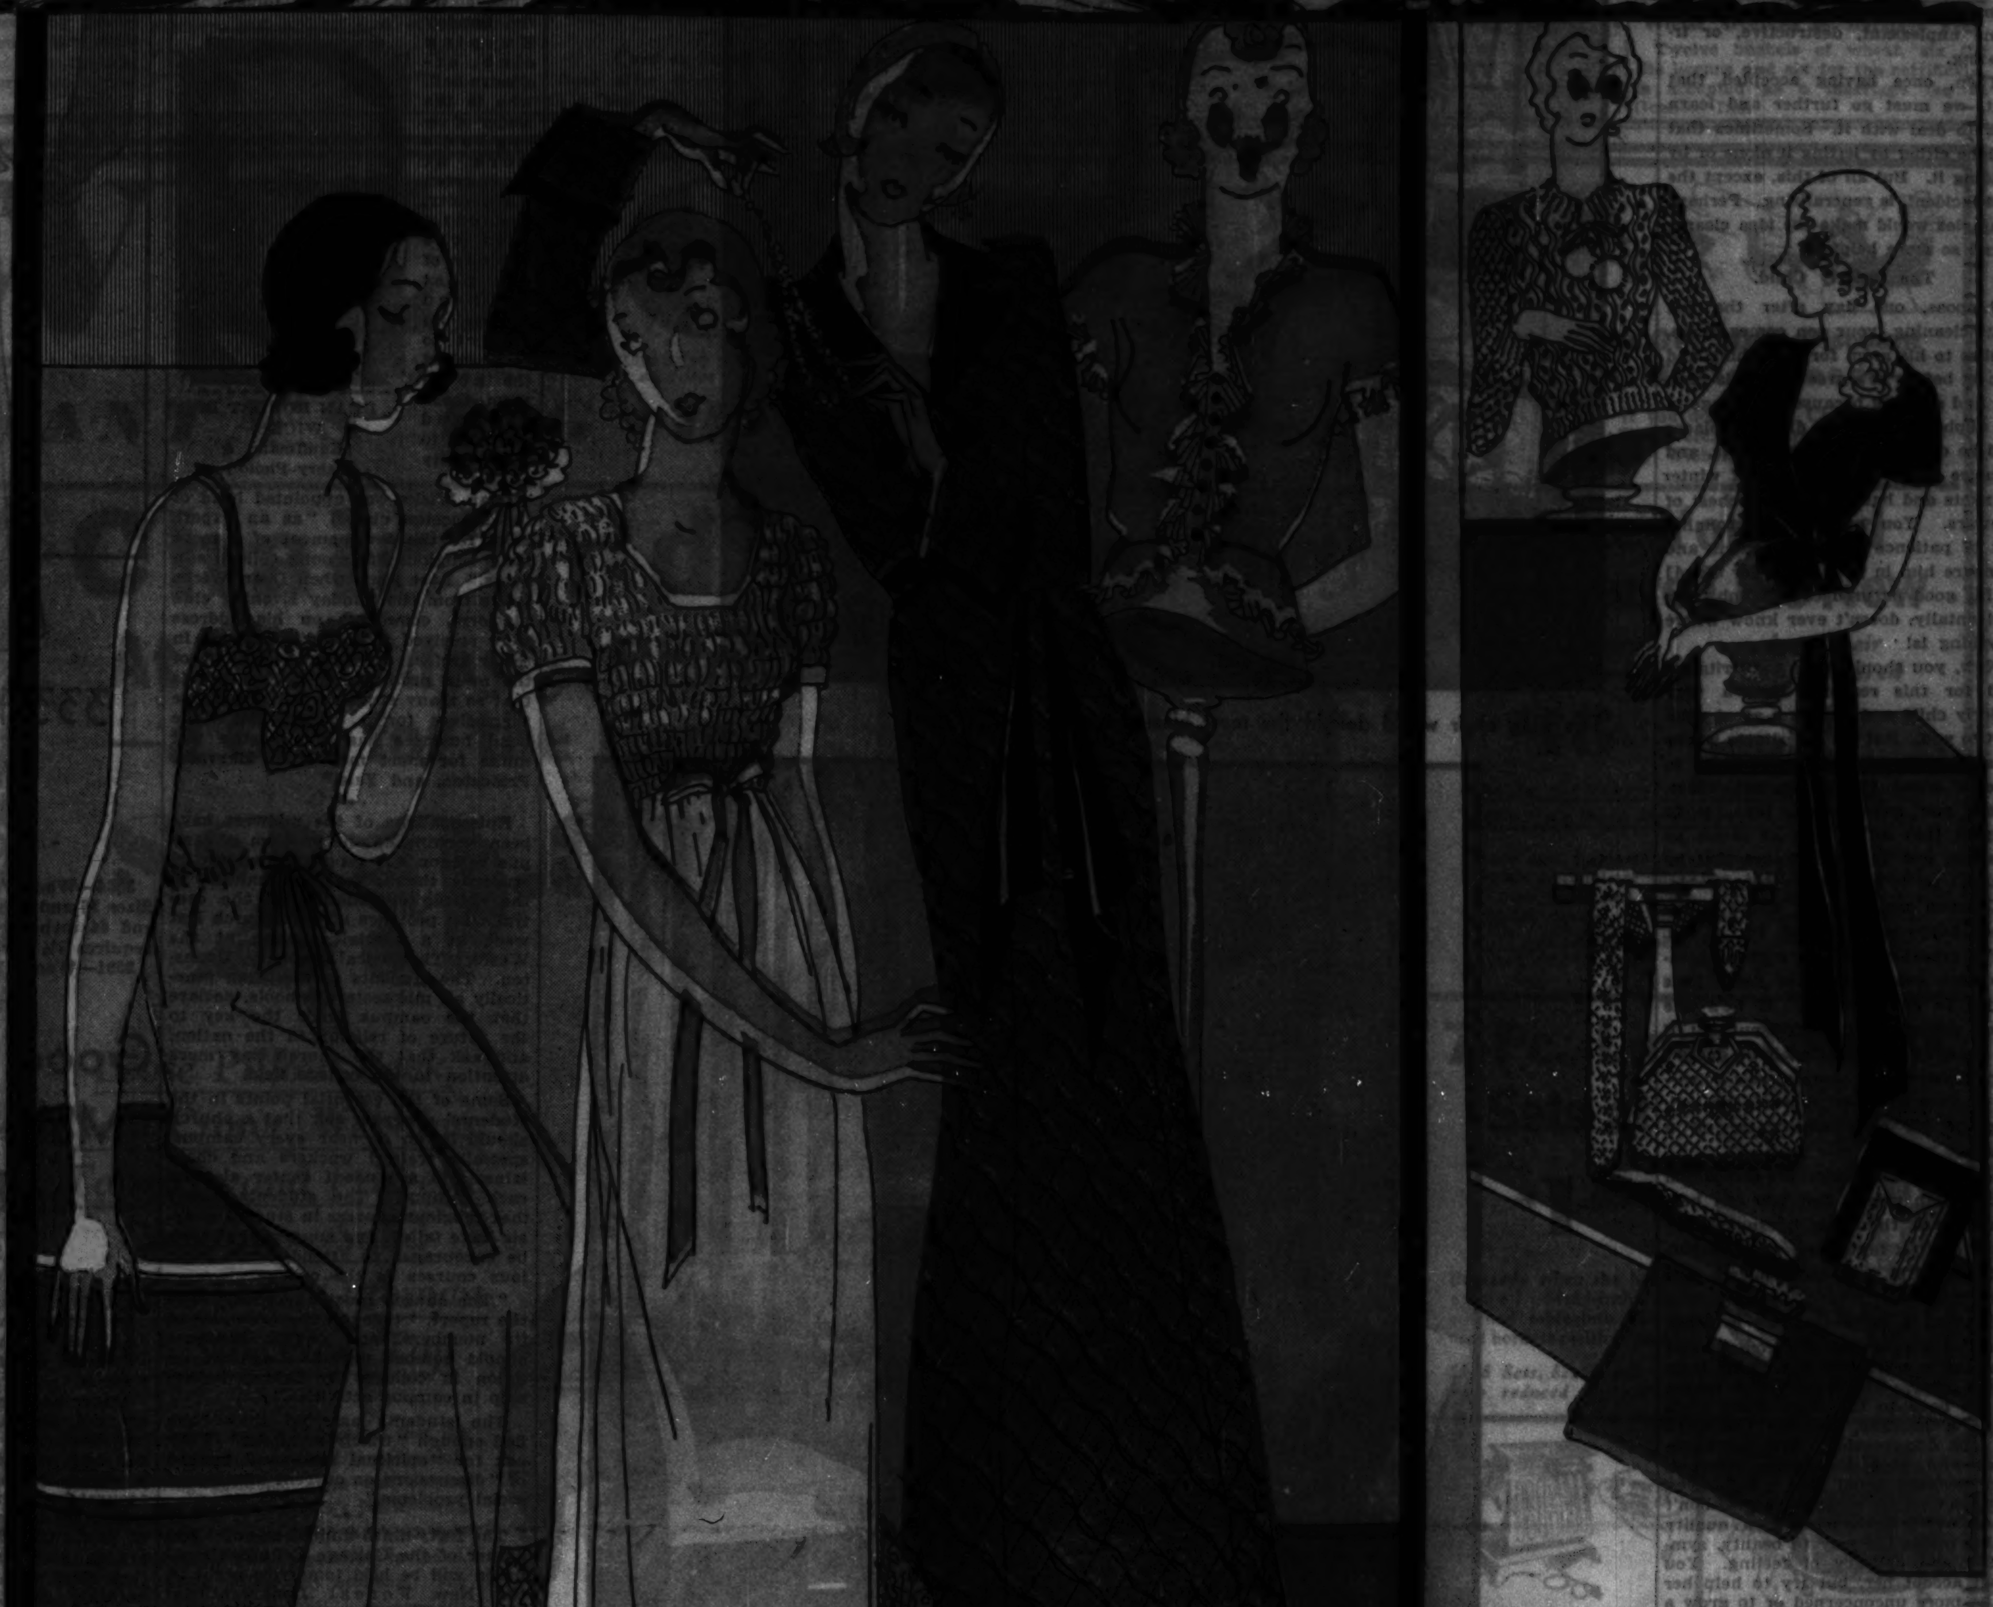
WITH the possible exception of small children, their are none of us who relish particularly seeing "the wheels go round" in our domestic establishment. And the more modern our home or apartment, the more we try to conceal its working parts.

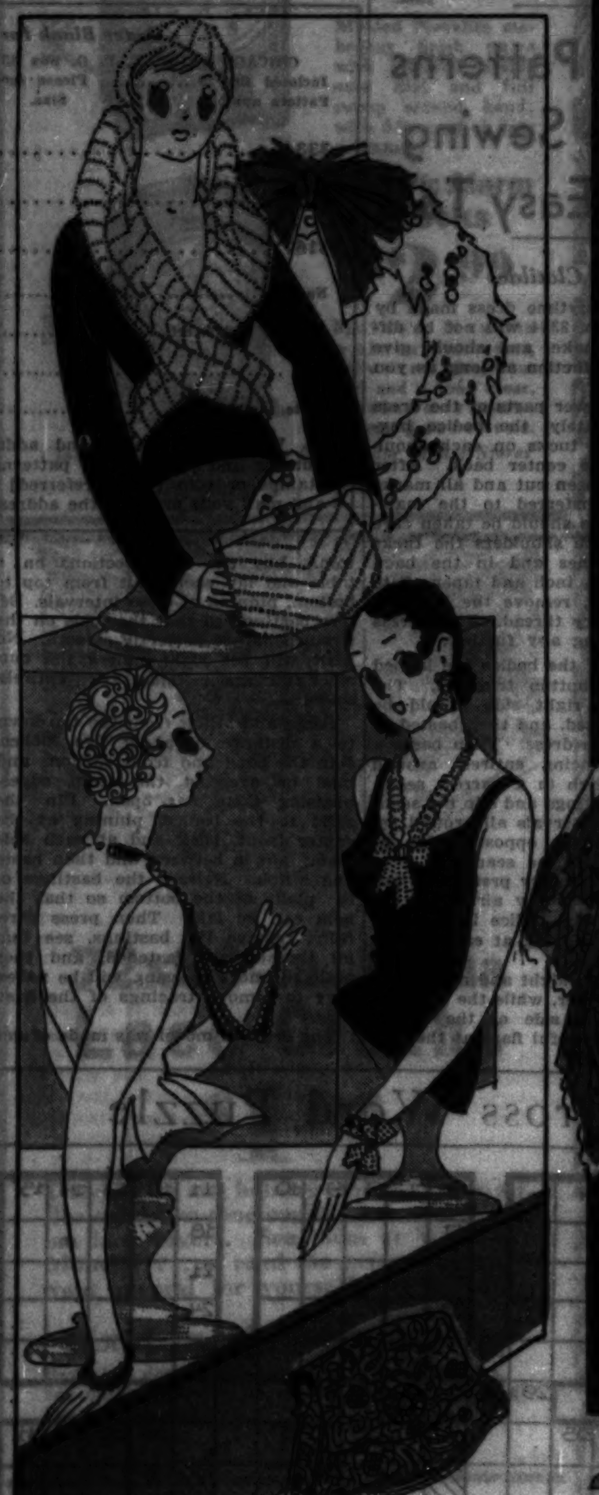
As one of the chief aids to this concealment, the present day version of the ever useful screen appears in many guises.

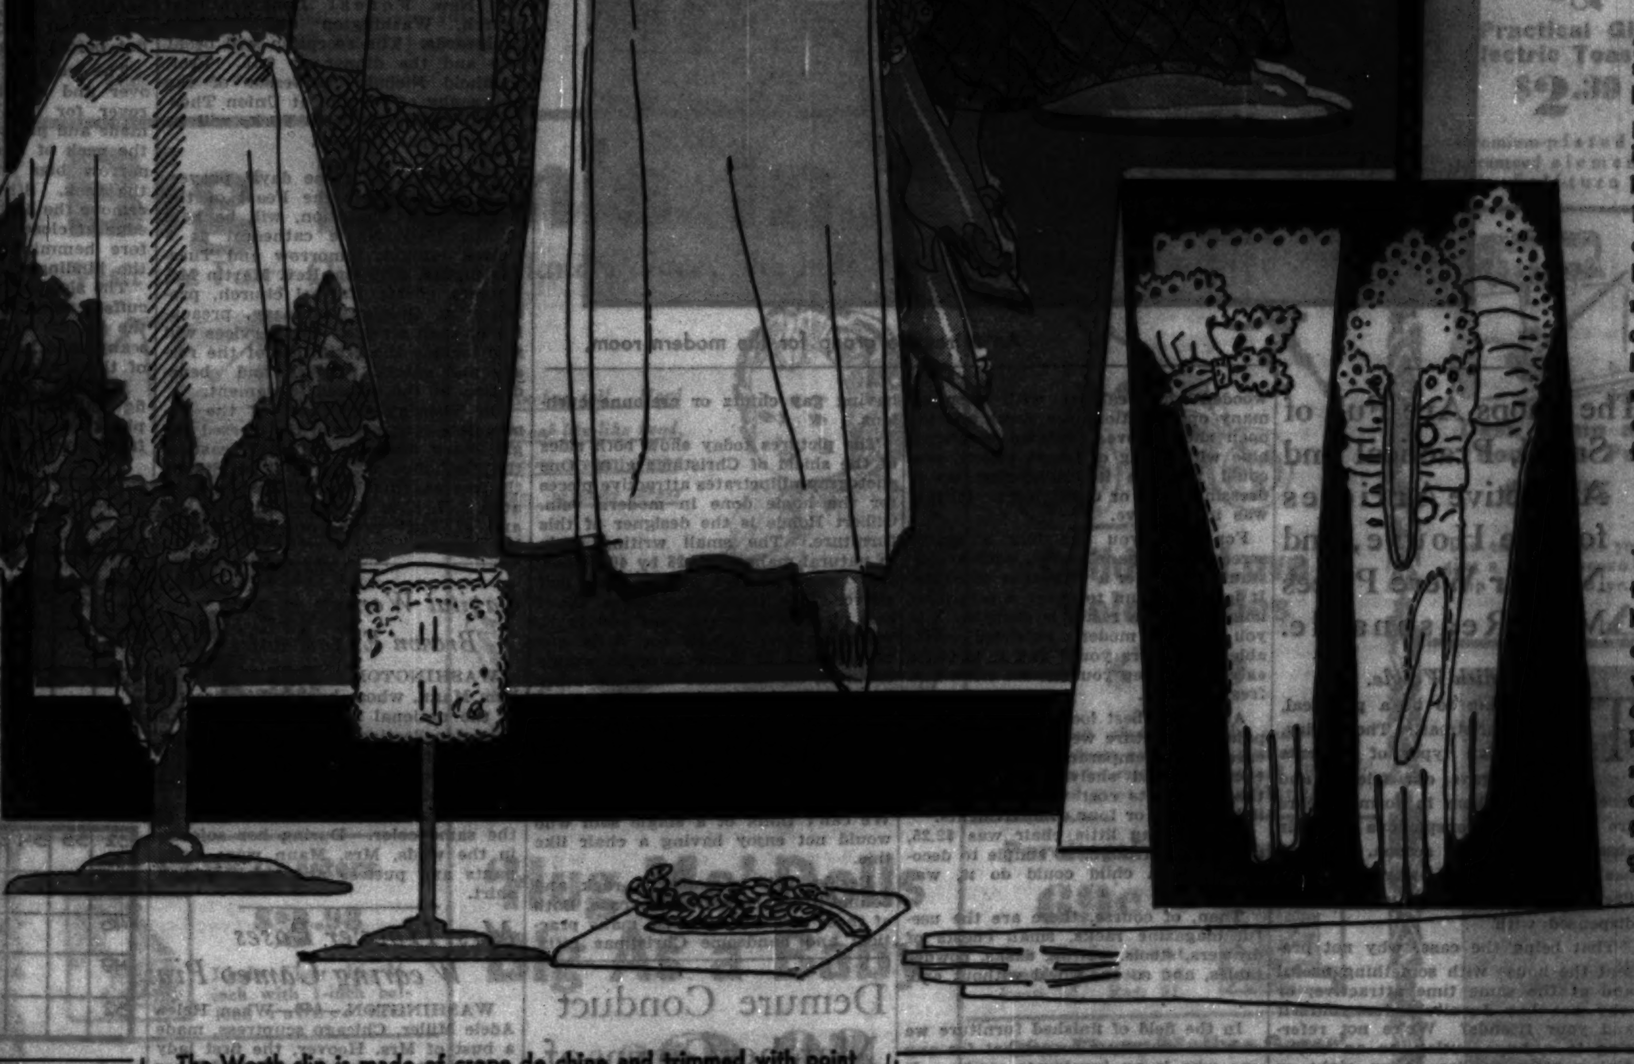
Perhaps there is a sewing nook to be hidden, or a breakfast corner, or a bit of space where galoshes and overcoats, caps and rubbers must be kept available for wintry days, or a work box and tool chest belonging to the kiddies, precious indeed, but far from ornamental!

Whatever our interior decorative scheme or whatever our individual needs, there are screens of full length, half length, three-quarter length—almost any length. These screens may be had in period, modernistic, conventional or illustrative designs. As for the covering, it may be chintz or brocade, wall paper or leather, and if we have screen frames left from days gone by, there is no reason we cannot cover them or have them covered in some handsome material, and brought to life again in the manner moderne.

The double-crossing ermine scarf and muff purse, shown below, are the smartest fur accessories of the season. In jewels, Paris runs to the extreme opulence of this necklace and bracelet from Cartier in rubies, pearls and emeralds, polished like beads, or to the quaint simplicity of this necklace, bracelet and earrings of seed pearls trimmed with bowknots. The Worth bag is of beige lace and fastened by a circle of pearls and rhinestones.







Above: The very short wool lace sweater is smart, and this Lucile Paray model is trimmed with wool pompoms. The short velvet evening jacket, as portrayed, is a chic inside wrap. It is cut surplice-fashion with long sash ends. To set off the simple velvet frock, Paris likes this belt and bag of dull-silver spangles. The latest cigaret case is made of gold, which is limp like leather. This one has a sapphire clasp. The daytime bag of violet kid, with its monogram for a clasp, is Worth's newest.

The lower row of objects shows the big and the little of the smart handkerchief. The big one is made of chiffon and bordered with lace, while the tiny square is embroidered linen. The newest clip pin is a diamond feather. The new short evening gloves from Alexandrine fit the wrists closely and are trimmed with pinking. Very long gloves are smart, too, this season.

The Worth slip is made of crepe de chine and trimmed with point lace. The new nightgown is like a dinner dress. Annek makes it of white georgette, and gives it a shirred bodice and sleeves. The newest lounging robes are tailored coats, like the one here, which is made of quilted satin and has revers, buttons and girdle of black velvet. The Worth blouse is made of chiffon and trimmed with jet buttons and plaited frills. French women are charmed with it.

Fashion Notes From Paris

Waistlines are getting more waspish every day, what with coats and dresses having such broad shoulders, skirts being so tight, and belts cinched up to the last hole. The eighteen inch waist is threatened.

Fluted jersey that looks as if it just came from the crimping iron is the newest sports material from Jane Regny.

Brown is winning out in the race of colors to head the Paris styles this winter. Many smart women have abandoned black for brown.

Worth is busy costuming a smart all white wedding, with both bride and bridesmaids wearing white satin. The only color note will be the red velvet hats of the bridesmaids.

Lynx is rapidly becoming the fashion favorite for trimming black coats.

Plum Pudding Is Due Family at Christmas

By Mary Meade.

CHRISTMAS is a jolly season for those of us who like to cook. We get out in the kitchen and stir up all the old favorites and experiment with new things and could be perfectly happy, even if there weren't such other pleasures as decorating our houses with little fir trees, mistletoe boughs and holly wreaths—besides the fun of buying and wrapping family presents. It's the time of the year when no old-fashioned kitchen is too big to hold all the holiday baking—no kitchenette too small to permit concocting a few special Christmasy things. There's a lot of neighborly exchanging of recipes, unearthing of old cook books, and shopping for strange spices and intriguing new staples.

Probably the most important item of the Christmas dinner is the meat. If you are one of those people who become sentimental about Tiny Tim and Cratchit's goose, then goose will be what you serve your family. After the meat course has been determined, the next most important thing is the Christmas pudding. Today I am giving recipes for three excellent puddings, all of which are different and equally delicious. There is a suet pudding, a New England plum pudding, and a real old English plum pudding. They all have certain fundamental requirements in common.

Check Ingredients.

When you start your pudding, do assemble all your ingredients together and check each carefully before you combine them. Plum puddings are like fruit cakes in that they possess many component parts. When you come to include the fruit, flour it lightly so that the fruit won't stick together and congregate in one large lump in the pudding. Stir the dough well to distribute the ingredients, and if your arm aches from handling the heavy mixture remember that Christmas comes but once a year.

The English plum pudding recipe is insistent on having the pudding boiled in a cloth. This is, of course, the traditional method, and its does result in a lovely spherical pudding that is beautiful to look at. However, the sad fact is that the pudding is also rather heavy. It's a matter of personal preference whether or not you want to cook your pudding in this, the real old English manner, or whether you

Child's Good Traits Often Have Reverse Side

By Gladys Huntington Bevans.

SHE is a tender hearted, imaginative child and has a passionate love of animals. When she sees one maltreated she goes into a very fury and says she hates the person and wishes she could hurt him the way he's hurting the animal—or even kill him.

Her mother is usually shocked or disapproving at these times, and calls her daughter wicked to talk so and says that she has a bad temper and should learn to control it.

Now, what her mother does not understand is that her little daughter has certain difficult traits that logically go with her fine qualities. This mother is proud that her daughter loves animals, but she has no patience when that protective instinct and hatred of abuse takes the natural expression of fury with any one who hurts them.

The child suffers for the creature and this sympathy shows itself in anger. It is a logical attribute of her fine quality. It should not be flatly condemned. For the child's sake this trait should be guided and put to some use, though all this cannot be done all at once. It is a slow process.

After all, anger like this is a righteous anger and is at the root of the movement for humaneness which is so widespread in America. That kind of anger is usually of the constructive kind. It is the kind which makes crusaders and is responsible for many of the great humanitarian reforms that have gone on in the world.

Needs Careful Handling.

To be sure, such intensity of feeling needs careful handling for the child's sake. It is best guided by a grown person who feels the same surge of feeling over cruelty to animals, for such intensity is not an easy thing for all people to be patient with unless you feel it, too.

A child has to be led to understand that ignorance and lack of imagination lie back of cruelty—farther than that, into the psychological causes, you can't go, of course. Then she can be led to do some positive thing with that love of animals. To join the S. P. C. A., for instance. To contribute to summer funds for watering horses. To keep smaller children from cruelty, and to show them how to take care of the frogs and salamanders and other creatures that they catch in the summer time. [I've seen this leaven work myself]. To have pets of their own and learn the need of the patience and regularity of care that are essential to their training and health.

These are some of the things that would serve as an outlet for this child's intensity of feeling. In some such way as this the little girl's mother could evince her understanding of the fact that each quality has its reverse side, like a medal.

That fact is a necessary thing for parents to realize. It's rather difficult to put the idea into words. We might do it by saying that a good quality has its inconvenient or bad side, or that a positive quality has its negative side. Or that an advantageous trait has its disadvantages. Or that we parents must take the bitter with the sweet. What we mean is that parents have learn to accept this: That each kind of character, disposition or temperament of a child that is agreeable, or fine, or easy to live with, has its complementary side which may become unpleasant, destructive, or irritating.

Then, once having accepted that fact, we must go further and learn how to deal with it. Sometimes that is done either by letting it alone or by guiding it. But all of this, except the first incident, is generalizing. Perhaps examples would make the idea clearer—and so more helpful.

The Orderly Child.

Suppose, one day after the fall housecleaning, your son comes home, dashes to his room for something and almost before he's greeted you is fussing and scolding because the things in his cupboard are all in different places and he can't find what he wants, and because you've parked a lot of winter blankets and bathrobes on his chest of drawers. You may get thoroughly out of patience with his actions and compare him in your mind [or aloud] to his good natured cousin Bob, who incidentally, doesn't ever know where anything is!

Now, you shouldn't be too irritated, and for this reason. He's a very orderly child and that is a great comfort to you. But his orderliness works this way, too—that he's not going to like it when his things get upset. What you have to do, then, is to respect that orderliness as much as possible, and help him to see that he mustn't let it make him disagreeable.

Or, you may have a sunny, carefree, happy-go-lucky lad for a son. He's agreeable, obliging, nothing bothers him, everybody likes him. He's a joy to have around. If he's like that you mustn't be too put out if he evades responsibilities, if he doesn't care whether his home work's done—or if your talks or reproofs go rolling off his back like water off a duck's.

You can't blame him; his disposition works both ways. But you can help him, if you think his irresponsibility amounts to a fault, to a more serious outlook. But you can't blame and scold him.

So with a daughter who is sensitive and imaginative. She comes home tense, or in tears over a scolding from her teacher. She doesn't like taking things back to the store when she's made a mistake, because the clerk may be disagreeable. You get impatient and wish she were different, and perhaps scold her. Well, you shouldn't. Real sensitiveness—I don't mean oversensitiveness—is a quality which opens the way to beauty, sympathy and delicacy of feeling. You must accept her, but try to help her to be more unconcerned or to grow a little shell to act as a buffer out in the world. You can't have it going and coming, you know!

Study Your Child.

So, study your child.

Does your daughter want things very hard, enjoy them intensely? And then take disappointments to heart and affect everybody around her, besides making herself miserable?

Is your son independent and a nonconformist—qualities which you very much admire? But does he sometimes question authority—object to doing what he hates just because every one else does, and perhaps embarrass you?

Has he great power of concentration, a valuable possession? But does he not answer you half the time and neglect to rise to bid your guests farewell because he's lost in reading or studying or drawing?

All these things work both ways.

The psychologist will talk to you about the negative and positive side of every instinct or emotion. For instance, the instinct of selfpreservation may show itself negatively in the form of fear which is panic, a destructive thing, or as caution which is a positive, constructive and necessary thing. So with your child's characteristics—the positive ones may have a negative side.

Study your child. If he has certain desirable qualities or a certain well defined temperament, accept and admire it. But also recognize the inconvenient or even unpleasant or destructive form that it may take when run to an extreme or when under a tension, and handle it properly.

Soviet Appoints Woman as Minister to Sweden

Mme. Alexandra Kollanty, aged 59, Russia's minister to Sweden, occupies the highest post given to a woman in the soviet government. She was the first of her sex to become a member of the new Russian régime and twice was a commissar, or cabinet member, before being assigned to diplomatic duties.

"Aerial hostesses" on transcontinental passenger air routes between New York City and San Francisco, Cal., spend their business days approximately a mile above the earth and traveling at a speed of 125 miles an hour.

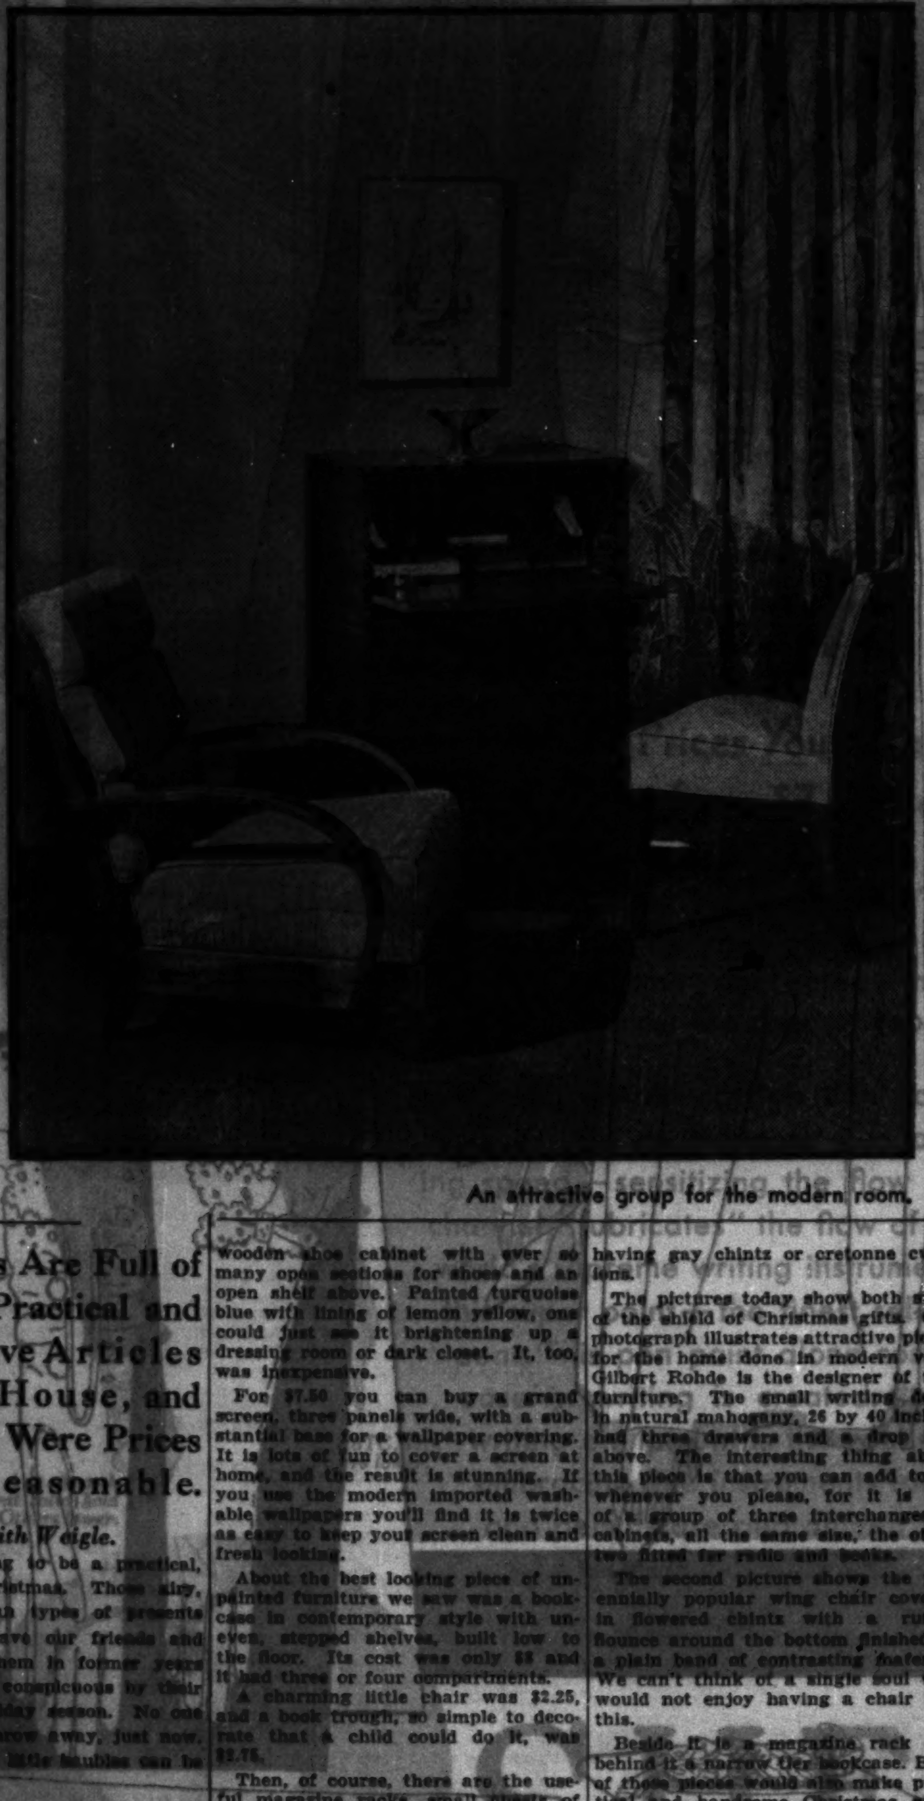
Baltimore, Md., has two women who are qualified airplane mechanics—Miss Rose A. Supe and Miss Mary W. K. Miller. They can take an airplane engine apart and put it together again without a thought for the effects of grime.

Gertrude Miller of Lima, O., has been reelected and is now beginning her fourth term as constable. During her service, 579 men and about 25 women have been arrested by her without the slightest trouble.

Wang Kwei-fen, aged 24, daughter of the noted Chinese revolutionary hero, Gen. Wang Chou Chin, is planning an airplane flight around the world. She learned to fly while a student in American universities.

Furniture for Christmas Giving

This wing chair would delight the most blasé person.



An attractive group for the modern room.

The Shops Are Full of Small, Practical and Attractive Articles for the House, and Never Were Prices More Reasonable.

By Edith Weigle.

THIS is going to be a practical, thrifty Christmas. Those airy, fairy Lillian types of presents that we gave our friends and received from them in former years are going to be conspicuous by their absence this holiday season. No one has money to throw away, just now. Pretty, frivolous little baubles can be dispensed with.

That being the case, why not present the house with something useful and at the same time attractive; or why not buy furniture for yourself and your friends? We're not referring to a huge outlay, to an entire dining room service or an eight or nine piece bedroom suite. What we mean is something comparatively small both in size and price, but something that will serve a purpose the year around.

The Chicago stores are brimming over with ideas for a practical Christmas. A stroll through the furniture shops and the furniture sections of the department stores will convince any one that for an exceedingly trivial amount of money one can pick up any number of useful and good looking things for the house.

Just to show you we're in earnest about thrift, glance over the following items, all of which were seen in the unpainted furniture section of a large State street department store:

There was an excellent nest of three tables in unfinished birch, just waiting for the paint brush, and ready to fit into any desired color scheme, and the price was only $12.50.

An adorable little hanging shelf with lattice sides that seemed the very thing for the tiny figurines and porcelain canines now so popular, was exactly $1.50. All it needed was a coat of paint.

A most practical gift would be a wooden shoe cabinet with ever so many open sections for shoes and an open shelf above. Painted turquoise blue with lining of lemon yellow, one could just see it brightening up a dressing room or dark closet. It, too, was inexpensive.

For $7.50 you can buy a grand screen, three panels wide, with a substantial base for a wallpaper covering. It is lots of fun to cover a screen at home, and the result is stunning. If you use the modern imported washable wallpapers you'll find it is twice as easy to keep your screen clean and fresh looking.

About the best looking piece of unpainted furniture we saw was a bookcase in contemporary style with uneven, stepped shelves, built low to the floor. Its cost was only $8 and it had three or four compartments.

A charming little chair was $2.25, and a book trough, so simple to decorate that a child could do it, was $2.75.

Then, of course, there are the useful magazine racks, small chests of drawers, stools, writing desks, powder tables, and so on, world without end.

In the field of finished furniture we saw one awfully nice present for any one who is an inveterate reader. It was a long, slender table that slips over your chair. A center section lifts to hold your book, and what a boon that is if you're reading a weighty tome! In mahogany, this table costs $14.50.

A muffin stand of the same wood and extremely easy to lift and carry about is $14, and a beautiful little circular tier table, in the 18th century English manner, with a carved pineapple top for a handle, was priced at about the same figure.

We discovered that even card tables can be "different." One with a maple base and three brass tipped feet, a la Duncan Phyfe, had a top surface completely covered with a decorative French picture. This had been given an antique, crackled finish. When the card table was not in use the top folded, like any tilt table, and the picture made a fire screen. A very chic idea.

The children are lucky, this Christmas, who are given little chairs and tables, beds, chests, and even highboys of early American maple in authentic copies of antiques. Also, there are pretty and inexpensive things for them in reed and wicker, the chairs having gay chintz or cretonne cushions.

The pictures today show both sides of the shield of Christmas gifts. One photograph illustrates attractive pieces for the home done in modern vein. Gilbert Rohde is the designer of this furniture. The small writing desk, in natural mahogany, 26 by 40 inches, had three drawers and a drop leaf above. The interesting thing about this piece is that you can add to it, whenever you please, for it is one of a group of three interchangeable cabinets, all the same size, the other two fitted for radio and books.

The second picture shows the perennially popular wing chair covered in flowered chintz with a ruffled flounce around the bottom finished in a plain band of contrasting material. We can't think of a single soul who would not enjoy having a chair like this.

Beside it is a magazine rack and behind it a narrow tier bookcase. Both of these pieces would also make practical and handsome Christmas gifts.

Demure Conduct Matches Gowns of Washington Debs

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Decorous manner seems the rule for the 1931 capital debutante who goes to gay Paree for her pert nose veil and back to grandmother's day for her demure nosegay.

Sometimes the latter is made of mignonette and heliotrope. The veil is the "greatest thing" to flirt through—and how some debbies use it!

But this deb limits her mischief to her eyes. Her feet move sedately.

There's no hoydenish prancing and cavorting in the ballroom as there was a season or so ago.

Long skirts and hair are thought to be partly responsible for the change.

Just One Godet.

PARIS.—(AP)—House pajamas made of one godet are Paris' latest offering in the trousered mode. The pajamas are designed with a close fitting bodice to which one pointed full godet is attached at the waistline and fitted closely around the hips. The godet falls in the form of a skirt in front and is divided only in the back. An outstanding model is of purple satin.

Dean Wicks of Princeton at Evening Club

Religion Coming Back to the Campus, Say Many of the University Workers

By the Rev. John Evans.

RELIGION is coming back to the campus life of American universities—if, indeed, it ever left. So say all university religious workers. However, Dean Robert Russell Wicks, speaker tonight at the Sunday Evening club, orchestra hall, who is the leader of religious work at Princeton university, indicates that the difficulty of the past has been due to an effort to transplant the home town theology and methods to university conditions.

DEAN ROBERT R. WICKS.
[Kauffmann & Fabry Photo.]

Dean Wicks was appointed head of the Princeton chapel "as an experiment for the development of a more virile religious life among college students." Last year, when Dean Wicks spoke from the Sunday Evening club platform, comments on his address were received from radio listeners in thirty states. He asserts that one of the main problems of college life is that so many students fail to prepare themselves for a career that "the bond business has become the wet nurse for most men from Harvard, Princeton, and Yale."

Episcopalians of the midwest have been working on the problem of campus religion. A report drawn up by students themselves was handed to the college commission of the central west province of that church last week at a special meeting at the Western Theological seminary, Evanston. The students representing practically all midwestern schools, declare that the campus holds the key to the future of religion in the nation, and ask that the church pay more attention to the college field.

Some of the essential points in the students' program ask that a church should be on or near every campus; specially trained workers and chaplains, and a student center also on each campus. The students assert that religious courses in student chapels have failed, and suggest that they be encouraged to attend credit religious courses in the college.

"The church must advertise," says the report, "through the examples of its members, and church students should combat prejudice against religion in colleges by taking leadership in campus activities."

The students asserted they have had enough "timely sermons." They ask for "spiritual sermons," instead of "discussions on current events and social problems."

The forty-ninth annual meeting and dinner of the Chicago Congregational union will be held tomorrow night at the New Forest Congregational church, Washington and Ashland boulevards. The reception will be at 5:30 and the dinner at 6:15. Prof. Reinhold Niebuhr, professor of the philosophy of religion at Union Theological seminary, New York, will be the principal speaker.

A triduum, or three days' prayer, in preparation for the Feast of the Immaculate Conception, will be held in the Holy Name cathedral at 8 o'clock tonight, tomorrow and Tuesday nights, with the Rev. Martin McNamara of Mt. Carmel church, professor at Quigley seminary, preaching at each service. The services will also include the recitation of the rosary and special prayers, and benediction of the blessed sacrament.

On Tuesday the feast of the immaculate conception of the blessed virgin Mary and the patronal feast of the Catholics of the United States, the masses in the cathedral will be at 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, and 11:45 a. m. and at 12:15 noon, and will all be low masses.

Capital Woman Wears Brown Edged with Pink

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Mrs. William Mann, whose husband is director of the national zoo, is back from an animal collecting expedition with her husband in British Guiana, wearing a smart brown wool dress edged with narrow piping of pink.

Her small hat is a crush crochet of the same color. During her sojourn in the wilds, Mrs. Mann wore army pants and puttees and thick woolen shirt.

Mrs. Hoover Poses Wearing Cameo Pin

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—When Helen Adele Miller, Chicago scuptress, made a bust of Mrs. Hoover, the first lady posed with a large cameo pin on her breast. Mrs. Hoover has several colonial dresses which adapt themselves to cameo decoration. One is ivory satin shot through with a gold thread. It has a bertha collar of lace.

Gold Safety Pins Are New Fastening for Belts

PARIS.—(AP)—Safety pins are in style. New suede belts in beige, brown and black are fastened in front with four inch gold safety pins instead of buckles, and a number of sports coats are using the huge pins to fasten scarf collars close about throats.

Professor Sees Baseball as Help to Housework

Dr. Edward L. Cornell, professor at Northwestern university of Evanston, Ill., advocates a course in baseball for girls and women as an aid to housework. The idea, he explained, is that if girls know how to handle a ball they would not be as apt to drop carelessly a baby on the floor or break their best china.

Good Patterns Make Sewing an Easy Task

By Clotilde.

THE chic daytime dress made by pattern No. 3334 will not be difficult to make, and should give great satisfaction as long as you wear it.

Upper and lower parts of the dress are cut separately, the bodice having clusters of tucks on each shoulder and at the center back. After the dress has been cut and all marks accurately transferred to the material, these tucks should be taken care of first. On the shoulders the tucks are ⅛ inch ones and in the back they start at ⅛ inch and taper off to nothing. Stitch, remove the bastings and fasten every thread. Then press flat before going any further.

The fronts of the bodice are lapped over and are button trimmed. The rever for the right side should be made and pressed, and then basted to the neck of the dress. Then baste a narrow bias facing entirely around the neck. Stitch in a narrow seam, remove the bastings and clip the seam edge at close intervals all around before hemming the opposite edge of the binding over the seam.

The sleeves are very pretty, the tab cuffs lending a jaunty air. Turn in the bottom of the bodice in an even seam's width, clipping at each corner of the scallops.

The skirt is straight and makes the figure look slender, while the inverted plaits at either side of the center front give a graceful flare at the bottom. Lay the skirt sections on a table and lay each plait from top to bottom, pinning at close intervals. Before basting see that the folds on the wrong side are perfectly smooth. No plait will set right unless the outside and under folds are entirely smooth.

Baste and stitch from the top down to a distance of about five inches. Join the back and front sections and bind or overcast the seam edges, pressing them flat open. Pin the skirt to the bodice, pinning at the center front, back and at each side seam; pin in between and then baste and stitch. Release the bastings of the plaits at the bottom so that the hem can be laid. Then press carefully, remove the bastings, see that all threads are fastened, and then probably more pressing will be necessary to remove tracings of the bastings.

The original model was made of one of those supple woolens—fine lines in brown—with plain brown buttons and a wide patent leather belt.

You can hardly have too many blouses this season, and this Viennese model, No. 3167, is one of the prettiest. It is made with a sharp diagonal closing that is decidedly slimming, and the buttons are decorative. The softly falling revers also help to detract from width, and the sleeves with the deep flared cuffs, are up to the minute detail.

A picture chart that comes with the pattern shows clearly the manner of putting together and finishing. In fitting the blouse be sure and put on the skirt over which it is to be worn, and while the peplum should fit perfectly smoothly, having it even a little too tight will spoil its appearance. Haven't you ever noticed how many times you see women pulling at a blouse to keep it in place? This is because it is too tight. Wool crêpe and Canton faille crêpe are beautifully suited to this model.

The vest and panties made by pattern No. 2591 show one how to do away with all unnecessary undergarments; and if you are wearing a woolen sports frock, this undergarment will be all that is necessary under the dress. The panties with flared fullness will take the place of a slip, and they button at each side. At the top they are attached to a perfectly fitted yoke, insuring a snug hipline. They may be lace trimmed at the bottom or given a tailored appearance by an evenly laid hem.

The vest or skirt is cut with a curved V both at the front and back, and it is fitted to serve as a brassière. It opens at the left underarm seam and is finished in the usual way with narrow faced and extension hems. Shoulder straps hold the vest in place.

Crêpe de chine, flat silk crêpe, and crêpe satin are popular materials.

Adult Plays Indian.

One Sunday my son, Junior, and I went for a hike in the woods and played cowboy and Indians. We would creep through the underbrush and make a surprise attack on each other. It had been quiet for about five minutes when I heard him coming along a nearby path. I crept out on my stomach to frighten him, and upon reaching the spot let out a blood curdling cry. Then I looked up to see a much frightened young couple staring at me in amazement. M. H. K.

A Step Downward.

Feeling the need of a bookcase for my den and not wishing to invest heavily in it, I decided to buy a second hand one.

The first seller I visited lived in a bungalow and the bookcase was stored in the attic. I mounted the stairs and walked down a narrow avenue of flooring, the laths and plastering forming the remainder of the floor space.

Before I had time to ask the price, I lost my balance, and my right leg, missing the platform on which I was standing, plunged through the ceiling of the parlor below. Down went laths, plaster and wallpaper at the feet of two guests who were seated below. Naturally, I bought the bookcase, and have since laughed many times at the probable bewildered expression on the faces of the men below when they saw a leg dash through the ceiling. W. H. L.

Classmates Giggled.

One fateful day I was reviewing my civics lesson as I entered the classroom. An object loomed before me. Without looking up, I stepped aside, and said, "Pardon me." The giggles from others in the room caused me to look up—at a large map on a stand and no person at all. Embarrassed? My blushes will tell. B. F.

A Slip of the Tongue.

Any woman can readily appreciate the blackness of my most embarrassing moment. A friend, whom I had not seen for years, telephoned that she was in town. We made an appointment for luncheon downtown. I saw my friend before she saw me and was terribly surprised that she had aged so. I knew that she had passed through a distressing series of misfortunes but, at that, I could hardly reconcile this almost aged looking person with the young woman I'd known a few years before. As I approached her I noticed how beautifully groomed she was, just the last word in smartness, so, naturally, wanting to say something pleasant, my first impulse was to say, after the greeting was over: "My dear, how nice you are looking!" I meant it so sincerely that I would, of course, have put a great deal of zest into it, but pity me forever when I tell you that I looked at her sweetly and said with much feeling: "My dear, how old you are looking!" The old subconscious will have its say! W. B.

Locked Pay for Lunch.

I went out to lunch with a perfectly good pay check, intending to go to the bank, get it cashed, and then to lunch. Being pay day, it was not unnatural that my purse was depleted.

By mistake, I went to the restaurant first and, after enjoying a good meal, discovered that I did not have sufficient money to pay for it. I had to "stand off" the manager with the threadbare story that "I would be back." Apparently there was nothing else for him to do, so he let me go and I DID come back, but I felt like the 30 cents that I owed for the lunch. B. T. A.

One Shoe Off, One Shoe On.

My most embarrassing moment happened one morning when I was running from one street car to another. My slipper suddenly became lazy and stayed behind, while I was left running, one shoe on and one shoe off. A young man whom I had repeatedly tried to impress, witnessed my dilemma, and gallantly rescued the shoe and returned it to me with the remark: "Haven't you forgotten something, Cinderella?" D. C.

Deviled Chicken.

Cut up any left-over chicken into dice. Thoroughly mix one tablespoon of dry mustard, 1 teaspoon salt, a little cayenne pepper, 2 tablespoons of lemon juice, 2 tablespoons of melted butter, and 2 tablespoons of water. [This quantity is for four cups of chicken, and should be adapted to lesser amounts.] Put this mixture in a saucepan and when hot pour in the chicken and a half cup of chicken stock. Stir the whole until hot, and serve on toasted bread slices. E. W. B.

Answers to Love Queries

Have you a perplexing love affair on which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care of The Chicago Tribune, Chicago, Ill., inclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Disregard Salary.

"Dear Miss Blake: Would it be all right to ask the girl I like for a date, even if she makes a larger salary than I? "BUDDY."

You like her, so disregard the fact that her salary is larger.

Letter Unwelcome.

"Dear Miss Blake: I received a letter from the one I don't care for. Shall I answer it? "WONDERING."

Don't encourage him when he does not appeal to you.

Card Is Sufficient.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have gone with a boy five months. His birthday is soon. What shall I give him? "ELAINE."

A birthday card will convey your good wishes. That's the important thing.

Age Quandary.

"Dear Miss Blake: At 18, I love a fellow of 25. Is he too old for me? "WONDERING."

No, if you have ideas and tastes in common.

Keep a Beau Reserve.

"Dear Miss Blake: My friend says he loves me, but pays more attention to other girls. What should I do? "BLUE EYES."

Have other beaux in reserve.

Futile Efforts.

"Dear Miss Blake: My friend and his girl broke off. I know she loves him, yet I want her. Please advise. "BAILEY."

If you know she's in love with another, your efforts to win her would be futile.

It's a Losing Game.

"Dear Miss Blake: I went with a fellow a year. Now he goes with another girl. Can I win him back? "LAURA."

You're playing a losing game, as a rule, when you attempt to reawaken an interest which has been transferred to another.

A Hopeless Task.

"Dear Miss Blake: I love a boy who loved me. How can I win him back? "BROKEN HEARTED."

It's rather a hopeless task. Why not devote your time to other young men instead?

'Get Your Man' Urgent Order to New Femme

Attitude of Restrained Maidenly Waiting Loses Out at Altar.

By Doris Blake.

"DON'T you think the world is ripe for a change from the silly old story book idea that the girl must wait to be asked?

"Why don't you so-called love authorities put the stamp of approval on the 'get your man' policy practiced by most women today?

"Don't you think men have changed at all of recent days?

"Aren't they sitting back, most of them, just waiting for the right little girl to come along and jack 'em up and out of their bachelor lethargy?

"You don't know your modern men if you think they're going to be tripped into matrimony by the dear, sweet, old fashioned one who yearns but doesn't dare yearn out loud!

"Matrimony isn't as attractive to man as it used to be, you know, what with the alimony terrors spread before their eyes, and what with the financial strain of two under the most favorable circumstances. The modern man has to be sold matrimony. And isn't it your 'go get him high powered saleswoman type' that matrimony sales have to be intrusted to? I ask—but I know the answer. As must you, and you, if you've been watching the husband grabbing game as it is played nowadays.

"The girl who sits and waits, believe an interested onlooker, just keeps on sitting.

"In my opinion, she ought to sit only long enough to work out a plan of attack and then go get him by hook or crook. NEW MODEL."

Food for Argument.

And that's something for a sorority or bridge club luncheon argument!

Just how far may a girl go in coercing a man into matrimony? How much of the initiative may she take? To what extent may she carry out her well organized "go get him" plan? Does she have to steel herself to rebuffs? Is nerve the most important piece of equipment necessary to success?

The latter question is asked because the same New Model who reproaches us for our outmoded advice reports a specific case in which the girl "has at least five or six swains at any time she wants them. She doesn't need clothes. She doesn't need looks or class or money. Just a telephone."

New Model belongs to a bridge club. Recently the club gave a party. One of the members planned to get her a partner, a man secretly admired for some time. The party was a success. Shortly after the party the young man telephoned. It was New Model's bad luck to be out and miss the call. In the meantime, one of the club members, who met the young man for the first time the night of the party, called him and asked for a date. He accepted and they have been having a grand time ever since. That girl laughs at New Model for being so slow as to let her beat her time. "Why," she asks, "when the chap called on the phone, presumably to make a date, didn't you hop right in and phone him back, stating your regrets for not being home to his call?"

Bears Rival No Ill Will.

And, be it noted to the credit of woman's growing sportsmanship toward woman, New Model bears her rival no ill will. On the contrary, she reports her admiration for the go-getting sister.

"Don't you think, either," she commands, "that when I'm talking of the kind of men you get for the going after that they are any weak specimens. They're not. This one I lost before I changed from an old model to the new is a first rate football player. Shows prowess in other sports. Is not shy or backward or weak in any way. He's exactly what used to be described as a man's man. Probably still is—only the women are annexing the type as their preferred males."

And if that isn't enough to convince one of the advantages of being active-minded where a desirable male is concerned, New Model cites another instance in her immediate experience:

"I have in mind another case of a girl who admired a man, demanded an introduction, told him of her secret infatuation, and then married him. He, like my friend, was a two-fisted he-man with ideas of his own until she came along."

So, from her observations, New Model concludes that "as far as matrimony goes, the go after him girl takes her pick and leaves the crumbs of the table for the old fashioned one brought up on the principle of patiently biding her time.

"Times have changed," she insists, "and it's the woman who carries the club and drags her intended into the cave who gets the cave with the man thrown in."

Big Task to Face.

And maybe she's right! But we doubt if the modern young woman has changed the face of the man hunt so much as she thinks. This authority, at any rate, never gave much credence to the theory that men were lured into the cave by holding them at bay. The modern one only differs from the outmoded models in the nature of the club and, to some extent, in the manner of its wielding. She carried the club all right, loaded with wiles belonging to her day. And, from all accounts [matrimonial records, that is], wielded it pretty successfully. Anyway, her job was just the same—selling the idea of matrimony to the other sex.

The modern miss has a bigger task on hand, with the alimony terrors already spoken of, and also with the greater financial strain of modern marriage. If the emergency seems to call for more drastic methods of selling the marriage idea—then, why not be modern? Why not spot your prey and then rally all the modern forces at your command! Certainly there is no legislation to prevent the experiment. And since getting her man is the most noteworthy success on the books for woman today, why shouldn't she be permitted a free hand? A bold hand, if the occasion calls for it?

Fearful of Women.

There's this angle to support the recommended program of going out to conquer:

Men are more fearful of women than ever they were before. They shy away from her independence of both spirit and purse. They're intimidated by her efficiency and her self-assurance. They suspect that women do not need them as protectors or as meal tickets, or as shock absorbers, or however you want to name the old time position of the male. They've grown cagy in defense of their sex. So it may, indeed, take strong-armed methods to restore the old time confidence. It may take just such frank and open matrimonial selling methods as suggested by New Model to restore their confidence as much wanted life companions.

Anyway, if the old system fails, why not take a fling at the new?

Effective Treatment for Acne

Weather, topography, lack of leisure and myriad other obstacles may conspire to keep skiing out of our exercise schedules, but golf, tennis, riding or walking—indeed any form of exercise that takes us outdoors—will work wonders in restoring healthy complexions.

Indoor exercises, from the setting-up variety to dancing, are beneficial, not only physically, but mentally, since they give our minds an alternative to brooding over our real and fancied ills.

Dreaded Skin Eruption May Be Conquered When Right Care Is Followed Faithfully.

By Antoinette Donnelly.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—Only those who suffer acne know the utterly demoralizing effect it has on an individual. Personally I feel that in countless cases the bad effect on the morale is away out of proportion to the actual facial condition. Because of this tendency, too, I find acne sufferers are prone to a helpless discouragement. They give up before they begin trying to effect a cure, or they give up too early in their efforts.

Now that's not the way to go about effecting a change for the better. One should believe that the face can be cleared of acne with intelligent treatment. There's evidence enough to prove it can be done, and today I am going to present you a concrete case to inspire you to a more optimistic view on this particular facial ill.

Acne can't be remedied overnight. There's a stubborn quality to these distorting little troublemakers that you must reckon on. But stubborn as they may be, they simply cannot stand up under the assault of consistent daily treatment. Nor must you depend entirely on local care for a permanent cure. The diet is important and internal cleanliness vastly important.

Taught by Experience.

No one is quite so good an authority as one who has followed a specific treatment to a satisfactory finish. For this reason I am presenting you today an experience sent me by Diana S., a former acne victim, who admits to an abounding sympathy for any young acne victim, because she knows what suffering it entails. Likewise she knows the condition need not be endured, as she learned from the following personal experience.

We'll let Miss Diana S. talk:

"Acne is a disease of the skin and is disfiguring if it becomes chronic. You are all acquainted with what it is like and are probably much more interested in its cure than its nature.

"Did you ever see a girl or boy who had acne who was really popular? Now, by that I mean a girl who chronically has several of the unsightly blemishes on her face. She can't be because she is constantly thinking of the evil little things and when she does she feels that every one notices them and that brings on a sense of inferiority which takes from her chances of being popular. She knows the pimples are there even if the other fellow doesn't notice them as she does. Most of the abrasions pain and hurt. Most of them are red and unsightly. It means heartbreak when you look into the mirror if you have a chronic mess of the things. But, they can be cured. It means WORK. Now, most of you will shy away when I mention work.

"First of all you must know that acne is aggravated by certain things that we eat. You simply cannot eat these things and get away with it, that is, if you want to cure your acne. You must not eat any sweets at all; there must be no fats or starches. I say none because if I grant that you could eat a tiny bit you would probably eat two chocolates instead of one if you were allowed one. For, if a thing is forbidden it immediately takes on the color of the thing we want most.

Water Absolutely Necessary.

"You have to be absolutely clean. Especially must you be clean inside. Your digestive tract must be beautifully clean. There assuredly must be at least eight tall glasses of water a day. That water is absolutely necessary.

"Perhaps I should enumerate the steps in the cure of acne. And I know that they will cure acne. You must try this plan whole-heartedly for at least one whole month. The results will be so amazing that you won't want to quit.

"1. Start in with the water and every time you drink a glassful mark it down on a pad that you shall keep. Try a glass of water with a touch of lemon juice in it upon arising. Have the water lukewarm. That is one glass. Drink three before noon and three after. Then before retiring drink another warm glassful with the lemon or orange juice without sugar. Don't sweeten it. When you visit the drug store avoid anything but a fruit drink, without sugar. Sour lemonades and orangeades will make you wince, but at the same time you'll remember the cause.

"2. As I said, keeping clean inside is the most important. Keeping clean outside is important, too. People with acne should not use creams, for they may spread the germs. Wash your face frequently with warm water and soap. Rinse in lukewarm water and then apply cold water to shrink the pores. People with oily skins shouldn't use creams and people with acne almost always have an oily skin.

"3. Keeping clean inside will make you watch your diet carefully. Here is a menu that will do if you do not deviate from it in the least. It will also help you lose poundage if you wish to.

Wide Choice of Food.

"For breakfast I had my choice of the following: Stewed prunes or apricots without sugar, cantaloupe, grapefruit, orange, lemon, prune, or tomato juice without sugar.

"At lunch there must be an abundance of roughage so that there will be no need for a laxative to keep the insides clean.

"A choice of mangoes, green beans, unseasoned, scads of lettuce every day, shredded raw cabbage, oranges, lemons, grapes, apples, dried peaches, prunes, and apricots should be in the diet.

"The evening meal shouldn't consist of anything heavy or undigestible. Eat light meats and vegetables, either tomato, prune, orange or lemon juice without sugar; lettuce or a vegetable salad without a dressing. Never retire until four hours after you have eaten your evening meal.

"Now I'll tell you why you should not eat some of the things that I haven't included in the above. Bread is starchy. Cheese is so rich that almost immediately after you eat it you can see a new crop of the dreadful acne appear. It is the same with nuts and peanut butter. Do not eat butter of any kind. Meats help make that oily condition of an acne patient's face and sugar causes the hard red appearance of the pimples. If you want to get rid of the blemishes you will do well to follow exactly the menu I have listed for you. Of course, you don't have to use all of the above things at once. Vary them.

"Sleep eight hours in a well ventilated room.

Sports Play Important Rôle.

"Walk, swim, ride, play golf, tennis, dance—or do anything that will help you keep your mind off your appearance.

"Have faith that you can get rid of your acne and you will. You will also regain such faith in yourself at the time you are getting rid of the acne. You will become determined, you will learn to resist temptation (you'll be tempted to indulge in a chocolate, some bit of French pastry, ice cream, etc.). Your outdoor exercises will gain you poise and a sense of balance and you'll be so busy with your new routine that you won't have time to be unhappy.

"There's everything to be gained and nothing to lose—unless it's a stray pound."

Ed. note: I would add one suggestion to hurry the face clearing along. Use a lotion made up of one dram each of potassium sulphuret and zinc sulphate to four ounces of distilled water. Apply enough of the lotion on retiring, first cleansing the skin thoroughly, so that a film of powder is visible on the skin.

R. B.: AFTER A DAY OF SHOPping or standing for long hours, let the feet soak for ten or fifteen minutes in a footbath of hot water into which a handful of coarse salt has been thrown. Then let cold water run over the feet. Rub briskly.

A. J. S.: AN EXCELLENT APPLIcation to be used on a dandruff infected scalp at intervals of every few days is 60 grains of sulphur to one ounce of vaseline.

S. O'H.: TO REDUCE THE BUST, strenuous exercise is necessary, and it must be done systematically every day to be effective. Rowing, bag punching, and swinging Indian clubs are recommended.

T. N.: GLYCERIN AND ROSE water is a well known hand bleach. It may be used on the face, although some persons find it uncomfortable. A slice of lemon rubbed over the face will act as a bleach.

P. R.: RUB CALLOUSES WITH pumice to smooth down the hard skin. Grease the parts with vaseline or cold cream to soften them.

U. H.: FOR BLOND HAIR THAT has been bleached and is coarse in texture, a vinegar rinse is added to make the hair soft and fluffy. Egg shampoos are employed by many blonds.

W. B.: WHILE REDUCING IT IS advisable to drink water. It is not fattening and it is necessary to activate the kidneys and flush the colon, carrying away large amounts of waste products.

F. F. DEEP SEATED ACNE ABscesses should not be trifled with. They should be treated by a skin specialist. Scars may result from inexperienced handling of them. Mud or clay packs should not be included in acne treatment.

The Tribune Cook Book

A Traditional Plum Pudding to Keep Alive Spirit of Merrie Christmas Due Every Family.

would rather do it in a more modern, if less romantic, way. Steaming plum pudding in a mold makes a lighter pudding, which is more in accord with our twentieth century dietetic standards.

Luckily, there are now on the market grand special pudding molds, both large and individual ones. Puddings may also be cooked in earthenware bowls, or basins, as they say in England. Or you may use ordinary cans—coffee tins, baking powder cans, and the like. Coffee manufacturers formerly sealed their products in tall cylindrical cans, but now the tendency is more toward a squat one, and this is a fine shape for plum pudding, being easy to slice and decorate.

Grease Mold Well.

Whatever sort of mold you may decide on, be sure to grease it well, both the mold itself and the inside of the cover. Fill it only two-thirds full to allow for the expansion of the pudding. [I have a vivid memory of a family pudding which, years ago, got so ambitious that it blew its cover off the mold during the steaming process, ruining itself as well as frightening our poor cook half out of her wits!) Place the filled mold, cover side up, on a rack or trivet in a steamer. This rack is essential to insure even steaming.

Be sure that the water in the steamer is boiling when the pudding cans are put in, and that it continues to boil throughout the steaming process. If it becomes necessary to replenish the water, add only water that is boiling. Should you like, providing you have no steamer, you may use a deep covered roaster. Many people make plum puddings in custard cups or bowls, and if you are one who does, take care to cover each with cooking parchment and fasten it down securely to keep the water out of the pudding.

The period of cooking depends on the variety and size of the pudding. The average suet pudding, assuming you use a coffee or baking powder can, will take approximately three hours. You may divide the steaming process, in some cases, into two parts, and steam for five hours or so when you make the pudding and complete the steaming the day you serve it. Which reminds me of one more thing—if you make your puddings early, resteaming of them improves the flavor. Besides, it's a most comfortable feeling to have just one more Christmas task out of the way before the last minute rush is in full swing.

Ideal Shape Spherical.

Of course, the ideal shape for a pudding is spherical. That brown round, topped by holly and masked by burning brandy, is a picture as familiar to us older people as Wide Awake and Fast Asleep. I remember reading about a man who went into the jungle with no one to cook for him except a native. Naturally, the native hadn't the remotest idea of what a Christmas pudding should be like. Far from home, his master decided that Christmas should be as much like Merrie England as he himself could make it, so months ahead of time he sent home for all the precious ingredients necessary for a perfect plum pudding. The day before Christmas he called in his servant and spent some time explaining about the pudding; turned the makings over to him, and hope for the best.

The next day he ate his dinner—I believe he had deer instead of goose—with the thought of that pudding always before him. At last he was ready for it! and lo, and behold, the cook brought in a dish of swimmy, glutinous, steaming porridge! Our hero had forgotten to tell him to tie the pudding in a cloth before he boiled it! Moral: Don't forget a substantial, well floured square of muslin if you decide to cook your pudding in a ball. . . .

Variations in Serving.

Opinions diverge widely with regard to the serving of Christmas puddings. Many think that there should be holly with them to "keep the witches away," and pudding sauces are a matter of controversy. As I pointed out, burning brandy was what went with the pudding in the old days. The brandy was poured over it, lighted, and the pudding was carried flaming to the table. It was a pretty sight, but it had a slightly scorched taste. Another thing people did was to surround a pudding with a ring of lump sugar which had been soaked in alcohol. This, too, was lighted just before serving, and the pudding appeared on the table surrounded by a ring of blue flame, imperial in its fiery glory, though unburned itself. Now nonalcoholic sauces have taken the place of these more virile complements—sauces more suited to a heavy pudding.

Among the basic sauces is one made with boiling water, sugar, butter, flour, vanilla, and a pinch of salt. The dry ingredients are put in a saucepan and the water is slowly added while the cook stirs it constantly. This should be made in the top part of a double boiler. And speaking of double boilers, I was recently asked just how much water should be poured into the lower half—the answer is usually a third to a half the volume of the boiler. In the sauce just suggested lemon may be substituted for vanilla flavoring, or perhaps orange or lemon rind with one or two tablespoons of juice. If you need detailed recipes write for them and I shall be glad to forward the ones you wish.

Another sauce boasts powdered sugar, butter, eggs, and whipping cream for its constituents, and it, too, should be cooked in a double boiler. This is a frothy sauce and must be served piping hot.

Hard Sauce Is Favorite.

Hard sauce is probably the favorite with most of us for our Christmas pudding. It does not need the last minute preparation of the others and does lend itself beautifully to decorating. Powdered sugar and butter are creamed together, and then all you have to do is to add your special and favorite flavoring. It can be readily forced through a pastry tube—in which instance it glorifies any table. If your pudding is made in one of the tall cylindrical cans turn it out on its side and run ribbons of hard sauce around it—one circling each end with several ribbons between them. Stick twigs of holly along the top of it and pile them also around the pudding.

The drum-shaped coffee tins provide adaptable puddings. I made one topped with a ring of hard sauce rosettes. There was a sprig of holly in the middle and a wreath of it around the base of the pudding, which was served on a round silver platter.

If your pudding is to be served with a liquid sauce the trimming of it is another matter. You may, if you choose, decorate the top of it with candied fruit. Cut leaves from citron and make a wreath of them on the top, picking them out at intervals with three or four candied cherries. It's a pretty picture done in the outline of a holly wreath. Or you may make a flat conventional design from some of the fruits that the pudding contains—figs, raisins, currants, or candied orange peel.

Welcome Christmas Gifts.

Being old recipes, those given below are for large families, [illegible] most of us have today. [illegible] keep most of the pudding for personal use and restore it [illegible] to time throughout January, you will still have some to give away. Like fruit cakes, plum puddings are good Christmas gifts. One woman I know makes many pounds each year, and remembers each family of her set with a pudding. She tells me that this year she is going to wrap each one in shiny tissue paper and tie them in bright red bows [illegible] black waxed ribbon. I think they'll look very festive, but I doubt if they will prove any more attractive than those she gave away last year when the puddings came wrapped in [illegible] paper, and then in silver paper tied with a red satin ribbon with a bit of mistletoe tucked into the bow.

NEW ENGLAND PLUM PUDDING.

1 loaf bread.
1 lb. seeded raisins.
½ lb. chopped citron.
Juice of one lemon.
Rind of one lemon.
1 lb. brown sugar.
1 tsp. salt.
1 tsp. cinnamon.
4 eggs, well beaten.
1 cup chopped [illegible]
Flour.
1 lb. currants.
1 lb. seedless raisins.
1 lb. chopped figs.
Juice of one orange.
Rind of one orange.
½ lb. granulated sugar.
½ tsp. mace.
½ tsp. cloves.
1 lb. chopped suet.
4 medium sized carrots, grated.

Soak the bread in cold water. When soft, pour off the water. Put the fruit and suet through a grinder. Mix all the ingredients together and add enough flour to make the mixture stiff as fruit cake. [illegible] well beaten eggs last. Pour into heavily greased molds and steam four hours, or steam 5 hours [illegible] hours when the pudding is to be eaten. This recipe will fill [illegible] more one pound coffee tins.

SUET PUDDING.

1 cup sour milk.
1 cup molasses.
1 cup chopped suet.
1 cup raisins.
½ cup currants.
1 egg.
½ cup citron, chopped.
1 tsp. salt.
½ tsp. soda.
1 tsp. cinnamon.
½ tsp. clove.
½ tsp. nutmeg.
1 cup walnut meats, chopped.
2¼ cups flour.

The method for this is much the same as for the New England pudding above. Steam in cans for three hours. The recipe is much smaller and for that reason better suited to the needs of a present day family, although not quite as "plummy."

ENGLISH PLUM PUDDING.

¾ lb. breadcrumbs (½ loaf).
½ lb. flour.
1 lb. beef suet, chopped fine.
1 lb. light brown sugar.
2 tsp. baking powder.
1 tsp. cinnamon.
1 tsp. ginger.

1 lb. raisins.
1 lb. currants.
¼ lb. orange peel.
¼ lb. almonds.
6 eggs.
½ pt. milk.
½ cup fruit juice, wine or brandy.

Mix the dry ingredients thoroughly. Beat the eggs, add the milk and fruit juice, mix well. Dip a cloth in boiling water, flour it well, and tie the pudding in it, leaving it to swell. Boil five hours. This pudding can be kept for some time in a cool, dry place, tied in the cloth, and hung from a hook. When required, boil [illegible] in boiling water and [illegible] tle ermine muff purse completes the set. Coats are smartest when they are double crossed with fur like this, this winter.

Lingerie, Furs, Jewels, Gloves from Gay Paris

A young girl gift that is Paris endowed is the necklace, bracelet and earrings of seed pearls shown below, trimmed with pearl bowknots, and for the extremely opulent, the necklace and bracelet at the extreme left made in three strands, of rubies, pearls and emeralds polished to round beads, is the treat of a lifetime.

Bag Made of Lace.

Below this is Worth's newest evening bag of beige Irish lace in a pouch form, with a circle of pearls and rhinestones for fastening, and on the opposite side, at the extreme right, is the last word in daytime bags—a pouch of violet colored kid, with the marcasite monogram set on top and functioning as a fastening. From Worth, also.

Just above this is a new kind of cigaret case made of gold, but as limp as leather, fastened by a flap at the top and a sapphire button. It is engraved at the sides.

The bag and belt shown in the center of the right hand panel are made of dull silver spangles, and are accessories that harmonize beautifully with a simple velvet frock.

At the top of the right hand panel is Lucile Paray's wool lace pull-over sweater, and there is nothing smarter as a Christmas gift for the sportswoman than this kind of sweater, with its pompons of wool attached to the string tie that fastens the neckline.

The handy needlewoman may easily make for one of her friends a little evening jacket, like the one shown at the right, and just below the top. This jacket has short kimono sleeves and is made of red velvet. It ties at the left side, at the bottom of the surplice closing. Such jackets take about a yard and a half of velvet and little sewing.

It is time now for the thoughtful soul to take in hand her Christmas list, arm herself with all her knowledge of her friends and kin and get busy.

FIVE FATAL WORDS

By

EDWIN BALMER
AND PHILIP WYLIE

Synopsis:

Melicent Waring gets a position with an eccentric old woman, Hannah Cornwall, on a magnificent estate in Connecticut. At the same time a young fellow named Granger is hired as an aviator. The first night in Miss Cornwall's house Melicent learns that her sole duty is to occupy the old lady's bed at night, while Miss Cornwall, unknown to any one else in the house, sleeps in Melicent's room. She also learns that, of the six Cornwalls to inherit their father's millions, only the last survivor will have full control of the fortune. Miss Cornwall's brother, Everitt, is found dead in his bath; he has evidently been electrocuted by a defective lighting fixture. Another brother, Daniel, has died mysteriously in Dutch Guiana. His son, Donald, arrives for a visit. Awakened by the smell of smoke, Melicent discovers that the bathroom where Everitt died is in flames. Going into an unoccupied room next to hers she finds that a hole has been bored into the wall leading to the bathroom. She and Donald arouse the household and all escape, but the house is destroyed. Deciding to visit her sister, Alice, in Belgium, Miss Cornwall sails with Melicent, Donald, and Granger. It is revealed that before their deaths Daniel and Everitt Cornwall each received mysterious messages of five words, the first letters of which spelled death. Donald points out to Melicent that the first letters of the family names, Daniel, Everitt, Alice, Theodore, and Hannah, spell the same word.

INSTALLMENT V.

River Mist.

MELICENT experienced a moment of helplessness. She had the sensation of being in the grip of something she had no power to combat. Suddenly it was as if a sentence had been passed upon another and she could only stand by and watch it being executed.

She turned from Donald Cornwall and stared out over the sea and let the cool wind on her cheek bring back more rational thought.

"You believe that some one has arranged your family in that order?" she asked at last.

"Some one seems to have made a start, certainly." Donald would not let his feeling be blown away. "Some one certainly has killed D and E; I was wondering—that was all—if A might be next. You see," he went on after an instant, "after I first noticed the initials of that message which came to my father, I tried to argue with myself that they meant nothing; but not even you can doubt it now, after a message like it came to Uncle Everitt and he immediately was killed."

"Of course, I don't doubt it."

"Well, I got the same sort of feeling when I noticed how the names could be arranged in order. I tried to tell myself it was purely accidental; it meant nothing; but I couldn't forget it. But perhaps I should have kept it to myself."

"Not from me," Melicent put in quickly. "But I certainly wouldn't mention it to your aunt."

"I've no idea of it."

"How did you happen to notice that possible arrangement of the names? Did anything occur to call your attention to it?"

"No, I was just mulling over what happened—how my father, Daniel, was killed; then Uncle Everitt followed him, and now we are going to Aunt Alice. Then I thought of Theodore and Hannah."

"But Lydia is another name," objected Melicent.

"Quite. Aunt Lydia seems to be left out. I was wondering what that might mean."

"So you feel sure that this—it—whatever it is—does mean something?"

He jumped up and, facing her, held out both his hands, seizing hers and pulling her to her feet. "Let's walk. What little hands you have. I like little hands, if they're long . . . How many times about the deck makes a mile? Somebody on board always knows. He'll be English and doing twenty laps, at least. By the way, did I tell you that my Aunt Alice married an Englishman? She's a widow now, but I've cousins . . . you'll meet them. They're the reason that Aunt Alice wants to outlive the rest of her generation, so she can get all the money and leave it to her children. Quite English . . . As I said, you'll meet them . . ."

They began their walk about the deck and soon sighted Granger, who happened to be making the rounds in the opposite direction, and who was alone. They greeted him and passed on.

"You like him?" Donald Cornwall demanded, rather suddenly, of Melicent after they were out of earshot.

"Yes," said Melicent. "I like him."

"So do I," agreed Donald promptly. "Useful he was, I'll say, the night the house burned. Doesn't think first of saving his skin if anything's going on. But—well, lack of curiosity is not one of his sterling qualities."

MELICENT smiled. "What would you think of a man knowing as much as he must know of your family affairs," she defended him, "and not being—curious?"

Donald did not reply directly. "How much does he know, do you think? Does he know, for instance, about the messages?"

"I've not told him," said Melicent.

"You won't, of course."

"No. Of course not."

"And that order of the family names I mentioned," Donald went on. "Let's keep that strictly between ourselves."

"Of course."

They did a measured mile about the deck, passing Granger several times. And then Melicent went below to Miss Cornwall, who observed: "You've been walking with my nephew."

"Yes."

"I was right, was I not? Something new has happened which he is keeping from me?"

"Nothing of any importance has happened, I'm sure," Melicent replied, to which Miss Cornwall countered: "Then he hasn't told you. It's getting rougher, isn't it?"

"I believe it is."

"I was afraid so. I am not a good sailor."

Melicent discovered, to her great relief, that she herself was a good sailor, the ship's motion distressed her not at all, although by late afternoon the wind had increased to a blow which raised such a sea that the decks were almost deserted, but Granger was on deck and as soon as he was alone he joined her.

"What's going on?" he challenged her without preliminary, as one saving time.

"What—where?" she returned.

"Where you are, on the inside," he said jealously. "What's he been telling you—Donald Cornwall?"

He was so frank and emphatic that she liked him and she liked also his blond head and blue eyes so accusing of her.

"He's been telling me," Melicent replied, "about his aunt, to whom we're going, and her family. She's a widow—her husband was English—she has children."

"I know all that," said Granger, impatiently. "Then there's no more family—news."

"No news," assured Melicent honestly. After all, Donald's noticing of a possible peculiar arrangement of the family names was not news. "What news were you expecting?" she demanded of Granger.

"News of the next," said Granger, staring out at sea.

"Next what?"

"Next Cornwall to go."

"You mean you're expecting a next?"

"Aren't you?" rejoined Granger with his characteristic bluntness. "Aren't they all? Now that it's started, do you suppose it's stopping with Daniel and Everitt when there's four more left?"

"What do you mean by 'it'?"

"Murder," said Granger. "You know it and so do I. That Cornwall will always was a perfect setup—a perfect motivation, if you prefer—for murder. It was only a question of time for some one to get around to it. The wonder is that it waited so long—forty years . . . I wish you could get it straight in your head that I'm on this job with you, Miss Waring. I'm playing the game with you all. Do you suppose I think it was an accident that Everitt Cornwall was killed when he stepped into the tub? Do you suppose I swallowed 'defective wiring' for that fire? But I kept still; I played the game. That's why I'm here now. I wanted to stick with you. Do you mind my telling you that ever since I saw you I haven't been able to get you off my mind?"

She flushed. "Why——"

"Never mind. Forget it. I have eyes; I see you with Donald Cornwall. But I haven't always been a pilot and at times a chauffeur—and I won't always be. I'm glad I'm along. Remember, if you ever get into trouble, give me a chance to help you."

"That's terribly kind of you, but I don't expect trouble for myself. Do you?"

"Who can tell," he returned, looking at her again instead of the sea, "what we're walking into?"

THE ship docked at Havre and Melicent had her first glimpse of a foreign land. From the rail, she stared at the unfamiliar shores as if they were enchanted. She tried to discover precisely what made them so strange and was only partially able to do so. No particular thing was very much different from America and yet every single house and tree and street and stone was faintly different. The net result was a complete divergence from the familiar scheme of things.

"Like it?"

She turned to see Donald Cornwall standing beside her.

"Very much."

"I like it, and I'll like land better than ever now."

"But you were never seasick."

"No, neither were you, but you were altogether too much with my aunt in the staterooms. I've missed you. I thought—ah, well. My thoughts are like feathers. They'd rest my head if I had enough of them—but I have only one and the wind can blow that away."

"Which means?"

He laughed. "Nothing. It means nothing. When a member of my generation of the Cornwall family says something that means something, it will be twelve o'clock on doomsday. I've been thinking over the decidedly suggestive arrangement of the family names which I mentioned to you the first day out. Forget it, will you?"

"Gladly," agreed Melicent, "if I could."

"Same here. Well, we'll soon enough know what—if anything—it means. We're driving from here to my Aunt Alice's—we've the Rolls aboard, you know. We ought to arrive tomorrow evening. Wait till you see my cousins. You'll enjoy motoring across northern France."

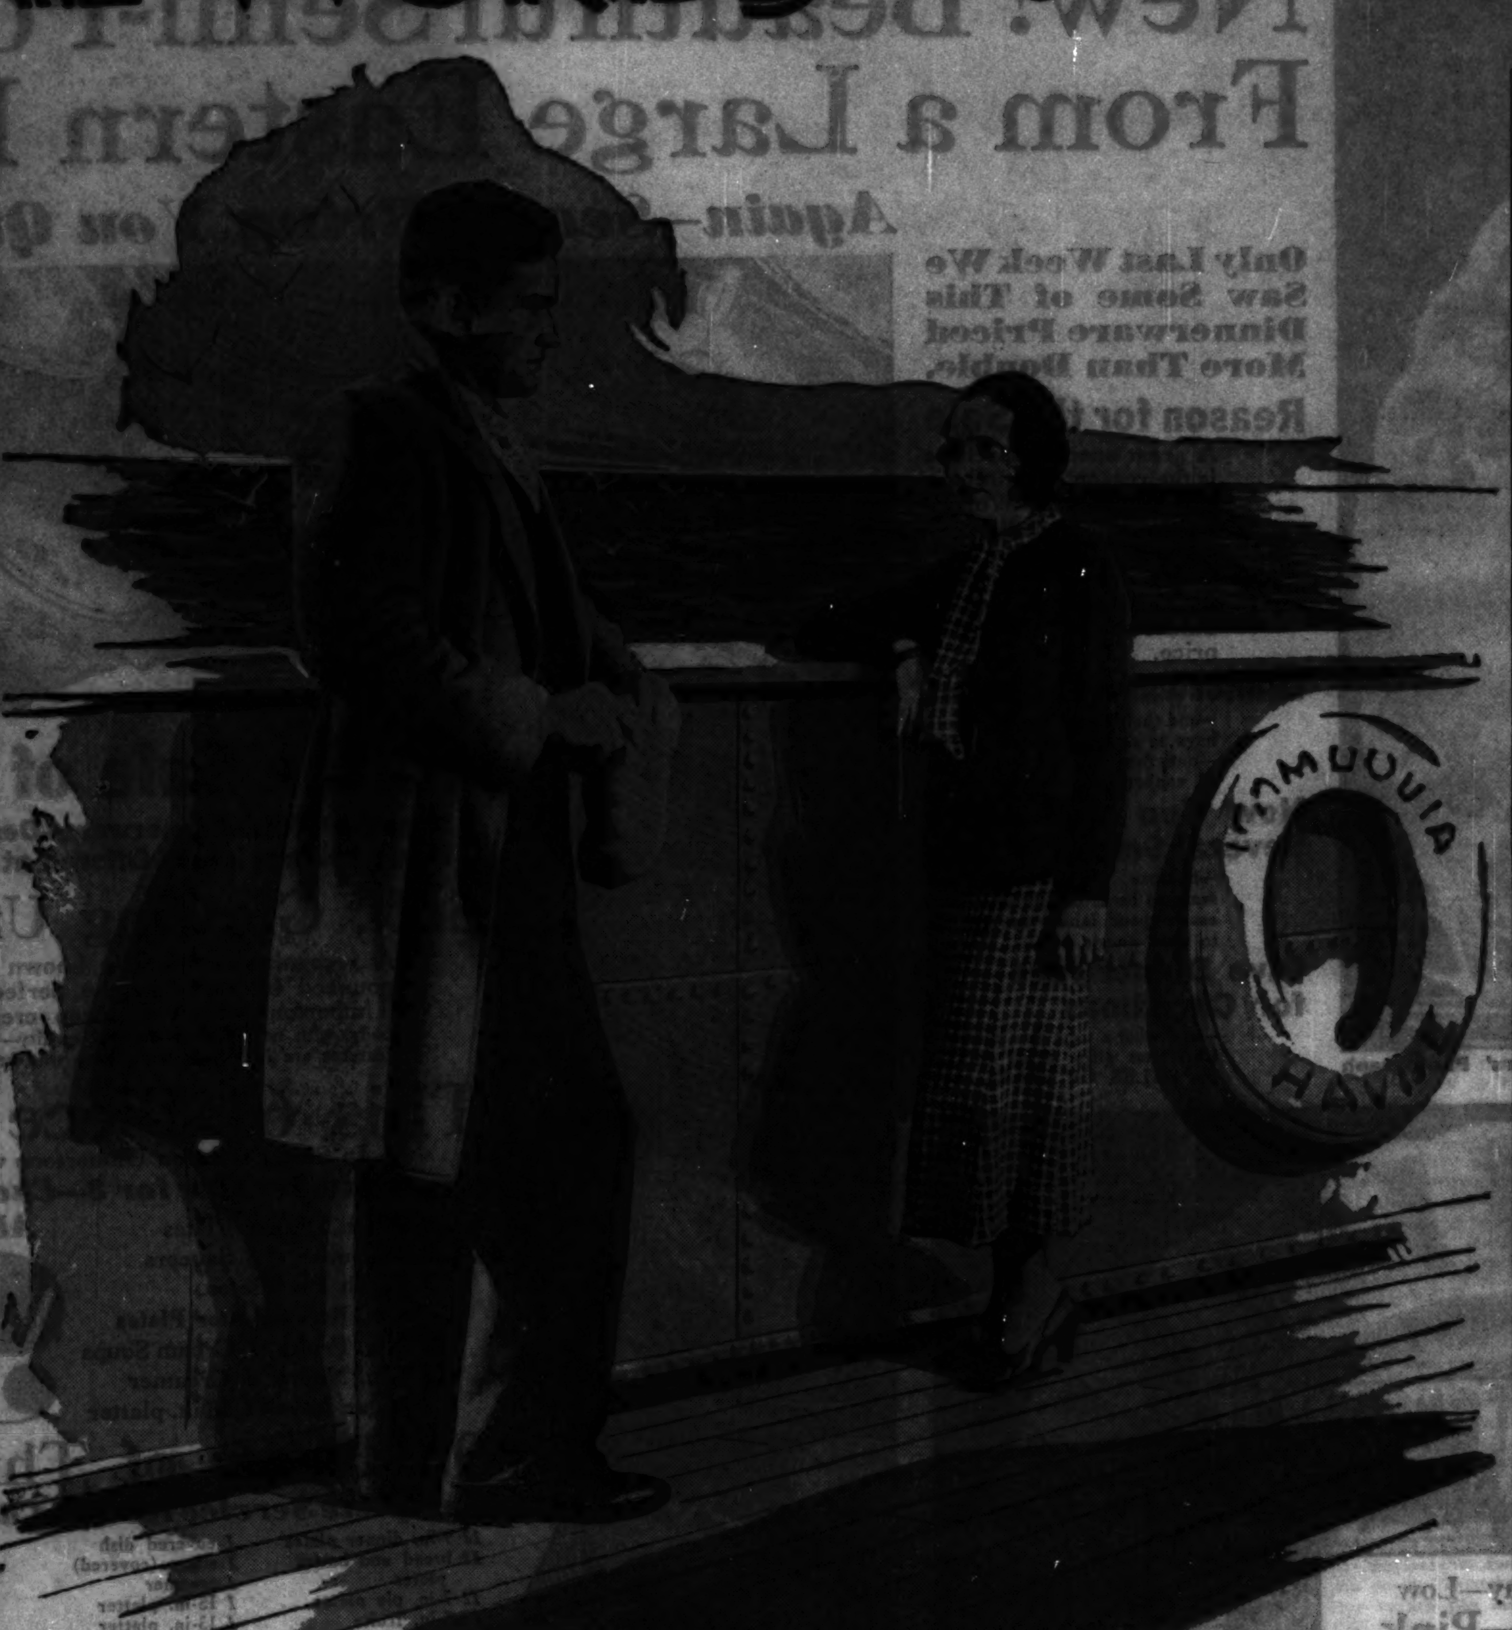
"Any news?" asked Melicent.

"News? No, no news, except that Aunt Alice has wired that she is delighted that we're arriving and she is ready for us. That's all the news just now."

Melicent did enjoy the ride across northern France. Granger drove at a rapid rate and had no trouble in finding the way. She was astonished to discover that he spoke French. She found her own brand of the language almost useless—certainly two years of school French could not cope with excitable townsmen who interspersed their words with sly compliments.

When they approached the home of Alice Cornwall, however, the respite of five days at sea seemed to Melicent automatically to come to a close. She tried to put out of her mind the idea that here the next Cornwall was to "go" and that the one would be the mistress of the mansion, Alice.

Perhaps Melicent's expectations were vaguely disappointed because the house in Belgium was not a château with towers and pointed peaks with stone walls and dungeons, with a blood curdling and yet faintly absurd history. The house on the Domrey river was not far from the French border; it was situated deep in the valley of the river and had been built by a mill owner who had prospered in the years after Waterloo and it had been expanded by a later owner in the days of Napoleon second. More recent additions had been made by an English proprietor and they were square and ugly. Around it was a conventional garden, but the lateness of the season had destroyed its beauty. There were no other houses near it, although at a distance of a mile or more, along the slow meandering river, there was a small town which, judging from the pall of smoke that hung above it, was the site of numerous factories.



"You believe that some one has arranged your family in that order?" she asked at last.

IT was nearly dark when they reached the house and they were welcomed at the door by Alice Cornwall. She was plump and she had bobbed gray hair. Her nose was long and sharp like Hannah Cornwall's nose, but her eyes were bland and almost dull. With her at the door to greet them was a short flabby young man in his middle twenties who spoke with a broad Oxford accent. Alice Cornwall seemed to be delighted to see her sister Hannah and in spite of her years—Melicent thought she must be nearly sixty-five—she gushed.

"Why, my dear Hannah! This is too good to be true. I am simply delighted to see you. We have lived over here so long that we are veritable natives. I am beginning to think of myself as a Belgian woman. You don't look a day older than when I saw you last. And this is your secretary, Miss Watling—O, yes—Miss Waring. Pierre will take care of her. I have put her in a room next to yours, just as you asked me to do."

She addressed Donald next. "My dear boy! It's so good of you to bring your aunt, and I am sure you will find relief from the sorrow you must feel for the loss of your father. Dear Daniel. He was such a gentleman and so devoted to his studies. Even when he was a little boy he used to have a passion for doing things for people. His death is a loss to the whole world. To the tropics, anyway. And Everitt gone, too, and right in your house! Think of it! Only four of us left. Every year I run up to Paris for my clothes and a little whirl and try to forget that I am sixty-three. Isn't it horrid the way time flies? You know Lester, don't you? You remember you used to play together when you were children. Lester, this is Donald."

The young man with the Oxford accent held out his hand to Donald Cornwall. "Glad to know you."

Melicent caught a glint of amusement in Donald's eyes as he regarded his cousin. Pierre, who was evidently major domo, spoke quietly to her. "If mademoiselle will follow me to her room——?"

As Melicent walked away with him she heard the continual sound of Alice Cornwall's voice. "Yes, it's been a long time. Nine years. Ever since my poor husband died. But I've been a contented widow, a very contented widow."

The rooms which had been set aside for Melicent and Miss Hannah Cornwall were garishly papered and furnished with too many chairs, too many little tables, too many gilt edged mirrors, and too many glass pendants. They were a rococo effort to recapture a period of French decoration long since departed. And the small windows opening from them overlooked the turgid water of the Domrey.

In the room next to hers, where supposedly Miss Cornwall would sleep, a maid was unpacking luggage. Melicent opened her brand new suitcase and commenced to hang up her equally new clothes. It was almost dark and she turned on the electric lights, only to find that they were small and dim, casting huge shadows on the floor and walls from every piece of furniture. She had hoped that Alice Cornwall might prove to be a member of the family in whom she could have immediate confidence, but she feared that the woman was silly and empty headed. She was sure that nothing underlay her babble of thoughtless conversation. She had been told that in this household it was the custom to dress for dinner and before she changed she looked out of her window. She saw Granger and the Rolls Royce disappear in the direction of the town and some time later she heard him return and park the car in the garage.

A wind began to blow outside, whistling through the ugly structure of the old house and ruffling the river. Presently she dressed and went downstairs. Donald Cornwall was already there in a tuxedo, with a glass in his hand.

"An aperistif," he said. "You better have one. This house is damp and cold. How do you like my Aunt Alice?"

"She was very pleasant."

"That's a brave effort." He poured a drink and handed it to her. She swallowed some of it. It was sweet and warming.

A moment later Lester joined them. "O! Hello, Miss Waring."

"Good-evening, Mr. Wilbur." She had had a momentary struggle to remember the family name of Hannah's sister.

The young man with the English accent nodded icily at his American cousin. "Charming old place mother has here, don't you think?"

"It's very nice."

"Exactly. Precisely. Extraordinarily nice."

THERE was a long pause and he said nothing else. Donald Cornwall spoke ironically. 'Very nice, indeed.'

"Eh?" Lester regarded his cousin. "O, yes—nice—what?"

Donald nodded and the sparkle in his eye increased. "Yes. About the nicest little place in the world."

Lester thought about that for a while. Finally he started as if he had been slightly frightened, walked to the tray where the decanters were, poured a drink for himself, looked at his cousin, drank the entire contents of the glass at once, and said, "Nice, nice, nice, nice," very rapidly.

There was another long pause. Donald appeared to consider his cousin's remark and then nodded his head sagaciously.

"The very word. Nice."

Lester was pouring another drink for himself. He looked up.

Mrs. Wilbur came into the room. She said: "Well, children, dinner will be ready almost immediately. Have you had your second drink, Lester?" She explained that to the others. "Lester is never really comfortably unless he has had his second drink."

"I can understand that," Donald Cornwall said solemnly.

Melicent looked out of the window and bit her lip. She thought that she had never seen any one quite as stupid as Donald's cousin, Lester.

Lester cleared his throat. He did it with an expression of mild satisfaction on his face, as if the sound might be interpreted as conversation. Hannah Cornwall was last to join them and they went into the dining room.

Throughout the meal Mrs. Wilbur carried the burden of conversation. What she said was an expansion of what she had already said upon their arrival. She repeated long and meaningless anecdotes about both the two deceased members of the family in a glib manner, which suggested that she had no real feeling about their death. For the most part, Melicent looked steadily at the plates, which were changed frequently, and she remained silent. It developed during the meal that Mrs. Wilbur's two other children were away—a boy at Eaton and a girl in school in Switzerland.

"I came to the continent for my children. I realized the commonness of American schools and I decided I would sacrifice myself for my own. There was nothing to do but come over here and live while they had their schooling, and here I've been ever since. Of course, I really hate the Belgians and the French. Any one with any sense would hate them. They're stupid and stubborn, and unless you watch them like a hawk they take advatnage." There was much more in the same vein and Melicent wondered what the servants thought if they could understand Mrs. Wilbur's words.

When the meal was ended, Lester made his only contribution to the family gathering. "Now we'll all go down in the cellar for billiards—what—what?"

Miss Cornwall made her excuses by saying that she would like to go to bed at once. That meant necessarily that Melicent would also retire. Donald Cornwall, however, took up the challenge.

"I'll shoot a game with you, Lester old kid."

"Old kid?" Lester repeated in a puzzled manner.

"Old kid," Donald affirmed.

"Old kid," Lester repeated. He frowned for an interval and then brightened. He turned a cheery face toward his cousin and said, "What!"

Melicent was already accustomed to the exchange of rooms which she secretly made every night with Miss Cornwall and after she had retired in the dark she realized that she was quite tired. For a little while she thought about the strange new household into which she had come. The surroundings were as somber as those of Blackcroft and the people were plainly apprehensive. Had they noticed the possible arrangement of the family names and that D and E already were dead and that, therefore, A might be the member of the family most immediately in danger?

TEN days passed. They were full and uneventful. Melicent wandered the ground around the old house, went down to the river, listened to the meaningless monosyllabic words of Lester and talked occasionally both with Donald Cornwall and Granger. Miss Cornwall gave her a few letters to write so that it would not seem she had brought a secretary to Europe with her for nothing.

Finally Mrs. Wilbur invited her to go with her to attend to the marketing. Melicent accepted gratefully. Any interruption of the routine was acceptable. Mrs. Wilbur's chauffeur drove them into town and they spent two hours going from one market to another. Although Mrs. Wilbur's French was bad, she was able to make herself understood and her reaction to everything Belgian was typical of her.

"It's a foolish country, a perfectly idiotic country. For instance, take that shop over there. Vins, Huilles, Savons. Imagine that. Wines, oil soap. That's the way these people are around here. Open up a store and sell wine, oil, and soap for no reason at all. It isn't logical and it doesn't make sense."

Melicent demurred. "Look at our drug stores. Look at what we sell in them."

"That's different. The drug stores sell everything on earth, but these silly people just sell three things—wine, oil, and soap. Makes me sick."

When they had finished their marketing, Mrs. Wilbur suggested that they have some refreshment. "I know a perfectly darling café, but we will have to sit inside. I am dying for a glass of beer. Somehow or other I started to drink beer when I came over here. I know it's vulgar and that I've put on a great deal of weight, but I do like it. Of course, you have to be careful which café you go in because it's a manufacturing town and some of the places are very uncouth."

They went into the Café de la Rose and sat down. Along one end was a bar and behind it a glittering array of bottles. The room contained more than a dozen tables and several of them were occupied by Belgian men and women who, apparently, were having a drink before luncheon. Mrs. Wilbur ordered two glasses of beer. "It will do you good, my dear. I know it's fashionable in America now to be slender, but it's not healthy."

Melicent nodded. "I don't like it much, but I will, if you insist. It was terribly nice of you to take me shopping today."

"Quite all right. Love to do it. Having you in my house is a great pleasure. Reminds me of my own girlhood. I suppose, too, it must be dreadfully boring to be my sister's secretary. She's such an old spinster. Always silent, always gloomy. I suppose by comparison I'm a chatterbox."

There was nothing for Melicent to say. The waiter set the glasses on the table and left them.

"Well, I am a chatterbox," Mrs. Wilbur continued. "But I'm not so empty headed as you might think. And I don't miss much of what goes on around me. Now you are a nice sensible girl and a mighty pretty girl. I have taken quite a liking to you and I wonder if you would do me a favor."

"I'd be glad to do anything I can," Melicent replied.

"It isn't much. I gathered from my sister that you have been with the family for about a month. You were there when my brother Everitt died. I suppose you know the circumstances that surround our family, the will and everything, and you can't fail to notice the cautious way Hannah lives." Her plump face became a little more serious. "I suppose all of us have been a little bit nervous about ourselves. I know I have. I want my children to get Silas' fortune. That's only natural, isn't it? Now, I babble all the time, but I think just the same and I may say that I was quite surprised when Hannah wrote me that she was coming over here. Donald's father died in South America and he left there. Everitt died over in Connecticut and Hannah left there. I thought that you probably were pretty wide awake and I wanted to ask you if you thought they left for any other reason than just that they decided to travel."

Melicent was dumfounded. She had thought of Mrs. Wilbur as a person who was garrulous and without a moment of real insight. Now, however, the face of the woman who sat across the table was concentrated. In her eyes was a great shrewdness and it became apparent that behind the careless manner was a considerable degree of mentality. It suddenly occurred to Melicent that Alice Cornwall Wilbur was a woman in whom she might, after all, have considerable confidence.

She did not answer at once. She realized that when Daniel Cornwall had died and when Everitt Cornwall had died, Mrs. Wilbur had been thousands of miles away. The thought followed through her mind that if she could be sure of anything in the world she could be sure that a woman of Mrs. Wilbur's type was profoundly sane and would never for an instant consider interfering in any way with human rights of her relatives. The burden of Melicent's private knowledge was great. She looked once more at the plump, earnest woman across the table and then she spoke.

"I don't know what Miss Cornwall would say if she knew that I was talking to you about the Cornwall family. I am sure she would be very angry and there is not much I can tell you. You've already hinted that Miss Cornwall is afraid of her life every moment. I gathered from her behavior that the news of Daniel Cornwall's death was a tremendous shock. She had heard it sometime before I came to Blackcroft, but the death of her other brother in her own house seemed to be almost more than she could bear. It wasn't so much grief as fright. Any one could see that. And his death——"

Mrs. Wilbur was leaning forward and looking straight into her eyes. "Yes," she said softly.

"His death was very strange. Electric lights do kill people, but"—Melicent drew a long breath—"I am going to tell you something which I have not told Miss Cornwall. In the room next to the bathroom where her brother—your brother—died, there was a hole in the wall opposite the tub. After that hole was used—after your brother was killed—the fire was started, I believe, to hide what happened there."

Mrs. Wilbur's eyes did not [illegible].

"You said my brother was killed—he was murdered, you mean. That is no surprise to me. It was plain from the attitude taken by my sister and my nephew—though they have not acquainted me with the detail you have told me. Proceed, please."

"Did they tell you of the message your brother received just before his death?"

"What message?"

"The five word message similar to the message received by your brother Daniel just before he died."

"I heard of the strange message that came to Daniel. Donald wrote me at the time." Suddenly she had gone very pale. "But I did not know my brother Everitt had received a similar message, too. Tell me, please, Miss Waring. Proceed."

"The message which Donald and his father received was five meaningless words—'Doubtless even a [illegible] hopes.'" repeated Melicent, whispering. "About two hours before your brother Everitt died, or was killed, he received five other meaningless words with the same initial letters: 'Don't ever [illegible] these horoscopes.'"

"What? Miss Waring, you know that? You're sure of that?"

"I know it. Why? Why?" whispered Melicent, aghast at the effect upon Alice Cornwall Wilbur. "Why—have you received such a message, too?"

"I? Of course, not. Of course not. It is close in here and what you have told me has shaken me, naturally. I didn't expect to learn so much from you, my dear."

The two glasses of beer stood on the table untouched. Mrs. Wilbur paid for them and rose. "But you were definitely right to tell me." She had regained her composure. "We had better get back to the house."

She went out to the automobile and climbed in with an alacrity unusual in a person of her age. Her conversation on the return was as vacuous as it had always been.

THAT evening Melicent was in her room dressing, in the night garments of Miss Cornwall. The door to Miss Cornwall's bedroom opened and the old lady came in. Usually the exchange of rooms was made almost without discussion. Now, however, Miss Cornwall spoke.

"Are you content here?"

"It's very nice."

"Yes, it's nice for me. I am glad to see my sister again, although we may be leaving shortly."

Melicent looked up quickly. It seemed to her that Miss Cornwall's angular face was contracted; that she felt some internal agitation. She gave Melicent no opportunity to reply to her statement that they might depart soon.

"I want to change our habit a little just for tonight. I have drawn the blinds in my room, but I wish you would go in there and stay in the room with the lights on and write letters for awhile. You know—move around a bit. Take time going to bed. You see"—and the words that followed did not ring quite true—"we are getting so matter-of-fact about the system that it doesn't seem natural. I want you to behave in my room just as I would behave if I were there myself. That's logical, isn't it?"

Melicent felt herself gripped by a sense of foreboding, but she answered calmly, "Perfectly logical."

She did as Miss Cornwall had suggested. There was note paper on the desk in the bedroom and a fire burned in the grate. For an hour she sat at the desk and wrote a long letter to Helen her former roommate in New York City. She knew that the letter would not, could not, be mailed, because it was part of her agreement with Miss Cornwall that she would communicate with no one during her year's service. However, into the letter she put all the interesting things she had seen during her stay in Europe and she sealed the letter precisely as if it were going to be mailed. From time to time she walked around the room so that any one listening could hear her footsteps and she noticed that the lights threw her shadow on the curtains—a shadow which was identical to the one Miss Cornwall would have cast.

When she had finished the letter she threw it on the fire, turned out the lights and went to bed. She did not go to sleep, however. Any undue nervousness on the part of any member of the Cornwall family, any change

In connection with publishing the mystery serial, "Five Fatal Words," the Tribune presents an opportunity to its readers to earn $5,000.00 in cash rewards for a little easy detective work and ingenuity.

Somewhere in this mystery story there is an unfinished message containing only one of "Five Fatal Words." You are invited to find the message and complete it by adding four words. The first letters of each of the five words, consecutively, must spell D-E-A-T-H.

Your entry must contain the first word of the message exactly as it appears in the story. The other four words may be of your own choice; to pertain to the story, to express a thought, to sound a moral, or for any other purpose. Here are a few samples: "Danger Ends At The Harbor." "Daring Entices All True Hearts." Send your completed message in a letter and explain below it in fifty words or less the meaning of it.

The story is being published serially in the Sunday Tribune. It also will be enacted on the air over W-G-N, the Chicago Tribune Station, each Tuesday and Saturday night at 9 o'clock by an all-star cast especially engaged for this purpose and headed by HERBERT RAWLINSON. Reading the story and hearing it broadcast should help you finish the message.

$5,000.00 in cash rewards will be paid by the Chicago Tribune for the best entries received. The rewards are as shown above.

This offer is open to everybody except the authors, their families, employes of the Chicago Tribune and their families.

The judging will be based upon the thought expressed in the message and the explanation. Only WHAT you say will count. Handwriting, spelling, grammar, or form of entries will not count.

After reading the entire story and hearing it enacted over W-G-N, make up your entry and address it "Five Fatal Words," Chicago Tribune, Post Office Box 1718, Chicago, Illinois. All entries must be in by noon eight days after the publication of the last installment of the story. It will be published in fifteen installments.

No entries will be returned nor can the Tribune engage in any correspondence on the subject.

You need not purchase the Chicago Tribune to compete. The Tribune may be examined at any of its offices or at Public Libraries free of charge.

The judges will be Col. Henry Barrett Chamberlin, operating director of the Crime Commission of Chicago; Superior Judge John P. McGoorty, twice chief justice of the Criminal court; and Fanny Butcher, literary editor of The Tribune. Entrants agree to accept their decision as final. In case of ties a duplicate reward will be paid to each tying contestant.

SPLIT

By Lupton A. Wilkinson

In Which the Spirit of Revenge and the Love of a Comrade Drive Dick Blaine, Ex-Crook, to Juggling with Two Pairs of Perfectly Matched Pearls and His Life.

“EIGHT grand,” said Morgue Johnson, “is as far as I will go.”

The sunburned man in the back room of the speakeasy reclosed the last of the four tiny black silk envelopes. He let this last lie, with the three others, on the table between the gang leader and himself.

The bargainers were each big, each powerful looking in a different way. They seemed to fill the little room, both physically and with the vibration of personality. The sunburned man put capable hands on the scarred table top. He leaned forward.

“Listen, Morgue,” he argued, “these are the two biggest pair of matched pearls that have come out of the South seas in ten years. There's no telling what they're worth as the king rocks around which to string a million dollar necklace. I know you can get twenty grand for them, maybe thirty, forty. Don't be so tight! You're a chief, but not a robber.”

“Eight grand,” repeated the more dusky of the pair. His eyes, black as his hair, and according well with a skin that argued a change of name at some time in his past, contained a smoldering possibility of furtiveness, but now they were steady, confident.

“I've put a lot of my life into getting these pearls and bringing them here,” protested the tall one. His gray eyes hardened and the clash of the two wills was electric. Sandy hair with a touch of red, sun bleached eyebrows, and a skin sun hardened to leather, that had burned red instead of brown, combined to give this man a peculiarly individual impression of forcefulness. His face was big boned, but less overlaid with flesh than the other's.

“A lot of your life,” Johnson repeated softly, steadily. “Maybe coupla other lives, too, hey, Dick?”

“Lay off that!” the redhead growled.

Johnson laughed.

“Touchy?” He shifted in his chair, shot his head forward with an air of finality. “These rocks are hot,” he said. “Maybe too hot to handle for some time. God knows I've done enough for you. Cost me two grand to get you out of stir this morning. Murder takes heavy fixing. I gave you four grand when you went away, three years ago. In trouble then, as now. I'm playing damn fair with you to buy these pearls at all. Maybe I shouldn't touch 'em. Anyway, you'll have to take my price. Eight grand.”

“I didn't kill Reagan Monday night and I didn't burn that guy down, three years ago,” the lean handed owner of the pearls stated in a stony voice, as one who did not expect to be believed. Then he began to tell the story of the pearls again.

Morgue Johnson followed the retold tale with only a quarter of his mind. He was thinking hard with the other three-quarters. He was glad the milk-white, fire-white globules were back, each in its black silk envelope. It had been hard for him to think of anything when those pellets, freighted with death, hypnotic in beauty, eloquent of money, lay naked to his gaze.

NOW Johnson was thinking, but only secondarily of what he heard. His mind did not leap seven thousand miles to visualize the fabulous pearl haul off the cruel atoll of a Fijian coral island; the brutal clash of frenzied greed inspired by the prize; the flare of conflict under bright skies and lazily indifferent palms; the escape after Reagan and Dick Blaine, by what stratagem and machinations only God and the devil knew, won possession of the pearls. His imagination did not follow the long, slow voyage of the rusty freighter, the Puka Puka, around the Horn and up the coast of the two Americas, ancient tub staggering under antarctic spray or dancing clumsily the rolling swells of the tropics; and on board two men, partners, sharing a fortune.

His was not the sort of imagination inflamed by far places and remote deeds, however colorful. Nor did he waste thought on the water front hotel in which Reagan, the co-owner of the pearls, had died, in New York, at the voyage end, just three nights ago. He did not know Reagan; had never seen him; did not give a damn about him. Besides, death held no flavor of romance for Johnson. He dealt in it on occasion, reluctantly, hesitantly—his critics in gangland said too seldom; nevertheless, death was part of his trade, nothing to moon about.

Morgue Johnson was thinking something practical. He was wondering what three years out of town had done to, had made of, this man who sat before him, dyed with suns that shone far from Hester street. That Blaine had acquired new strength, added force, there was no doubt. What would be the result if the old relation were resumed? Would he be more useful or less useful? Less dangerous or more dangerous?

Three years before, Richard Blaine had been Morgue Johnson's lieutenant in ruling the politics and crime of the lower section of New York's east side. The redhead had always sought to impose his will on his leader. He had contended for the abolition of murder as a business and disciplinary tool, for the prohibition of it as a weapon of greed, lust, and revenge among the gang's underlings. He advocated organization based on self-interest and carefully allotted proportionate rewards. Terrorism, the sovereignty of fear, he held, was a spotty control. Through its holes boomerangs could come. In more than one crisis Blaine had proved his policy and methods to be the sounder. He had a native smartness, a resiliency of mind, a bedrock firmness of will, all more marked than his leader. Nevertheless, Johnson, long in control of the seething section of New York where the two operated, had run things his own way. It was as difficult for him to abandon murder in the abstract as it was for him to make up his mind to order an individual killing. In the one case greed, in the other fear, swayed him to indecision.

Then the day came when Detective Inspector Nicholson, attached to the homicide squad, had gathered evidence solidly linking Blaine, the pacifist of gangland, to a callous shooting. Believe it or not, you couldn't buy Inspector Nicholson. You couldn't shush him. The city was aroused over gang depredations. The press and the public had confidence in Nicholson. Nobody could control him, call him off. Johnson had tried. So had others.

NICHOLSON organized a man hunt. If he got Blaine, he would hold him.

The dark haired chief with the olive skin and his ruddy assistant talked the case over, most of one night. Blaine faced the situation squarely. He didn't whine. It was time for him to blow. Johnson, with a feeling of relief, paid him four thousand dollars, and the next morning he slipped past Fire island on an oil tanker bound for San Francisco.

Johnson did not hear from his ex-aid for more than two years. Then a letter from Fiji, announcing that there would be pearls to buy.

Now Blaine was back, and the day after his arrival Nicholson had popped him into prison, not on the old charge, but in connection with the shooting of Brand Reagan, co-owner of the pearls, the night that the Puka Puka came to berth in Brooklyn. This time the evidence did not seem so clear. Morgue Johnson's mouthpiece was able to spring the redhead on bail.

“I didn't know you were going to bring these babies back yourself,” Johnson interrupted Blaine's narrative.

The gray eyes hardened.

“It's a good town, Morgue. I couldn't stay away.”

“I'll give you eight grand for the pearls,” Johnson offered, casually, as if he were mentioning the figure for the first time.

Blaine shook his head stubbornly. One by one he opened the black silk envelope again, and in the center of each small square of cloth he placed the gem it had covered and warmed. Silk gives pearls life, they say. Something had kept these magnificent specimens vividly alive. They glowed, not with the hard brilliance of diamonds but with an elusive yet intense light. They seemed to represent, as their kind always have, the essence of the fulfillment of human desire. Under the direct rays of the overhanging electric bulb, and against the bright black bits of cloth, they shone cream-white, with the faintest hint of rose. An imaginative man would have compared them to beautiful women, bodies blurred by the softest and most fragile of veils. The simile did not occur to Morgue Johnson, but he felt the power, the thrall.

The black eyes, with a palpable wrench, came away from the table.

“Have you seen any of the boys?”

“Nobody. I came directly here as soon as Levy sprung me.”

Johnson was in one of his characteristic moments of indecision. The newspaper accounts, mere stickfuls, of Reagan's death had said nothing of pearls. It was possible, if the deal were known only to these two, to buy the stones and then have Blaine bumped off, retrieving the purchase price. But if this particular type of treachery were noised abroad, the effect would be bad. To make a trade and then to double-cross, fatally, the party of the second part—that tended to inspire unease, to destroy the confidence of other associates, to make them nervous, jumpy, inclined to sudden flame of panicky rebellion.

Johnson did not know whether he wanted Blaine dead or back at work. He had missed the redhead in many ways, but he had got along. He had effected alliances with the Uale gang, with the Diamond crowd.

Things were moving smoothly. If Blaine was going to strike for a place in the underworld, it must be the old niche. He would make an ugly antagonist, even starting alone. Would the strain of keeping him in line, of dominating him, overbalance the value of his head and courage? Morgue, earlier in the evening, had made arrangements in case the decision was thumbs down.

In any event, if Blaine was to live, this first transaction must clearly show who was making terms, running things.

“Eight grand is tops, Dick.”

“You're hard, Morgue. Would you make it ten?”

“Eight grand.”

A moment of hesitation. Some one's drunken laugh drifted through the closed door from the speakeasy bar. Otherwise it was very silent in the little room. The cream-white gems nestled magically under the light, self-sufficient in a world of passions.

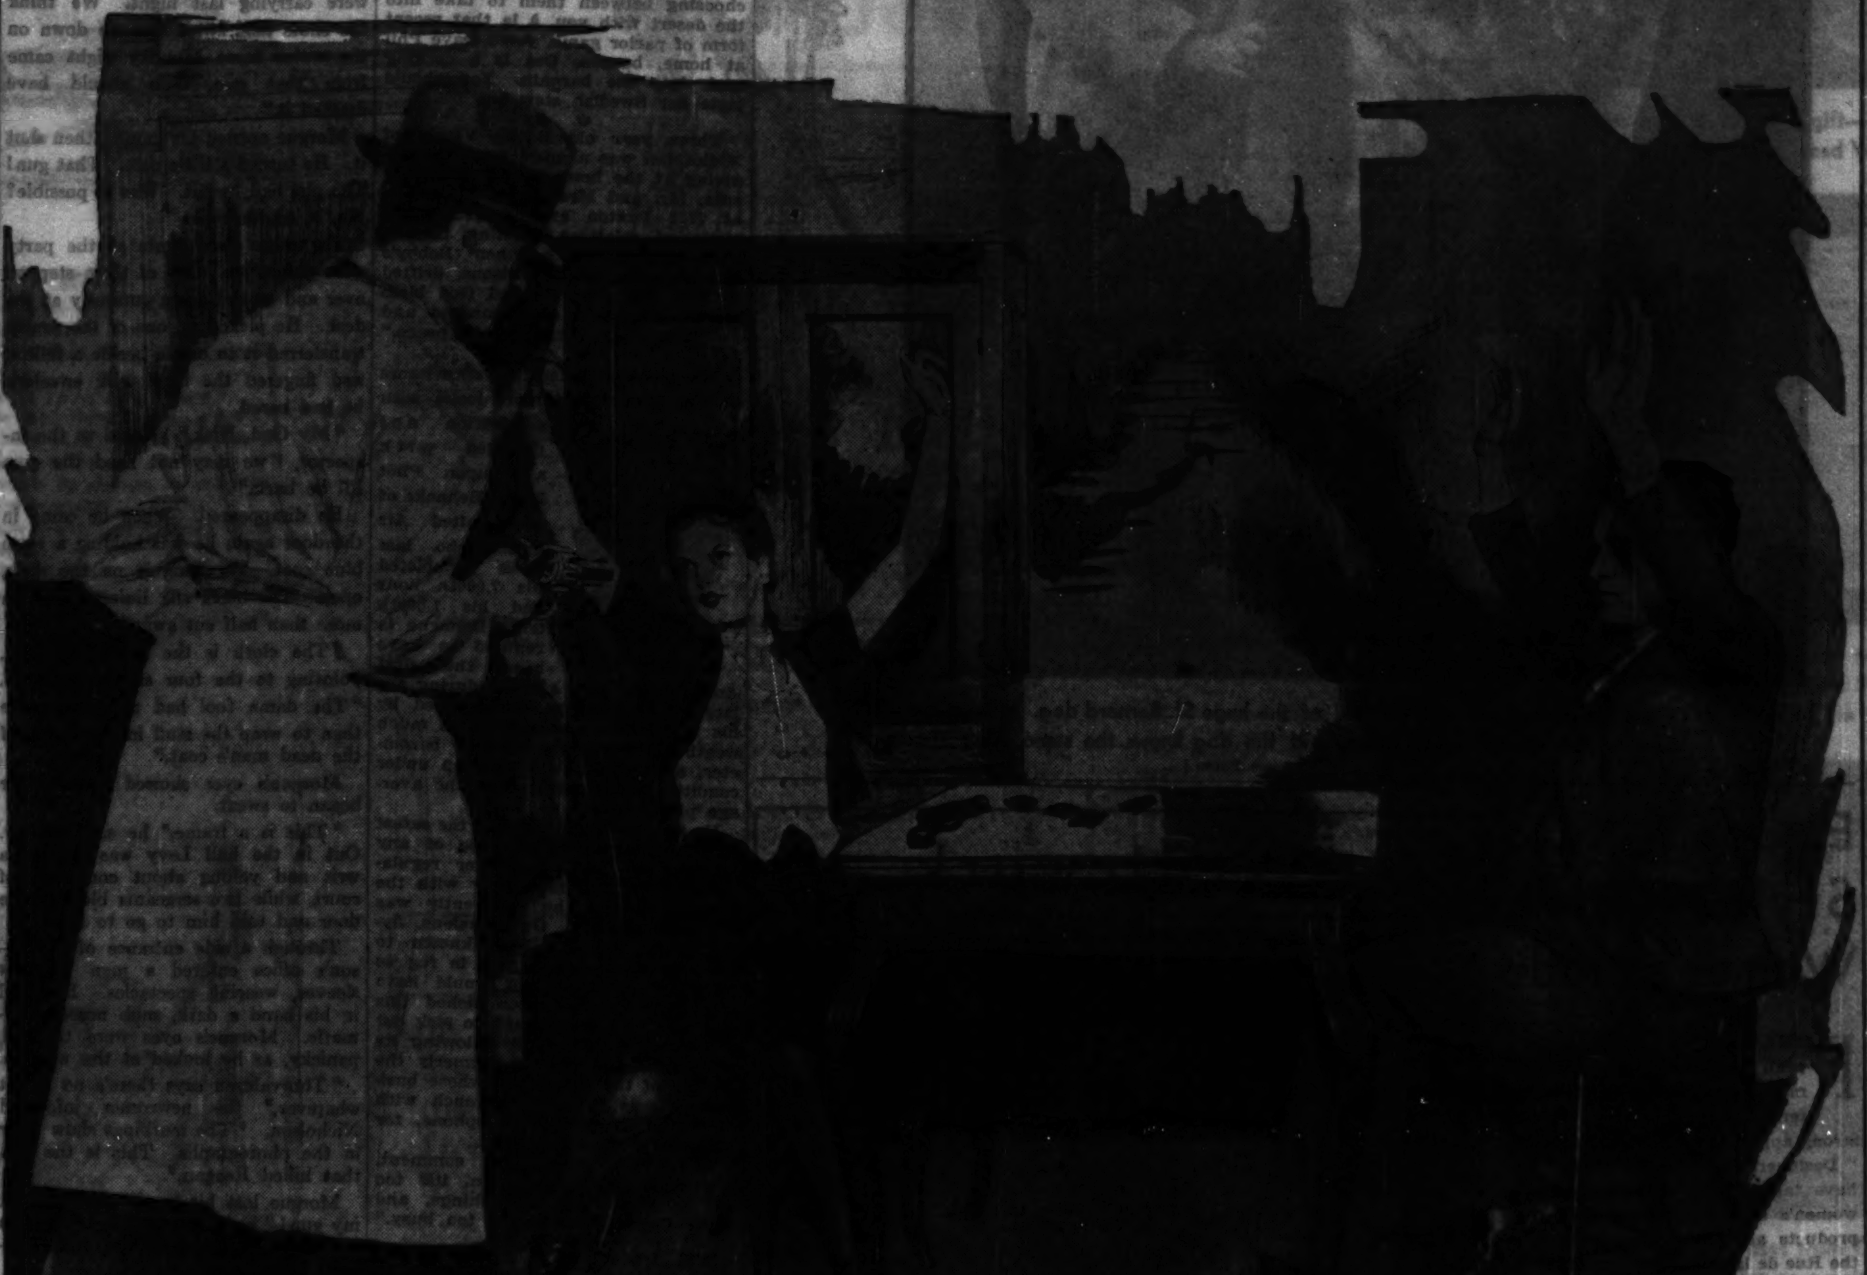
The muscles in Blaine's face flexed, tautened, the big bones protruding.

“No trade,” he said. He methodically returned each pearl to its container, slipped the four into his coat pocket.

The room seemed darker.

“What do you figure to do, Dick?” Johnson asked.

“Well, I thought I'd look around a week or so. Blow a little of what I get for these. I have a kind of craving for Broadway. When I work it off, is the old job open?”



Also on the table were four tiny black silk envelopes.

“We'll talk about it,” Johnson evaded. “Shag Canale is handling the boys now.”

“Oh, Shag.” Blaine's tone was noncommittal.

The two chatted, the redhead listening with interest to gossip of currents and cross-currents in the seamy understrata of the city. Shop talk of pillage and murder.

They shared two rounds of rye, both on Morgue.

“Thanks for the bail-out,” Blaine said finally, as if about to go. “I won't forget it.”

“Okay, feller,” Johnson returned, with heavy geniality. “No hard feelings about the pearls, I hope. Business is business. Come and see me before you tie up with anybody. Maybe it'd be smart for both of us to work together again. The town is tougher, but the graft is bigger.”

BLAINE put his hands on the table again, this time palms up, in a gesture of surrender. He laughed.

“You win, Morgue. I'll take the eight grand. Why should I run around town with hot rocks? And why should I split an old team by dealing with somebody else? You've dug down for me twice when there were no pearls. It's a trade.”

He slid his hand into his pocket, brought it out, let the contents slide gently onto the table.

To Morgue Johnson those four tiny black silk envelopes, each with its significant bulge, meant more than profit. They were balm to his self-esteem. His eyes under the thick brows lighted with pleasure. He was still boss, still top-man. He had outfaced the bluff, the determined effort of his old lieutenant to raise the ante that he, Morgue, had declared.

With a wide paw he swept the trophies of the evening into his own pocket. Then he took a sheaf of bills from inside his coat. They were all thousands, held together with a rubber band. He stripped off eight and passed them to Blaine.

“Another drink?” he suggested.

“Okay.”

They had the drink.

“See you next week,” Blaine promised.

“Sure,” agreed Johnson. “Sure, Dick. Don't miss.”

Blaine went out by the door that led past the bar.

Among the dozen or so who stood drinking, Shag Canale, scar-faced, narrow-eyed, thin-nosed, dark, turned to watch.

“Hello, Shag,” Blaine greeted him casually.

“Hello, feller.”

They made no move toward shaking hands. The redhead went steadily along to the outer door. Shag stood motionless. His hands hung at his sides, elbows crooked a little. He eyed venomously the receding back.

Morgue Johnson appeared in the door of the rear room.

“Come in here, Shag.” The tone was half invitation, half order.

Shag moved away from the bar, passed through the doorway from which Johnson's big body had disappeared. The thin man walked like a cat.

“Sit down. Drink?”

The drink came. Canale downed his at a gulp, licked the left hand side of his upper lip, which twisted in a sneer.

“Dick Blaine wants to come back with us,” Morgue said.

“Heel,” said Shag.

“Oh, he's not a bad guy. Tried to outtalk me, though, tonight.”

“Always too big for his shoes.” Shag leaned forward earnestly. “It wouldn't do you no harm, Morgue, if somebody was to burn that feller down.”

“Easy,” counseled Morgue. “I can handle him all right. I got some pretties off him, cheap.”

“Yeah?” Shag was noticeably bored.

Morgue's animation increased. He wanted appreciation, approbation. He put his hand in his pocket.

“Look at something real,” he urged. “Forty grand for eight.”

The four packets lay on the table. Shag was interested in spite of himself.

Morgue opened one of the black silk envelopes. His eyes distended in shocked incredulity. His olive skin flushed with a sudden flood of rage. He felt as if all the blood in his body had rushed to his face, choking him as it mounted.

He held, between the thumb and finger of his right hand, a glass marble.

“Cripes!” exclaimed Shag, wonderingly.

Morgue swallowed, got his breathing under control with effort. Fingers that trembled, sweaty under the electric light, fumbled at the remaining envelopes. Each held a similar globe of worthless glass. They lay on the table like four insults.

“The skunk!” Morgue managed utterance. “He switched these on me for four pearls, and walked out of here with eight thousand dollars.”

“I told you he was a heel,” said Shag.

Canale was on his feet. His hands were at his hips, half reaching already. His eyes glowed. He swayed a little with excitement. His shoulders half bent toward a crouch. He looked like a man about to go somewhere on a pleasant errand.

Morgue Johnson was first at the door.

“Buck!” he bellowed at a red faced man with a cauliflower ear. “Did you——”

Then he became conscious of the curious regard of those in the speakeasy.

“Come in here, Buck,” he ordered, moderating his voice.

The ex-pug called Buck came, in a hurry. Morgue closed the door. His appearance was calmer now, but his pulses still pounded and his eyes frightened Buck.

“Did you put a tail on Blaine?”

“Sure, Morgue, sure. Joe Selman.” The tone was placatory.

“Report yet?”

“Not yet.”

“Get some drinks.”

The drinks came. The three men swallowed them in silence. Canale started to speak. Johnson shut him up.

A telephone rang in the outer room. Buck went through the door as if the sound of the phone had released a spring in him. In three minutes he was back, smiling, glad to be the bearer of welcome news.

“Holed up in a dump on Rivington street.” He gave the number. “Fourth floor back.”

“Get Skinny!” snapped Morgue. “Get Spike! Get Nuts! Get the car!”

Five men, Shag driving, Morgue beside him on the front seat, shot silently away from Hester street in a machine that represented the highest achievement of the automobile industry's skill. The glass was bullet proof, the body steel lined. Two tommy guns fitted under the rear seat.

The car crossed the Bowery and slid into an area of pushcarts by day and stifling, crowded poverty by night. With scarcely a purr, like a panther stalking its kill, the big blue sedan circled the block which included the number Buck had given.

Morgue let two men out on the uptown street.

“Watch the alleys,” he commanded.

The car continued around the block. Fifty feet from the goal it came to a noiseless halt. Morgue and Shag got out. Nuts Coogan moved to the wheel.

“Watch the door,” said Morgue.

The house was old, a grime covered red. One tenement in a row of identical hives for misery and crime.

As the two men entered the hallway, ascended the stairs, a few doors opened, a few inquiring heads appeared. The heads withdrew, the doors closed. The rabbits in that warren cringed, each in its hole. Those two who walked softly up the stairs were predatory animals, killers on the hunt.

The fourth floor was the top. From the crest of the stairwell, looking back along the dim hall, a tall wedge of light, four or five inches wide at the source, could be seen bisecting the gloom. The door of the rear apartment was open.

Morgue and Shag tiptoed along that hall, careful as a man with squeaky shoes going up a church aisle. Shag had his gun in his hand. Before the two men reached the door they halted, listened intently, with fascination and puzzlement, to what they heard.

A GIRL spoke, in the room with the partly opened door. She did not raise her voice, but its tones were vibrant, earnest. The words penetrated, clearly distinguishable, to the men in the hallway.

“You dirty tramp!” the voice said, thick with hate. “I ought to put nine holes in you.”

“There are the pearls.” It was Blaine answering. “Right on the table. Take 'em and beat it. They wouldn't let you wear 'em in the electric chair.”

“I'd almost rather burn you down than have 'em, you double crosser.”

“Rats!” Blaine's voice was cool, collected.

Morgue Johnson reached around Shag's shoulder and swung the door wide. Shag stepped through, gun leveled.

“Drop that gun, jane,” Morgue ordered, “and both of you put up your hands.”

He walked around Shag, his own hands in his pockets, and surveyed with relish the scene before him.

On opposite sides of a small table, at the foot of the bed in the dingy room, sat Dick Blaine and a girl. The girl was blue eyed, slenderly and well built. Her face was heavily rouged, her lips a scarlet blob. She wore a dress of dark material, cheap looking but neat. A blue cloche hat almost hid tight clamped brown hair.

It was evident that the girl had been covering Blaine. She had dropped her weapon at Morgue's command and it lay now on the table, a snubnosed automatic about the same color as her dress. Also on the table were four tiny black silk envelopes, each bulging familiarly at the center.

Morgue walked over and picked up the automatic. He balanced it a moment, from force of habit, then slid it into his pocket.

The girl paid no attention to him. Her eyes, rapt and fearful, were held by the sight of Shag and the gun Shag held. Anybody could tell that Canale's trigger finger itched.

Blaine, however, looked steadily at Morgue. The redhead's mouth was drawn down at the corners. His cheek bones were prominent. He appeared tired, beaten. The girl wrenched her glance away from the poised menace of Shag.

“What are you doing in this party?” she demanded of Morgue. Her voice trembled.

“It's my party,” Johnson replied.

She rose, came close, put her hands on Morgue's shoulders.

“Take the stuff, if you want it,” she pleaded, “but leave this crum to me.”

Shag had tensed with the girl's movement. Morgue seized her wrists and flung her violently from him. She staggered, recovered.

“Beat it, sister,” he growled at her. The mute black envelopes on the table infuriated him. He had made up his mind. “Things are going to happen here. It'll be healthier if you don't see 'em.”

“Give me the gun,” she urged. “I'll do it.”

“Aw, beat it,” Blaine seconded. “You're only a fourflusher, anyway.”

The girl looked at him, studied Morgue half defiantly, half fearfully; returned her gaze to Shag's hot and impatient eyes.

Shag took a step forward.

“Beat it,” he added his command, “before I fan you.”

Her glance swept around the room once more. She walked haltingly until she was past the point of Canale's automatic, then vanished through the door on the run, slamming it behind her.

“It looks like you double-cross everybody,” Morgue observed to Blaine. “Crum is right.”

The redhead's hands were still in the air.

“Can I take 'em down?” he asked.

Morgue ran his hands over Blaine's body, careful not to step between the seated figure and Shag. He found a second automatic and tossed it to Canale, who caught it with his left hand.

“Now you can take 'em down,” Morgue answered Blaine's question. “Fold 'em on your chest, if you want. It'll only be a few minutes ahead of schedule.”

“What's the use of the rough talk?” the man at the table inquired, in a voice that spoke weariness. “You win.”

“That's right.” Johnson laughed in a heavy sarcasm. “That's exactly right. Always the wise guy. Always able to figure things out.” He stepped close again, his eyes pits of fire. “You're damned right I win. I win permanent. You've always thought you could outsmart me. This time you pulled a fast one that wasn't fast enough. There's not a reason in God's world why I shouldn't throw your lousy corpse out that window into an alley, and, by God, I'm going to do it!”

“Tripe,” said Blaine disgustedly.

“Tripe?” Emotion almost overcame the gang leader. He choked as he had done back in the speakeasy. “We'll see if it's tripe. First, I'll have that eight grand you stole from me. I don't want Shag to shoot holes in it.”

“I haven't got it,” Blaine informed him. “The girl's got it.”

“Damn!” Morgue, mouth open, eyes stunned with surprise, was ludicrous.

Nobody laughed.

“Sure,” Blaine shrugged. “She lifted it off me first thing. You're so smart, you should have thought of that.”

“I don't believe you.”

“Search me.”

Morgue searched him.

“It's somewhere in the room.”

“Don't be funny. The girl was waiting here for me when I came in.”

“Where is she now?”

“How the hell do I know? Did she act like a sweetie of mine?”

FOR the second time that night Morgue was baffled, undecided. He had hoped to secure both the pearls and the money, and be rid of Blaine to boot. The underworld would indorse a kill after the trick that had been tried. Now it looked like a third of this triple program was out. Eight thousand dollars! Anger took control again.

“Well, you might have saved yourself,” he lied, “if you had told me the jane had the dough. I'll get her later. Now I'm going to wipe you out, Dick. This town's not big enough for you and me both.”

“You mean you're going to let Shag wipe me out,” the man at the table corrected.

“Suit yourself. You'll be just as dead.”

“You might do it, too,” Blaine commented thoughtfully, “if you had the pearls.”

Morgue regarded him in blank surprise. “What the hell am I?” he demanded. “A cripple?” He reached down and swept up from the table the four silk envelopes. They felt good.

“Take a look,” the redhead suggested imperturbably.

Morgue's fingers trembled again. Beads of perspiration formed at the roots of the black hairs on his hands. He opened one of the envelopes. A glass marble fell from his fingers, struck the table top, rolled to the floor and across the room.

“The girl's got the pearls, too,” Blaine told him. “You let her walk right out with them.” He did not trouble to disguise the contempt in his voice.

Morgue swore. “This is a frame!” Blaine shrugged.

“Jees,” begged Shag, “let me give it to him, Morgue!”

“Wait!” ordered Johnson. He turned to the redhead, who slumped in his chair with an aspect of patient boredom. “You're going to tell me where that girl has gone. You're going to tell me right. If you don't, you won't live five minutes.”

“And if I do,” suggested Blaine, “you'll kiss me and give me Shag for a playmate. Listen, Morgue, I won't tell you this has been a joke. You wouldn't believe me.”

“Smart,” snapped Johnson. He was regaining his confidence.

“Anyway, I thought you might have me tailed when I came here. And if you took the trouble to do that, the future wouldn't look so bright for me, whether I had given you the real pearls or not. Of course, when you did come, you came on a killing. I'd a got it, if you'd found the pearls and recovered the dough.”

“What is this?” Shag wanted to know. “An oration?”

“I'm licked,” Blaine conceded. “I know now you'll get the pearls. I'm damned if you'll get the money. The girl is caching it on the way.”

“I'll get both,” Morgue promised. “Where is she?”

“I'd be a fool to tell you while you're here. You know where the Colonnade apartments are?”

“Yeah,” admitted Morgue. It was a big new building on West 72d street. Eight hundred suites. Half a dozen entrances.

“Well,” said Blaine, “you go to the drug store in the southeast corner of that building and phone me. You'll be in the same building as the pearls. I'll give you the straight dope on the phone.”

“Bull!” put in Shag.

“You'll tell me here and now,” Morgue swore.

“Go ahead and get the bluff over,” Blaine returned, wearily. “Tell Shag to shoot. But wink at him, or the damn fool'll do it.”

MORGUE'S brain was fumbling at this thing stupidly, as his fingers had pulled at the envelopes that held the marbles.

“How do I know this is not another frame?”

“Who's going to frame you in a corner drug store, with an army behind you? Isn't Shag good enough to cover you while you're in the booth?”

Johnson's brain clicked back to normal. The problem was simple, after all.

“Okay,” he agreed. “I'll take a chance. But God help you if this is more funny business.”

“God help you,” Blaine flung back at him, “if you're tough with the girl!”

“Don't threaten me!” Morgue flared.

“I'll wait for the phone call,” said Blaine. “The number is Drydock 7-3814.”

Morgue wrote it down. “You'd better wait,” he advised. He and Shag went out.

“I'll see you in hell, feller,” Canale taunted from the door.

“Wait there for me,” said Blaine.

When the two had gone, the redhead went over to the telephone. That corner of the room was comparatively dark or Shag, who stayed alive by noticing everything, would have noticed that both the instrument and the wiring were new.

When the bell rang, Blaine was standing in the center of the room, by the table, out of line with the window. He knew perfectly well that Morgue Johnson had no intention of letting him get away from this situation alive. He could see, in his mind's eye, the guards still at the alleys, a lurking figure in the night shadows that shrouded the front of the block. He would not have walked down the stairs and out in the street for another eight thousand dollars. He would stay right there, where he was, until he was adequately escorted, until the neighborhood had been scoured.

He lifted the receiver.

“Hello.”

“Well,” said Morgue's voice. “I'm in the drug store. Is this more comedy, or are you coming through? Where is the girl?”

“Will you lay off me?” Blaine asked.

“When I get the pearls. Where is the girl?”

“You don't need the girl. I told you you'd be in the building with the pearls. They're in your coat pocket.”

“The hell you say!”

“Sure, Smart Guy. The girl put them there when she came up to you, before you threw her out.”

Blaine hung up.

When Morgue, more bewildered than ever, stepped from the phone booth, feeling unbelievingly the four fat envelopes in his pocket, he was startled by the sight of Detective Inspector Robert Nicholson, who stepped up to him.

“You'll have to come with me, Morgue,” Nicholson told him.

“W—what for?” stammered Johnson.

“Murder.”

Shag Canale, who had been leaning against the soda fountain, and who had stiffened to nervous rigidity when the star of the homicide squad strolled in, reached wildly for his automatic. A uniformed cop, who had risen from a crouch behind the fountain, leaned over the marble counter and hit Shag on the head, hard, with a blackjack.

LEVY, the mouthpiece, stormed half the night in an attempt to get his client free.

“Nothing doing,” said Nicholson, and the district attorney's office backed him up.

“Well, you can't hold him but twenty-four hours without showing definite proof,” Levy snarled. “I'll have a writ in the morning.”

“I'll have the proof in the morning.”

Morning came and Morgue was invited to a party. He came direct from a room with a high powered white light, where he had been aimlessly grilled all night. He looked disheveled,

Do Not Teach Your Children to Fear Dogs

They Sense Whether the Youngsters Like Them and Are Loyal Friends

By Robert Joos.

CHILDREN should not be taught to fear dogs. It is surprising how many mothers, when out walking with their children, endeavor to instill the fear of a dog into easily molded minds. Often these same parents fear a dog, themselves, and consider it only proper that their children should go through life with the same fear for this usually harmless domesticated animal.

This practice has been carried so far in some cases that children fear dogs more than wild animals and with the result that these children, or many of them, grow up confirmed dog haters. Such teachings are not only unfair to the dog, but most unfair to the child itself. The teaching of fear of anything to a child, is not good practice. It tends to excite his nerves and puts him on edge.

As dogs are so common on the streets and in many public places, the child is subjected to a constant repetition of this excitable fear. Surely, such constant dread and exciting of the child's feelings is anything but good and results in much discomfort to the parents, also.

Use Discretion.

A child should not, however, be encouraged to approach every strange dog it meets on the street, in public places or even in homes. Timidity and being too friendly are two different things. It is natural for some children to love dogs and other animals. The love of pets seems to be born in them. They want to pet and hug every animal they see and, of course, there are some dogs who by nature are not inclined to be receptive to this affectionate attention from strangers. It is, therefore, best to know your dog before permitting the child to caress and make over him.

But never discourage this trait in a child. Should he want to approach a strange dog which shows no sign of friendliness, or a dog which possibly has mange or some other disease, do not use the common admonition "Be careful, he may bite you." This very phase often repeated will, in time, leave the impression in the child's easily molded mind that dogs are to be feared and will bite them.

Most dogs love children. They seem to enjoy the company and attention of youngsters more than they do of the grownups. It is a well known fact that dogs will, as a rule, stand far more abuse and rough handling from children and in cases of danger will protect them from harm. If necessary, they will fight and risk their lives for them.

Strange, but true, the dog has a faculty of knowing whether the child is fond of dogs or not and will show this plainly in his actions. If the child shows by his action a timidity with dogs, do not force him to play with them, but in such a case teach the child to be kind to him and, above all, not to fear him or any other dog it meets or gets in contact with. It is just as hard to make a child love pets, when it is disinclined to do so, as it is to try to break a child from being a lover of animals.

Difference in Dogs.

So many children love dogs and are denied the pleasure of having one that they are very apt to want to make friends with the neighbors' dogs, or dogs they meet on the streets. Such children should be told that there is a difference in dogs and that they should not endeavor to stop dogs on the street which are going along minding their own business and which do not show signs of wanting to make their acquaintance.

It is more advisable that they be encouraged to play with some neighbor's dog accustomed to children and which, you know, will enjoy the child's company. It is far better, however, to permit the child dog lover to have a dog of its own, providing circumstances permit. Some parents promise their children dogs and keep on promising, yet never keep their promises. Parents making promises of this kind to a child should not be mislead with the idea that the youngster will forget. The dream of owning a dog is never forgotten by such a child. How well I remember how I pleaded for my first dog and how happy and proud I was when I got the little mongrel! Toys are appreciated, but the joy of owning something alive—that is the real ambition in the heart of almost every child, boy or girl.

Teaches Kindness.

Owning a dog teaches a child kindness, gives it a companion, a loyal friend and fortifies the child against fearing other dogs. The love for dumb animals should be encouraged. If, on the other hand, circumstances are such that a dog cannot be kept on the premises, do not object to your child playing with some friendly canine known to have a kind disposition.

True, there are some vicious dogs, and should such a one approach you and your child with a growl, do not permit the child to run away. If you do, the dog will probably run after her, as it is natural for this animal to chase anything that runs. Hold your ground, speak to him and back away slowly, face forward.

There are few dogs that will attack a child, unless the child teases or molests him and any dog known lacking in this trait should be killed. Often a dog with not too friendly a look will approach a child to sniff its clothes. The natural impulse is for the child to become frightened and attempt to run away. If the child will stand perfectly still and permit the dog to have his sniff he will probably turn around and walk away.

It is hardly probable that any one owning a really vicious dog would permit such an animal to roam at large, especially in the city, and although some dogs appear vicious, they are not bad at all, but just like to show off. The size of the dog has nothing to do with its disposition. Some of the largest breeds are known for their friendliness and many of the big dogs are cowards. On the other hand, some of the smallest house dogs are inclined to have mean habits, for instance, they have the habit of snapping at one's heels, but in rare instances will they molest children.

Dogs love children. Why not then permit the children to love dogs and teach them not to fear them?

Dogs Understand the Children

This youngster isn't at all afraid of the huge St. Bernard dog. In fact, she knows he is one of her best friends and the dog knows the same thing about her.

Europe's Auto Styles Follow Women's Mode

PARIS, France.—[U. P.]—European motor style for 1932 will make a distinct appeal to the feminine eye and an equally strong appeal to the masculine pocket.

Designers of Europe's motor cars have taken a tip from designers of women's clothes and patterned their products along the lines decreed by the Rue de la Paix. Consequently, the new motor styles, like women's fashions, will favor the ultimate in streamlining, but with nothing very new under the bonnet.

New models exhibited at the 25th Paris motor show have revealed further steps taken by automobile designers to win feminine approval in 1932.

Roomy Interiors.

The new cars will have more roomy interiors to accommodate the more expansive dresses. They will also be finished, inside and out, in pastel shades to match any ensemble or any complexion.

At the same time, the designers have not forgotten the man who pays. Prices have been reduced in most cases below the 1931 level, or increased value has been given without additional cost.

Mauve and Saffron.

The keynote of the Paris show was conservatism in regard to basic changes, but radicalism in regard to externals.

Only a few straight eights were exhibited in the Paris show and 12 cylinder models were almost negligible. The only important mechanical innovations were sleeve valve motors, free wheeling and automatic gear control.

In contrast with this, the changes in externals were remarkable.

Newly perfected paint processes made it practicable to finish cars in such colors as mauve, saffron, and robin's egg blue. Upholstery in all colors of the rainbow was another feature.

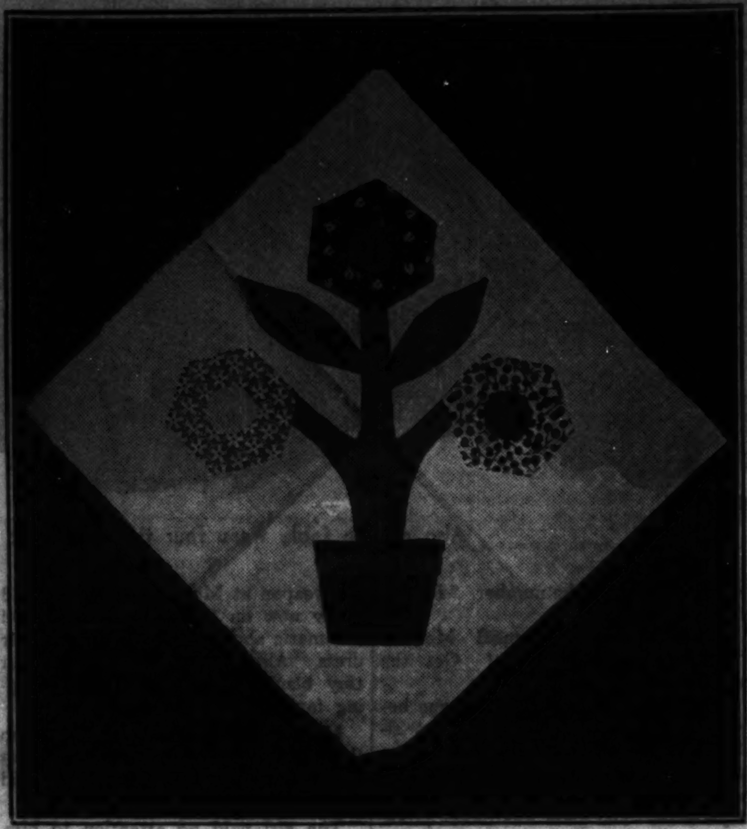
Needlework



Quaint Flower Design Is Alternated with Blocks of White in an Attractive Patchwork Quilt.

What is your sewing problem? Do you have trouble in following a pattern? Do you find difficulty in making a skirt hang even or making a sleeve that doesn't twist? If there is anything you would like to know about these or other problems of needlework, write to Clotilde, The Tribune, Chicago, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope, if a personal reply is desired.

By Clotilde.

ONE square of a beautiful quilt is shown here, and I feel sure that anybody who likes needlework will enjoy making one of these coverings.

This quilt is made of a fine, undressed muslin, as it is so much prettier than unbleached muslin. Five yards will be needed, also one-half yard of lavender for the flower pots, one yard of green for the stems, and twelve three inch wide strips of flowered or other figured prints. These decorated squares measure twelve and one-quarter inches, and there are fifteen of them.

Besides these fifteen there are twenty squares of the white. In addition to these there are half squares that fill in on all sides to make straight edges.

The squares are set together diagonally, otherwise the flower pots wouldn't stand up, and between each square is a plain square of the white. This makes ideal pickup work, and it is surprising how rapidly it progresses.

The flower measures three inches across, and the small circular piece in the center measures one and one-half inches. The flower pot is three inches deep, two and one-half at the bottom and three and one-half across the top.

The stem from the pot to the flower at the top is six inches long.

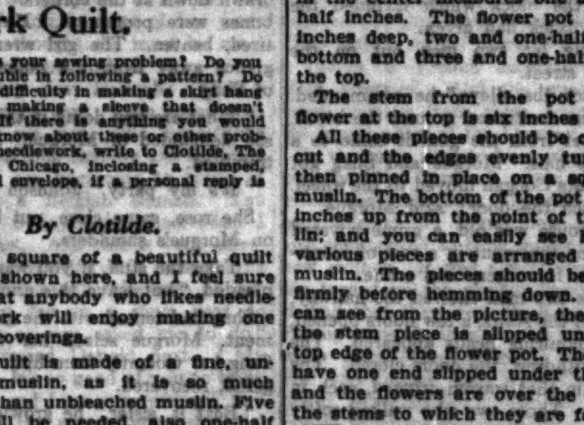
All these pieces should be carefully cut and the edges evenly turned in, then pinned in place on a square of muslin. The bottom of the pot is three inches up from the point of the muslin; and you can easily see how the various pieces are arranged on the muslin. The pieces should be basted firmly before hemming down. As you can see from the picture, the end of the stem piece is slipped under the top edge of the flower pot. The leaves have one end slipped under the stem and the flowers are over the ends of the stems to which they are fastened.

When you are ready to put the pieces together set a plain white square between each flowered square, filling out on all sides with half squares of the plain white.

Probably any department store will have the quilt made up for you—for it should be quilted—and if such work isn't done there, they possibly may tell you where such work is done.

When the quilt is done there will be three rows of the patchwork squares and five in each row. This will make the quilt long enough to be brought up over the pillow.

Dachshund Foot Scraper



NO dire need, perhaps, of a foot scraper at our door these modern times, when city and suburban civic associations pave our streets and keep our walks shoveled clean [sometimes!] on snowy, blizzardy days. Still, there are occasions when it has its uses and, need it or not, there is hospitality in its presence. Like the door knocker of ye olden days, a foot scraper bids one enter. In many guises we see it. Here it takes the form of a black iron dachshund, alertly waiting the moment he can be of service to the incoming guest.

Chin-Chin

GIVE her an accordion and a well trained stooge and you've got a feminine Phil Baker in Mrs. Ora H. Snyder—that sweet lady. Practically all of her entertaining is done far from the footlights, in the privacy of her own home, so that comparatively few know how skillful she is with her "bellows piano," as somebody called it. And her fund of funny stories does not vie in audacity with that of the comedian, but gets the laughs just as quickly. Last but not least, if you were choosing between them to take into the desert with you, à la that recent form of parlor game, you'd leave Phil at home, because Ora is a corking cook into the bargain. You should taste her Swedish stew.

May they rest in peace."

The postwar generation of aviators at the Municipal airport looks with admiration not unmixed with awe upon Pilot David Behncke of the United Air lines, who last week completed his 7,000th hour and his 1,000th trip. Behncke is reputed to have been the first American to drop a bomb during the late guerre. He is also credited by his friends with possessing as much weather sense as the ordinary barometer, and will take a ship up under conditions that would turn the average pilot gray.

MR. BEHNCKE.

He is considered, perhaps, the safest pilot to fly behind in case of any trouble, yet until passenger regulations forced him to comply with the safeguard rules, he apparently was the most careless. On occasions, flying alone, he has been known to bring a plane to the port in fog so thick no other airman would have attempted it. He accomplished this feat by flying low enough to pick out a passenger train, and following its headlight. And he was formerly the despair of the radio men whose business it was to keep in touch with his plane by wireless telephone, for he never wore his headset.

"Shucks!" was his comment. "When I don't need 'em, it's too hot to wear the darn things, and when I'm in trouble I'm too busy."

Will Irwin, widely known author who was in Chicago last week, is an old schoolmate of President Hoover. Talking over this and that with callers, he confessed that he is the victim of nightmares almost periodically, and that they invariably assume the same formula. He and Herbert Hoover are being put through a Greek test and, as Greek was the one subject he was always in hot water about, he suffers tortures trying to make a passing grade in his troubled dreams.

Fashion lore right from the font arrived in Chicago last week, tucked away among that "gray matter" that makes Helen Hall a power behind the thrones in Hollywood. Miss Hall, fashion adviser at the Paramount studios, was on her way back west after attending the Paris showings. At the Stevens hotel, where she spent the day between quick consultations with the smartest shops in this metropolis, she was discovered in an impeccably modish outfit—a Burgundy velour suit, trimmed with beaver, and a snug little brown tricorne. Chicago women, she averred, are taking proper advantage of the unrivaled facilities they have for smart costuming.

"Movies?" she laughed. "Well! I never go to a picture to criticize the plot—it's the clothes. Do you know the one costume that is most frequently incorrect on the screen? The riding habit. It's surprising how often actors are made to appear in a bridle path costume at a horse show, or vice versa. I think Gloria Swanson, without a doubt, is the one actress in Hollywood who is always both tastefully and correctly garbed, on the screen or off. Some film stars make quite a different appearance away from the camera, you know.

"As for the newest colors, they are Romany red, beige with a yellow cast, lapis, and Annapolis blue. And as for me, I'm looking forward to a day when I can hie away to the South sea islands and spend my time doing nothing more strenuous every day than picking out different colored beads to wear."

In a notably interesting illustrated lecture before the Hyde Park Travel club a few days ago Commander Donald MacMillan, one of Peary's party at the discovery of the north pole, related that Mrs. Peary had made her explorer husband a silk American flag which he carried with him into the northland. At each important discovery of a new point of land Peary cut a patch from this flag and buried it in a metal tube in a pile of rock. Three such fragments have been discovered by MacMillan and brought back to Washington to be sewed back into the flag, now kept there as a relic. Peary's arrival at the north pole was commemorated by his cutting a diagonal strip from the center of the flag and burying it, but, since only water and ice surround the pole, it was carried away and lost in the polar sea.

Articles of clothing tossed overboard from a sinking ship on the American side of the pole, Commander MacMillan added, have passed clear over the top of the world and have been picked up at Spitzbergen, Norway.

Mrs. William J. Chalmers has a milliner in Paris called Suzette. When one of her best friends started abroad early last summer she was admonished to "stop in and see Suzette." As the French milliner and her patron's friend chatted, Suzette's nimble mind and fingers were busy designing and making a hat for Mrs. Chalmers, which the friend duly brought back to Chicago with her. It is one of the most becoming Mrs. Chalmers has ever worn.

he was worried, but he still had fight in him.

"I guess you know you'd better be sure what you're doing," he flung at Nicholson.

The party was in the detective inspector's office. On the desk were four black silk envelopes. They were open and on each one rested a resplendent pearl. Morgue eyed them bitterly.

Nicholson leaned back in his chair. He had a florid face and a bulldog chin, but his eyes were clear and fine.

"I know what I'm doing, Morgue," he said quietly. "We'll have a report in a few minutes on that gun you were carrying last night. We think the shots that killed Reagan down on the water front Monday night came from that gun. You should have ditched it."

Morgue opened his mouth, then shut it. He turned a little pale. That gun! The girl had had it. Was it possible? No, it couldn't be.

The other two guests at the party were detectives. One of them stepped over and looked down curiously at the desk. He picked up one of the pearls, transferred it to nestle beside a fellow, and fingered the black silk envelope he had bared.

"My God, Nick," he said to the inspector, "we may not need the gun. I'll be back."

He disappeared. When he came in the door again he was holding a worn blue coat. He flung it on the desk, open. The black silk lining had been more than half cut away.

"The cloth is the same," he said, pointing to the four small envelopes. "The damn fool had no more sense than to wrap the stuff in the lining of the dead man's coat."

Morgue's eyes showed terror. He began to sweat.

"This is a frame," he said thickly. Out in the hall Levy was waving a writ and yelling about contempt of court, while two sergeants blocked the door and told him to go to hell.

Through a side entrance of Nicholson's office entered a man in shirt sleeves, wearing spectacles. He held in his hand a dark, snub nosed automatic. Morgue's eyes were trapped, panicky, as he looked at the weapon.

"Thorvaldsen says there's no doubt whatever," the newcomer informed Nicholson. "The markings show clear in the photographs. This is the gun that killed Reagan."

Morgue lost his head. "That's not my gun!" he shouted. "It belongs to a guy named Dopey White, from Chicago."

It was a bad mistake. Dopey White was known. He could be rounded up. When he heard that Morgue had spilled his name he would do some talking himself, to save his own neck. The hirer of a murderer is as guilty as the firer of the shot. Dopey would get off light, in return for his story. Morgue was the man Nicholson wanted in the hot seat, had wanted there for years.

"Get Dopey White," the inspector said to one of the detectives, "here or in Chicago. Hop to it."

Then to the other man: "The case is broken. We're ready for a preliminary hearing. Let Levy in."

DICK BLAINE sat in Carey Reagan's two by four apartment, his long legs extending awkwardly from a cretonne covered chair.

"You were plenty nervy to go through with that plan," he told her. "I shouldn't have let you do it. That Shag Canale will kill somebody just out of excitement, if he ever gets free again. He sure thinks a trigger is made to pull."

"I never dreamed before how scared I could be," she confessed.

He grinned.

"You looked it."

The girl was not overrouged now. She wore a light dress of good quality and tasteful cut. Her brown hair was free and aureoled her sensitive face to make a picture that looked good to Blaine.

"You told me very little," she reminded him. "Just gave me orders. I'd like to know some more, especially how you figured all this out."

"I won't bother you with the sad story of my life," the redhead said, "but I always knew I was a fool to be on the wrong side of the law. Some day I would have been forced to a killing. It's a hard business to get out of, once you're in it.

"Morgue hated me because I was right too often. I knew, of course, that he had fixed up that murder evidence, three years ago. But the frame was good, and I couldn't prove it. I kept my mouth shut, took the money he offered, and blew."

He regarded the end of a cigar.

"The tropics didn't hit me like it hits some men. I felt free, and glad to be doing something clean. Then—I met Brand."

"You were good friends," the girl said softly.

"It was the first time I ever knew what friendship was. When we butted into another man's engagement with death, and broke it, and got the pearls, Brand was going to bring them to New York. Then I got your letter, saying you had gone to Nicholson and that the old evidence against me had long since been found to be false.

"Brand had planned to gyp Morgue for me, by way of revenge. He first thought of switching the pearls. But I never liked the idea. I decided to come with Brand, but to give no notice of my return. I'd just be here to back the play.

"Our terrible misfortune was that Brand had to stay on duty on the Puka Puka until midnight of the night we docked. He gave me the pearls and sent me up here to tell you he was coming. When he was waylaid, after leaving the ship, I knew that Morgue was at his old tricks. Death costs a lot less in this town than eight grand.

"I went down to the Brooklyn water front next day, combed the weeds in all the vacant lots. I found the gun. Then I went to Nicholson, gave him my ironclad alibi, and asked him to jug me for the murder. I didn't tell him about the gun. I got my hands on your brother's coat and rifled the lining.

"Morgue bailed me out, as I expected. I couldn't let him have the pearls in the Hester street place. He would have had me bumped off, [illegible] to get his money back. And I couldn't plant the gun on him then. The second meeting, on Rivington street, was the only way to work it. After he and Shag left I telephoned Nicholson where to make the pinch."

SHE looked at him thoughtfully, [illegible] admiration.

"I suppose you have proof of ownership of the pearls."

"Sure," said Blaine. "A deed of gift, witnessed by the United States consul in Samoa. Also a paper from Brand, willing his share to you."

She sighed, puckered her brows.

"I suppose it'll be months before you can get them back. They'll be held for evidence, won't they?"

The gray eyes twinkled, the big face cracked in a smile.

"You don't think I let you give that rat the real pearls, do you?" he asked. "Those were good imitations, though. They cost me six dollars apiece."

He reached in his pocket, brought out four envelopes, white silk, [illegible] reminiscent of the dead man. A moment later four great lustrous pearls shone in the red hand.

Carey Reagan touched them gently, wonderingly.

"You can have either pair," Blaine offered, "or we'll split the proceeds."

"We'll split," the girl said.

Blaine smiled again.

"What is it?"

"I was just thinking about the ten grand Morgue paid a kid in the district attorney's office, so I could get out on bail. It went to the police fund."

She thought that over.

"What will you do with the eight thousand dollars Johnson paid for the imitation pearls?" she asked.

"Split," said Blaine.

Five Fatal Words

By Edwin Balmer and Philip Wylie

of any domestic routine, was a cause for grave worry and frantic speculation. Moreover, there ran through her mind continually the memory of the incident with Mrs. Wilbur. Alice, she was A in the series of Cornwall names of whom D and E already were killed. Had Alice Cornwall now received the five meaningless words spelling death which had heralded the fate of the other two?

She had denied it with her lips, but—had she?

THE fire in the grate flickered lower and died to glowing coals. The room became dark. Time passed slowly. She heard faint rustlings in the adjoining room where Miss Cornwall slept, and once she thought she heard the sound of the door creaking on its hinges, but afterwards there was silence—a silence that lasted for many minutes. Then somewhere in the distance a motor car started and its sound traveled off into the night. The sound of the starting of the car was so far away that Melicent made no connection between it and the creakings in the house until some time afterward. She was ultimately convinced that the house had settled for the night and that everything was all right.

It was perhaps one o'clock when she fell asleep. The night outside was very dark and not a breath of wind was stirring. A heavy mist had risen on the river and the last thing she saw before she closed her eyes was the formation of myriad water drops on the outside panes of the window glass, where the mist was congealing. The drops of water illuminated by the ruddy glow of the embers in the grate were cherry red, as if blood had been lightly sprinkled upon the windows.

She woke up choking. The room was pitch dark. Her chest was heavily oppressed and her ears rang. Consciousness came to her instantly and she sat up in bed. She choked again. At first she thought there was something in her throat—a speck of lint from the pillow, perhaps, but she was unable to clear her throat. The feeling of strangulation increased and then, horrible in the gloomy darkness, came the thought that the air in her room had been poisoned. She could smell nothing, but a deep inhalation increased her discomfort.

She threw aside her covers and turned on the light. Dimly discernible in the room was a [illegible] mist. She ran to the window and leaned out. The whole world was enveloped in a heavy blanket of fog. She could see nothing, not even the shadowy ground beneath her window. Outside air gave her no relief. She was seized with another paroxysm of coughing. It passed momentarily. She drew her head into the room and listened. Somewhere else in the house another person was also choking. She ran to the hall door and turned the knob, but it was locked. Then she went to the door that led to her [illegible], where Miss Cornwall was sleeping. She knew that it would be locked, too, but nevertheless she tried the knob with one hand while she knocked loudly with the other.

The door swung open. It was dark in the other room and she could see nothing. For a fraction of a second she hesitated, her mind reeling with a sudden fear of what she would find in that room. Then, instinctively moving, she made a dash for the light switch. It clicked. The dim bulb illuminated the chamber.

No one was in the bed. [illegible] Cornwall had left the room, or had been taken away from it. Melicent had time to appreciate the [illegible] significance of that fact before she was seized by another paroxysm of choking.

Her eyes ran around the room. A nightdress and a nightcap lay over the chair, but there was no sign of Miss Cornwall's clothes. Evidently she had dressed—or had been dressed—before she had been taken away. The heavy river mist poured over the window sill. She was standing with her back to the door that led to the hall, when somebody outside began to shout.

While riding home the other evening my son of 4, looking out of the window at the sky, exclaimed, "Oh, mother, who broke off part of the moon?"

Our 4 year old Sally had taken a dislike to plain milk but would drink it flavored with chocolate. I didn't like to see her refuse plain milk, and one day at lunch I gave her a lecture on milk—how good it is for one, builds one up, makes one fat, etc. She listened to me attentively and after I had finished, asked, "Mumsey, where did you learn all that mother talk?"

Justin, aged 6, thought his first teacher was just as near perfect as any one could be. He surprised us one day by saying: "Mother, you never will know much, will you?"

Mother asked, "Why, son?"

He replied: "Well, you never did have Miss R—— for a teacher and now you're too old to go to school."

I took my little grandson, 3 years old, to Lincoln park. He seemed interested in watching some ducks swimming around in one of the lagoons. I said to him, "Kay, I wonder why the ducks put their heads down under the water the way they do?"

He thought a while, then answered: "I 'spose they want to wash their hair."

When I put my glasses on this morning my 17 month old son, Bobby, poked a chubby finger at my eye and said, "Eye—window!"

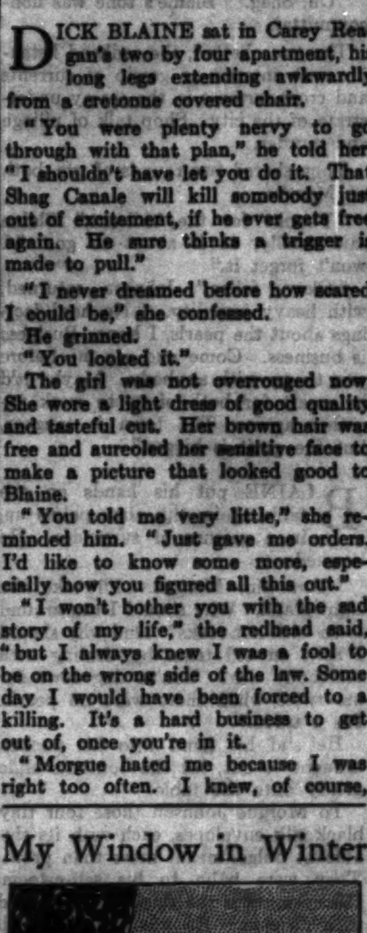
My Window in Winter



By Eleanor Jewett.

When I lift up the window-blind
Whatever do you think I find?
A tapestry of silver white
Jack Frost has woven in the night.

Slim trees and roads and castles tall
Are scrolled in figures large and small—
But once I tasted just a bit,
And my tongue wiped out all of it.

To End a Cough In a Hurry, Mix This at Home

To quickly end stubborn coughs due to colds, it is important to soothe the inflamed membranes, get rid of the germs and also to aid the system inwardly to help throw off the cold.

For these purposes, here is a home-made medicine, far better than anything you could buy at 3 times the cost. From any druggist, get 2½ ounces of Pinex. Pour this into a pint bottle, and add plain granulated sugar syrup or strained honey to fill up the pint. This takes but a moment, saves money, and makes a remedy so effective that you will never do without, once you have used it. Keeps perfectly, and children like it.

This simple remedy does three necessary things. First, it loosens the germ-laden phlegm. Second, it soothes away the inflammation. Third, it is absorbed into the blood, where it acts directly on the bronchial tubes. This explains why it brings such quick relief, even in the obstinate coughs which follow cold epidemics.

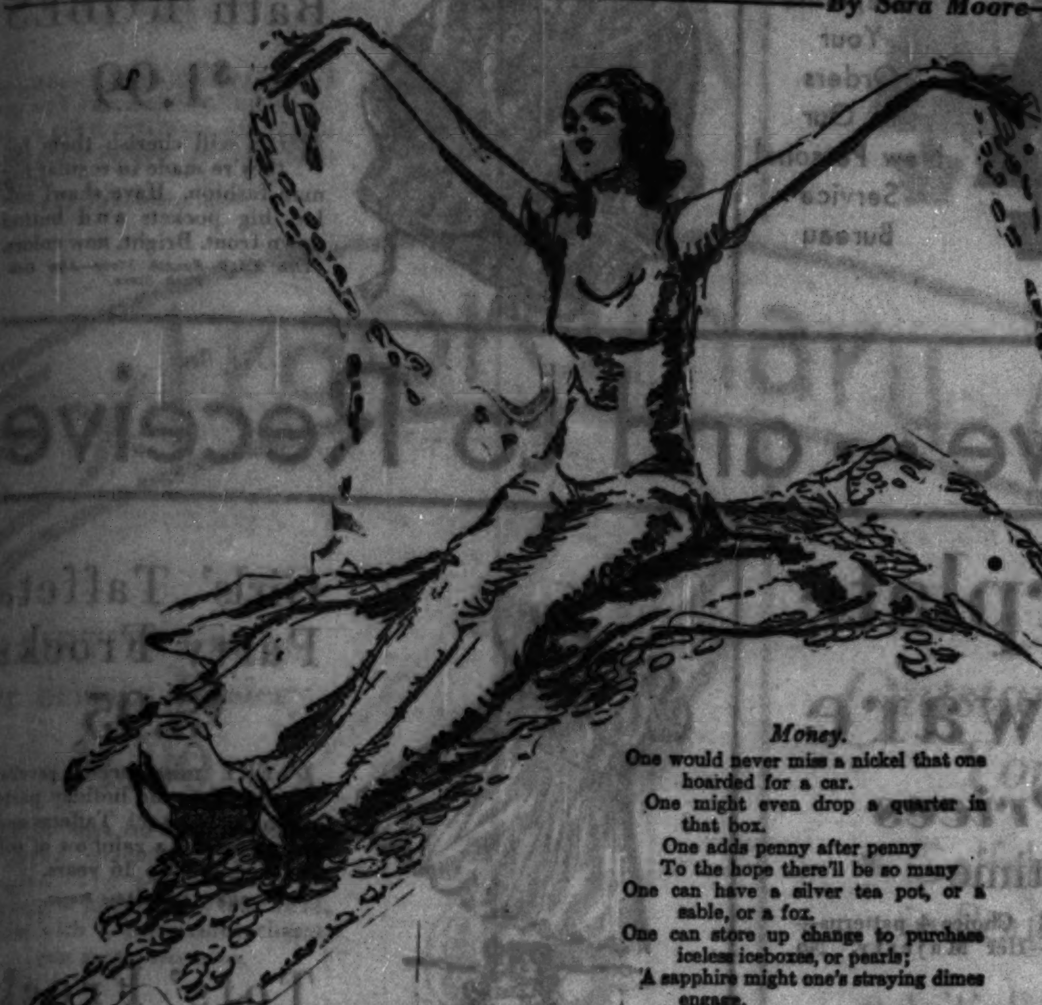
Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway Pine, containing the active agent of creosote, in a refined, palatable form, and known as one of the greatest medicinal agents for severe coughs and bronchial irritations.

Do not accept a substitute for Pinex. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

PINEX for Coughs

Maiden Meditations

—By Sara Moore—



Money.

One would never miss a nickel that one hoarded for a car.
One might even drop a quarter in that box.
One adds penny after penny
To the hope there'll be so many
One can have a silver tea pot, or a sable, or a fox.
One can store up change to purchase
iceless iceboxes, or pearls;
A sapphire might one's straying dimes engage.
But it isn't thrift, it's "pinching"
When one gets no kick in clinching
All the lousy dollars hoarded for the spree they call old age!

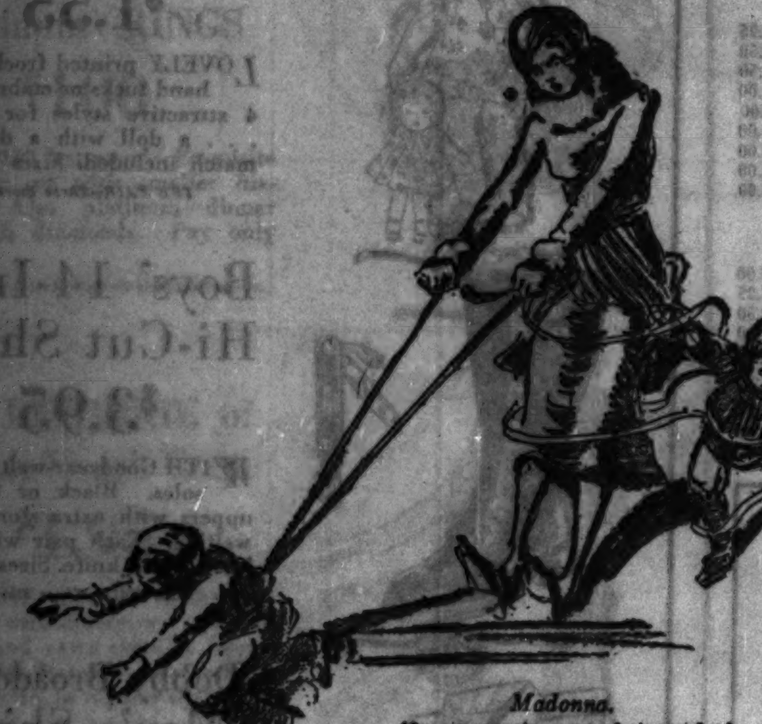
Ideal Wives.

Investigators in New York find several policemen, on ordinary police pay, have been able to raise large families, own their own homes, take trips to Florida, buy de luxe model seven passenger cars—and put money in the bank!

To men this is no proof of graft,
Or venality,
It's merely what one should expect
On any salary.

These New York cops, the lucky stiffs,
Must lead much envied lives,
All married to good managers,
The only perfect wives!



Madonna.

(On comparing a photographer's masterpiece with his living models.)

A portrait in a silver frame
Hangs on an office wall,
Trade's challenge and love's pressing claim . . .
A bit symbolical . . .

A sweet madonna, placid eyed,
A dimpled, angel child . . .
Thank God, the camera has lied;
The truth, t'would drive dad wild.

Planning the Color Scheme

Chalk and Midnight Blue Are Becoming Increasingly Popular as Backgrounds in the Smart Apartment.

WillElla de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problem pertaining to home furnishings. Address your letter to WillElla de Campi, The Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.

By WillElla de Campi.

COLOR scheming is such a fascinating affair. The right combination gives a sense of faultless balance, and the introduction of an unusual note often serves to transform a commonplace room into one of exceptional individuality. Two rooms might be fitted with identical furniture, but with totally different color schemes their similarity could scarcely be noticed. Such is the power of color!

Delightfully color planned is the little morning room illustrated today. Walls and woodwork, including the mantel piece are painted light chalk blue. The floor is covered with black linoleum with a border of leaves painted on in ivory and gold. Directly in front of the fireplace is a small hand tufted rug in ivory and black. Over the mantel hangs a mirror in a black and gold frame. A sofa, placed at right angles to the fireplace, is upholstered in old blue velvet.

Fascinating window draperies are of brilliant coral colored taffeta unlined so that the light coming through them intensifies their gorgeous color. They are finished with blue, yellow and coral ball-tassel edging. Glass curtains hanging straight to the floor are of pale coral organdy. Between two windows is a decorative metal and wire plant stand painted old ivory to contrast pleasingly with the deep green leaves of many plants.

Two armchairs placed near the windows are upholstered in henna colored moiré, while a third chair is done in yellow rep. An old secretary bookcase, painted black with dull gold decorations, occupies an important position. Several small tables and lamps, conveniently placed, complete the furnishings of this delightfully comfortable room.

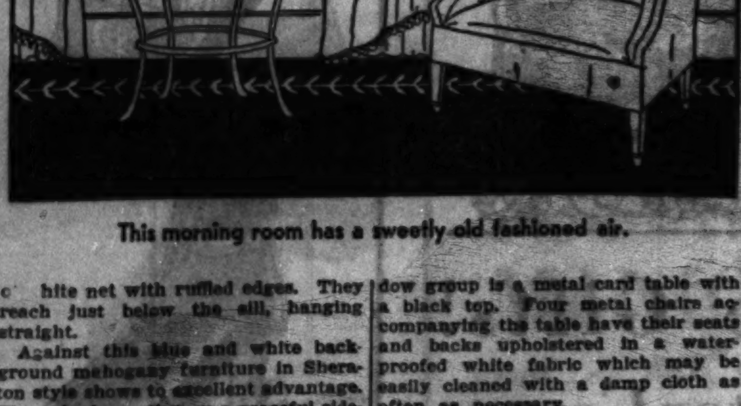
The popularity of blue in decoration is again evidenced by the scheme used in a small dining room. Here the walls are painted deep midnight blue. Woodwork, including doors, casement window frames and chair rail is dead white. Simple window curtains are of white net with ruffled edges. They reach just below the sill, hanging straight.



This morning room has a sweetly old fashioned air.

Against this blue and white background mahogany furniture in Sheraton style shows to excellent advantage. The only decoration on a graceful sideboard is a pair of white glass cornucopias filled with white flowers. A colorful floral painting in a dull gilt frame hangs above the sideboard. This is flanked by a pair of dull gold, two-branch candle sidelights is placed at each side of a distinctive china cabinet in the opposite wall space. White china and sapphire blue glassware are used on the dining table.

Modern in every detail, as well as in its color scheme, is the sun room of a recently completed apartment. The walls are painted olive green, and carpeting which entirely covers the floor is exactly the same shade of green. All woodwork is white. There are white Venetian blinds with olive tapes and cords at the windows. Draperies reaching to the floor, are of basket weave material in Chartreuse green with an olive and rust edging.

Placed against the center of the window group is a metal card table with a black top. Four metal chairs accompanying the table have their seats and backs upholstered in a waterproofed white fabric which may be easily cleaned with a damp cloth as often as necessary.

Olive green rayon moiré upholsters a luxuriously cushioned love seat standing at one side of the room. Low tables holding lamps and decorative small objects are placed at each end of the love seat, and a most interesting modern painting is hung quite low in the space above.

Against the opposite wall is a beautifully proportioned bookcase made of burl walnut. The insides of the open shelves are painted olive green, while some of the sections are fitted with solid wooden doors. Modern pottery, books and plants are advantageously displayed on the open shelves. An armchair drawn out from the corner at one side of the bookcase is upholstered in rust rep. Green, sand and rust plaid covers another deep cushioned armchair. Both chairs are complemented by conveniently placed low tables.

A Friend in Need

Sally Asks You to Do Something to Make the Dreary Life of Invalids a Little More Comfortable.

I want to be the medium through which the friends in need and the friends in deed may be brought together. It may be you have some discarded article which has not outgrown its usefulness that will make some less fortunate one happy and you would gladly give it. Write to me and I shall be happy to be of service to you. Please write on one side of the paper.

When information is wanted by mail a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send article to The Tribune, but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

By Sally Joy Brown.

PERHAPS the greatest of blessings that can be bestowed upon a person is that of good health. Prosperity may be a stranger to you, maybe you don't know where your next meal is coming from. Perhaps it's been a long time since you were able to rub two coins together, but if you are sound of body and mind, then there's hope of a brighter future for you and you needn't be wholly despondent.

There are so many unfortunate men, women, and children who must spend their days within the confines of four walls because they haven't been blessed with good health. If they belong to you, you make every effort to provide them with the comforts that make illness less of a hardship. You see that your particular invalid is supplied with every possible sick room accessory and that he doesn't want for diversion. Radios, phonographs, and interesting reading matter are at his disposal.

But think of the invalid who lacks not only health but also a comfortable amount of this world's goods. I know so many of them—men and women who have written to me in their distress. They are bedridden, cannot earn the wherewithal to buy necessities, and they have no family or friends to turn to in a time of need.

That is why they write to me and that is why I'm telling you about them. It is quite likely that out of the articles you discard from day to day you may be able to supply these needy invalids with the things that will help to make them more comfortable or will help to bring a little happiness into their drab lives. Won't you read these letters and try to fill the request in at least one of them?

"Dear Sally Joy Brown: I am writing in behalf of a woman who used to be a nurse. She is ill now and will not be well for some time. She lives alone, has no family, and her days are lonely. Do you think one of your readers would give her a radio set? It would mean so much to her. J. B."

Surely the radio set is a godsend to the shutin! A lonely, empty life is transformed into a series of interesting days and evenings when one has a radio set. Can't some one supply this most deserving woman with one?

"Sally Joy Brown: I am 50 years old. I have had one leg amputated, and cannot get any work. I could do some home work if I had a typewriter. Will you please ask your readers for one that's no longer wanted? "J. N."

Perhaps this man could be self-supporting if he had a typewriter. The old one you are discarding could be renovated, I am sure, to suit his purpose.

"My dear Miss Brown: You have been so good to me I hate to bother you again. Because of my illness I cannot lie down in bed and must sleep in an easy chair at night. It is quite cold in this weather and I have no bathrobe. If you could get me one, through your column, in size 44, I would be so grateful to you. A. R."

Imagine the discomfort this invalid must endure. Won't you help to make her trouble less difficult to bear by donating a warm bathrobe? If she were not so cold at night she wouldn't mind sleeping in this sitting position.

"Dear Miss Brown: I wonder if you could get a wheel chair for a man I know. He is a cripple, unable to work, and has a wife and child dependent upon him. He cannot buy a chair and would be so grateful to receive one. B. B."

If you are able now to discard the wheel chair which was such a joy during your illness, I am sure you'd like to see some invalid putting it to good use. Here's a deserving applicant for it.

These letters are only a small part of those we have received recently. The others contain requests for almost every sick room or invalid device so if you have one to give let me know what it is and I shall be glad to place it.

Lacks Gowns and Hose.

"I have been laid up with blood poison in my foot and leg for such a long time I have worn out all of my night gowns. My husband has been out of work for over a year so I cannot buy any. I wonder if you could get me some, also a pair or two of light stockings size 9, through your column. I should be so thankful to you. "Mrs. R. H."

This poor invalid's needs are simple but she cannot provide for them. Can you help to make her convalescence a more comfortable one by donating the articles she requests?

Suit Would Help.

"I am an old man, 67 years of age, and have four dependents to support. I hate to ask for charity, but I find it necessary at this time. I work outside selling Christmas cards and, as I am almost in rags, I hate to approach people. Would there be some kind person who would present me with a suit, size 42? E. L."

This man is making every effort to be not only self-supporting but to provide for those dependent upon him. He cannot always get himself the things he needs, and your assistance would help him much. Have you a suit for him?

Desires Suit for Son.

"I am a widow and the mother of two boys, still in school. The elder boy is 15, large for his age, and is badly in need of a suit. Can you get him one through your column, size 38 or 40? I cannot buy it for him as I haven't had any work for so long. "Mrs. L. D."

Here is a family most deserving of your help. If you are planning to discard a suit which might fit the elder boy, I am sure it would solve his mother's problem for the cold weather.

Asks for Wheel Chair.

"A am a cripple and have been unable to walk for two years. We have two children and my husband has been out of work for almost a year. He has just secured a job but the pay is so small we can hardly buy necessities. I need a wheel chair. Do you think one of your readers would have one to give? I would like to have a small size chair but one with large wheels which I could operate myself. "Mrs. J. M."

Mrs. J. M. would feel less incapacitated and a great deal happier if she were the possessor of a wheel chair. Perhaps you have one which you've been able—happily—to discard.

Chance to Help a Student.

"I am studying architectural drawing and am eager to secure some books and other literature on the subject. I cannot buy these and I wonder if a reader of your column would have them to give. "C. R."

If your library contains any literature on the subject this young man is so interested in, perhaps you could help him a bit by donating some of it. You do not know how happy such a gift would make him.

Gifts Are Inexpensive This Year

The Christmas Shopper Will Find Things to Suit Every One's Taste and Purse.

By Helen Bartlett.

WE'VE had a very serious expedition into the shops this last week, looking for new and nobby Christmas gifts for our public. (Did some one giggle?) We picked up a few ideas that might be of interest to you.

In a large department store which obligingly has a special gift bureau for the likes of us we were told that the shopping season is well under way. It appears, the young woman in charge told us, that this will be a Christmas of small gifts, remembrances of medium prices. But these remembrances won't be junky; they'll be little pieces of good taste and appropriateness.

There are large and luscious gifts, too, of course—and these should be better than ever. Certainly with the current slash in prices one can get an amazing amount for one's money.

Good Bargains.

In the group of particularly good bargains we would put the following:

A stunning pair of green leather book ends with gilt trim and a tasteful inset of creamy soapstone. Price, $15.

Some beautiful little traveling clocks in colored leather for $22.50. (Nothing new about the idea, but the sizes and shapes are new—and the price.)

After dinner coffee cups in Wedgwood—green, white, and gold—at $25 a dozen.

French enamel after dinner coffee spoons, in good colors, at $25 a dozen.

A copper (copper is very smart this year, we're told) and pewter drinking set of perfect lines. The oblong tray is $5, the shaker $10, and glasses in two different sizes at $2 each. To accompany this one might also buy the good looking and, incidentally, useful ice bucket priced at $8.

The things listed above don't represent a small outlay of money, according to this season's standards, but they are bargains in your important gifts and we advise you to consider them.

Small Gifts.

The lower priced good things are almost unbelievable—so smart, so individual; and so very much cheaper than they were even a season ago!

Here are just a few:

Trays and trays and trays! Big ones and little ones, giddy ones and impressive affairs. The less pretentious ones are smart and useful and nearly every tray nowadays is liquor resisting. There is a beautiful, long wooden one, on which are pasted old liquor labels priced at $4. A less expensive one ($2.50) is a contract bridge accessory—it tells you how to keep score and bears the signature of four authorities. We also saw a long mirror tray, chromium handled, with cocks painted in it, priced at $15.

A fitting accompaniment to the tray first described is an aluminum shaker, covered with copies of old liquor labels, $8.50.

For a Child.

We saw some adorable prints for a child's room—Little Boy Blue and Mistress Mary, in good colors, priced at $1 a pair. Almost as astounding a bargain as the pairs of flower prints, framed, at the same price.

For the gentleman we recommend the masculine looking chromium backed hair brush with a spring in its short handle. Press a button and a tortoiseshell comb pops out. The brush is a good one; so is the comb. The price is $7.

Also for the gentlemen is a new lighter gadget. We're a little weary of such trick things, but were told there is a constant demand for them. This year's new high in lighter trickiness is claimed by a chromium contraption topped by a pilot wheel—all very nautical looking. It costs $5.

For those "people who have everything" we recommend a beautifully hammered silver candle snuffer—graceful and good to have in the house—for $2.75.

Or, for those same people, the lovely little luxury of finger bowl fish (real Venetian glass ones), priced at $3 a dozen.

For a boy's room we would recommend a table lamp which has an encased globe for a base and a white parchment shade on which is outlined the treasure map of Captain Kid—for the astounding price of $5.

A Glass Orchestra.

An amusing thing for growing youngsters, as well as for grownups, would be a set of the little glass figures, such as the idiotic and altogether delightful Mickey Mouse band, which costs complete $10.

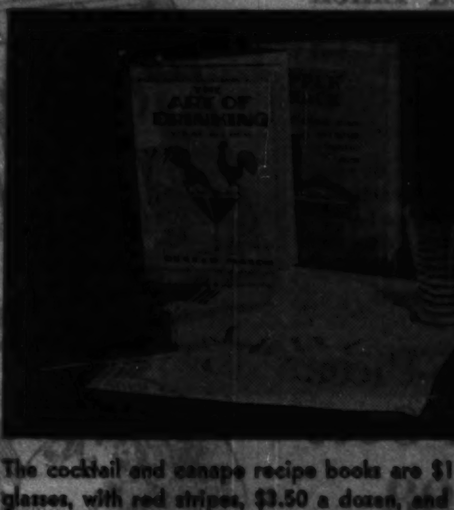
There are some amusing new cocktail napkins on the market—not examples of fine workmanship, but handy and gay things to have. They're oblong in shape and white with colored stripes at each end. In the center of each one is stamped in large letters the name of a cocktail. They're $3 a dozen.

We saw some cunning little clocks, ones that actually work, priced at $2.

To delight the lassies we urge you to look at the new perfume boxes. One set of five tiny bottles, probably a quarter of an ounce each, costs only $8. The fragrances are Lelong's A, B, C, N, and J.

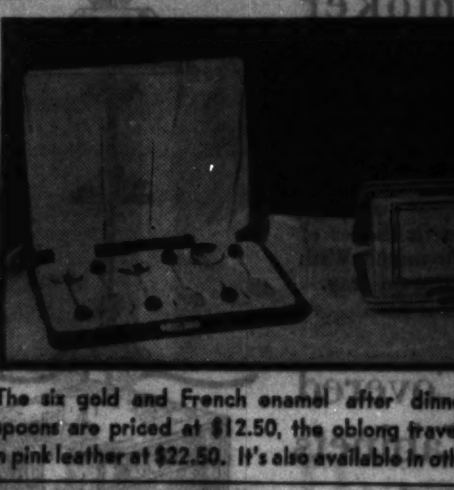
Also to delight them we can recommend the set of two crystal bottles, powder jar, and cigaret case, each initialed, at $10. Or, better still, a glorious set, tall bottles and a squat powder jar, of real Venetian glass, for $15.

A perfect feminine gift—two bottles and a powder jar of exquisite gold flecked Venetian glass, $15 for the set.



The cocktail and canape recipe books are $1 each, the glasses, with red stripes, $3.50 a dozen, and the giddy napkins, each bearing the name of a drink, $3 a dozen.

Two graceful vases from China, in blue or pink, priced at $2 each. One or a pair would make a most acceptable gift for a householder who likes decorative touches.



The six gold and French enamel after dinner coffee spoons are priced at $12.50, the oblong traveling clock in pink leather at $22.50. It's also available in other colors.

Von Hindenburg Appoints Son's Wife as First Lady of Germany

BERLIN.—(AP)—Little did brunette, blue-eyed Baroness Margarete von Mahrenholtz dream when, in 1921, she became the wife of Oscar von Hindenburg that she would four years later be the first lady of the land. Her father-in-law was a famous field marshal, and it is safe to say that nobody then imagined that the second president of the reich would be a retired general and a widower.

When the call to duty came to the venerable Field Marshal von Hindenburg his son was a major at the cavalry school in Hanover.

The father accepted the candidacy for the presidency on condition that his daughter-in-law would, in the event of his election, be willing to exchange her quiet home in Hanover for the German "White House" on Wilhelmstrasse, Berlin.

And so Margarete von Hindenburg, then 27, moved to Berlin with her husband, who became the president's personal adjutant; her two daughters, Gertrud and Helga, then aged three years and one year, respectively, and the field marshal's shepherd dog, Rolf.

Frau von Hindenburg's task is no easy one. At all dinners in the president's palace she, as hostess, sits opposite her father-in-law.

The chancellor or the ranking ambassador offers his arm and leads her to the table. If it is a stag lunch she attends as the only woman in the party. As the guests arrive she stands beside her father-in-law.

Outside the president's palace, however, she merely occupies the rank due to her husband as colonel in the army and as adjutant to the president.

She there ceases to be the first lady of the land. As Chancellor Bruening is a bachelor, Frau Curtius then occupies first rank.

One of the few private parties President von Hindenburg gives during the season is in Margarete von Hindenburg's honor. It is a ball for young folk, friends of the Von Hindenburg children.

At it the venerable octogenarian kisses the hands of his daughter-in-law's friends and bows to them with the grace of a cavalier.

By the end of the social season she is more than ready for rest at the paternal estate near Hanover.

NOVEMBER'S SIX BEST PHOTOPLAYS.

November's gone, so
Hop, hop, hop!
For the time has come
To shop, shop, shop!
(Irrelevant, but true.)

RICH MAN'S FOLLY. | CUBAN LOVE SONG.
ARE THESE OUR CHILDREN. | POSSESSED.
TOUCHDOWN. | THE CHAMP.

Best individual performances in "Honorable Mention" pictures: [illegible] in "[illegible]," Robert Williams in "Platinum Blonde," Lionel Barrymore and Elissa Landi in "The Yellow Ticket," Edna Mae Oliver in "Fanny Foley Herself," Ivan Lebedeff in "The Gay Diplomat," Will Rogers in "Ambassador Bill," Irene Dunne and Pat O'Brien in "Consolation Marriage," Lois Moran and Charles Bickford in "The Men in Her Life."

By Mae Tinee.

GOOD Morning!

Just think—the next time we have our "Six Bests" party, it'll be 1932 . . . I COULD say, "How time does fly!"—but I won't.

We've agreed that there were many good pictures in November. On another page, I see, you'll find printed the lists of those who are to GET SOMETHING THEY DON'T EXPECT. Those whose entries didn't make the goal will have a chance to try, try again next month. Have your December decisions in by Dec. 31, to appear in the Sunday paper of Jan. 3. Those whose lists are printed will get — you know — SOMETHING they DON'T EXPECT.

"RICH MAN'S FOLLY" brought George Bancroft back to the screen in a picture "suggested" by Dickens' story, "Dombey and Son." Thought I: "'Rich Man's Folly' has quality. A fine, thoughtful story faultlessly presented by a splendid cast headed, of course, by Mr. Bancroft, who never did anything better than this characterization . . . a decided departure from any rôle he has played before . . . a sad picture, but a beautiful, suspenseful, compelling one . . . you should like 'Rich Man's Folly' well enough to want to sit through it twice."

"ARE THESE OUR CHILDREN" was considered "the best younger generation jam picture to be produced. . . . The entire cast, composed almost entirely of young folks, is an excellent one, lines are honest and the film is technically splendid. . . . The last reel of the picture springs a genuine surprise in the way of a courtroom scene. . . . Mr. Ruggles [director] sure stepped on the gas when he made this opus. It gets you."

"TOUCHDOWN" was, according to deponent, "the best football picture I have ever seen. . . . Here at last is a movie dealing with a national pastime that is honest, virile, believable. . . . It cracks like a whip from start to finish. . . . A fine, worthwhile story acted and directed in a fashion that will bring you to your feet. Richard Arlen hands you the surprise of your lives. . . . The picture shows several rousing football games. . . . It's long on suspense. . . . The ending is a honey. . . ."

"CUBAN LOVE SONG" proved to be colorful, romantic, adventurous, sparkling with the effervescence of Lupe Velez and mellow with the music and élan of Lawrence Tibbett. . . . "The pull of this picture lies in its charm. A story, lightsome in the main, but with here and there unexpected depths of pathos, unfolds easily, with intriguing flashes of humor . . . technically satisfactory, boasts some artistic photography and has been directed with taste. If you're shopping for good, all around entertainment, I'd suggest a ticket to 'The Cuban Love Song.'"

"POSSESSED" has sure been bringing joy to the hearts of Joan Crawford and Clark Gable admirers. AND Messrs. Balaban and Katz! For, lo, people have been standing in queues a block long awaiting their chance to get inside the theaters featuring the popular pair. This was said in the original review of the movie: "'Possessed' will bring shekels tinkling into the box office—make no mistake about that! . . . Mr. Gable gives a magnetic and understanding portrayal . . . Miss Crawford contributes a warm, workmanlike performance, playing with commendable restraint. Supporting rôles are well handled, direction is bright and the film is smartly accoutered and technically pleasing. . . ."

* *

"THE CHAMP!" All together, now, ISN'T that a picture! This department raved re it as follows: "Unashamed they're weeping over at McVickers! Why? Because little Jackie Cooper is breaking their hearts! Because Wallace Beery—just a big, tough, lovable old kid himself!—is giving a superb characterization that's reducing their sophistication and hard-boiledness to a pulp of pulsating emotion. Because a story, human, honest, deeply moving, is unreeling; a story that had the understanding, sympathetic, forceful and highly intelligent direction of the man who made 'Street Scene'—King Vidor. . . ." And so on. I was crazy about that picture.

Well, there we are, Folks. No more "Six Bests" till next year—think of it!

Bits ABOUT'em.

FREDRIC MARCH'S next picture will probably be "The Shorn Lamb," from the story by William J. Locke. . . . GARY COOPER is in Egypt and plans to go 3,000 miles up the Nile. . . . Says the Motion Picture Herald, "CECIL B. DE MILLE, the impresario who made the bathroom glorious, and for more than a decade an outstanding contributor to the serious attainments of the screen, is likely to do something about Russia next. . . ." Introduce the bathtub, think you? . . . JULIETTE COMPTON goes on record thus: "The theater and the screen have lost their illusion because actors

Portrait of an Actor Named Charles Laughton, Aged 32

By Charles Collins.

A GREAT actor came to town last week and I am ready to do my share in making the welkin ring with his praise. His name is Charles Laughton, and in "Payment Deferred," a grim little melodrama of shabby middle class life in London, he is playing my favorite murderer. This may not sound, on first hearing, like high art of staggering cultural importance, but Mr. Laughton appears to be one actor in a generation, and his arrival is something to celebrate.

He came quietly, with no special flourish of trumpets, bringing a play that the Dramatic league snatched out of the New York catalogue as a last minute entry on its subscription season schedule. Two months ago "Payment Deferred" was launched in New York as a London success, but in the clutter of early October premières it was not recorded as a "smash hit." So Mr. Laughton reached Chicago with no sweeping wave of réclame behind him.

He might be called a new man of the footlights, although the explorers of the drama have been pointing at him, now and then, with exclamations of astonishment. A few months ago the Theater Arts monthly devoted an article to him as a great actor on the rise, and wondered sadly if, on the strength of "Payment Deferred," he would be doomed to a lifetime of grubby, gibbering slayers in melodramas of horror.

Old Thrill Revived.

I am content to let Mr. Laughton's future rest upon the knees of the gods, without worrying over it. His present is sufficient. He puts a new thrill into the adventure of playgoing, or, rather, he renews an old thrill—one that has been obsolete for years. He gives fresh life, with a modern touch, to the old school excitements of the theater. He carries you back to the grand old years before the cinema was invented, when master histrions like Irving and Mansfield stirred audiences to their marrow bones. He rekindles the fire of emotional melodrama, a rich tradition of the British theater.

In "Payment Deferred" Mr. Laughton is a "character actor," as the technical phrase goes, and character acting has come to be regarded, in these soft modern times, as an inferior phase of the art. Use of the term implies that the player is working only on the surface, with grease paint, charcoaled wrinkles, and false hair. Self-actors, personality comedians, and easy, casual charmers are the people that have been getting most of the art-minded praise in this century.

Matched Against Field.

Nevertheless, "character actor" or not, I believe on the evidence of his performance in "Payment Deferred" that this comparatively new Charles Laughton can act the head off any other man on the Anglo-American stage in this year of Our Lord 1931. He has physical disadvantages in competition with the handsome, mirror-up-to-themselves gentlemen, for his figure is on the plump side and his face is that of a beef-eating Johnny Bull. Nevertheless, I am willing to match him against the field, in any play, comedy or tragedy, excluding the poetic.

The greatest acting that the American stage has seen within the last ten years was done by the Russians of the Moscow Art theater on their two tours. As you watch Mr. Laughton's portrayal of the moral and physical disintegration of a pasty faced, pathetic clerk with a murder on his conscience you cannot fail to be reminded of those Russians.

Like the Russians.

Not that he has adopted their manner or method; not that he is alien to the British tradition. But he acts, like them, with intensity of grasp, with bold invention, with an inner glow of imagination and an outward richness of detail. He acts, in a word, completely. It is my guess, from this one performance, that he is a better actor than Moskvin, who was one of the leaders of that Russian troupe. As for Katchaloff, the greatest actor of my playgoing experience—well, comparison is not yet in order. Mr. Laughton is young enough to be able to wait for it.

He is 32 years old and, running somewhat to weight [like Richard Burbage, the first Hamlet], he would do well to employ a trainer. It would be a great pity if Mr. Laughton should arrive at middle age in condition to play nothing but Falstaff and Sir Toby Belch. We already have Sydney Greenstreet, the massive comedian recently seen as the earl in "The Admirable Crichton," as champion of the 250 pound class.

Debut in 1926.

His career began in 1926, after a dramatic school in London had demonstrated the intelligence of its faculty by making him its gold medalist of that year. A glance over his record recalls the Russian drama again, for his earliest plays were out of the Moscow Art repertory—"The Cherry Orchard," "The Three Sisters," and "The Pillars of Society." In this first phase I also find mention of the rôle of Creon in the classic Greek "Medea"—a hint that his range is not limited to the murderers of melodrama.

His first London hit was scored in 1927 in "The Happy Husband," and another in "Mr. Prohack" followed on its heels. He had the title rôle in Hugh Walpole's "A Man with Red Hair," which started him in the life of crime. Then he played Ben Jonson, the Elizabethan poet, in a play by George Moore, called "The Making of an Immortal"; a French detective in "Alibi," and Mr. Pickwick, a character for which he was made by nature. Here you have definite evidence

Here are Lynn Fontanne and Alfred Lunt of stage fame as they appear on the United Artists' theater's screen in their first film venture, "The Guardsman." Purty, what?

Historiette

Ruth Chatterton, born in New York, Dec. 24, 1893, is 5 feet 2½ inches tall, and weighs 110 pounds. She has brown eyes and brown hair. Was educated in a private school. Is the wife of Ralph Forbes. Her hobbies are sports and traveling, and rumor has it that she has written twenty-five songs. She dislikes bright colors and wears white, black and grays almost entirely. Miss Chatterton, at the age of 14, accepted a dare to apply in the chorus of a local play in Washington, where she was spending the holidays. She got the job and has been acting ever since. Her most noted stage rôle was that of Judy in "Daddy Long Legs." Henry Miller was the star. Her first stage starring vehicle was "Come Out of the Kitchen." Her best pictures have been "Madame X" and "Sarah and Son."

Girls! What would you give to be Claudette Colbert, who is Gary Cooper's queen of hearts in "His Woman," which is flickering at the Chicago theater? Anything? Nothing? What's your answer?

"Grand Hotel," after its year's run in New York, will be launched for a run at the Grand Opera house next Tuesday evening. Eugenie Leontovich, who was "discovered" in Chicago three years ago, will play the role of the Russian dancer who has a love affair with a gentleman burglar. The play comes here with its original cast and all its intricate paraphernalia.

Somebody is apparently saying "Kees me pretty pronto!" in this scene from "Lasca of the Rio Grande," which you may see at the Loop-End. Before you—Dorothy Burgess and Leo Carillo.

Lo, look! Sweet Mae Clarke turneth pale! At Boris Karloff's gaze doth quail! The two are seen in "Frankenstein," which at the State-Lake is a-pl'yin'.

What's on a lady's mind when she sports both a wedding ring and a slave bracelet? Ginger Rogers (right), Robert Armstrong, and Eddie Quillan know, and "The Tip Off" for you is at the Palace.

RENEW WAR ON TRI-STATE BLVD. GRADE DIVISION

Property Owners Seek to Halt Project.

Difficulties between Du Page county highway authorities and property owners along the partly completed Tri-State boulevard near Hinsdale flared up anew last week when Louis Marwitz, a property owner, started injunction proceedings to halt the completion of an overhead crossing at Joliet road. This action follows closely in the wake of the threats of court action by property owners on the east side of the boulevard at Ogden avenue as soon as construction of the grade separation at this point is started.

In the former case James C. Baker of Hinsdale, attorney for Mr. Marwitz, points out that the Du Page county highway authorities obtained some 14 acres of right of way without payment on the implied promise that there would be a grade level crossing at the Joliet road and Tri-State boulevard intersection, thereby improving the property.

Charge Structure Cuts Values.

Now highway authorities are erecting an overhead structure at this point, making the area at the intersection useless, Attorney Baker asserted. Frontage formerly valued at $12,000 is now worth less than a third of this amount, Mr. Marwitz contends.

Supt. Gates asserts, however, that every attempt is being made to effect a reasonable settlement with the property owners. At the Ogden avenue intersection the grade separation was decided upon by highway authorities after the land for right of way had been acquired, he explained. In the case of the Joliet road overhead bridge the property owner in question is late in his complaint, Supt. Gates said, since the bridge is nearing completion. Supt. Gates washes his hands of the difficulty at the Roosevelt road crossing, since the county voted not to acquire property within 500 feet of the intersection, leaving it up to the state.

Point Out Similar Situation.

William Kieft, owner of property at the intersection of Roosevelt road and the new Tri-State boulevard, declared that he would start injunction proceedings if the state attempts to put a grade separation in front of his land, his residence, and his business.

This situation is similar to that existing at Ogden avenue and the Tri-State thoroughfare in Hinsdale. Contrary to original plans, Du Page highway officials have already advertised for bids for this elevated bridge and refused to reimburse the owners of property at the southeast corner of Jackson street—the street over which the Tri-State boulevard runs in Hinsdale—and Ogden avenue for damages brought about by the erection of a high embankment, according to the protesting group. This is the only one of the four corners that lies within the Hinsdale limits.

Called "Confiscation."

Samuel S. Knox, one of the owners of property at this point, calls it "confiscation of property." According to law it is impossible for any of the property owners at the Ogden avenue and Roosevelt road intersections to act until construction is started.

Du Page county authorities headed by County Superintendent E. L. Gates are simply marking time, according to the protesting property owners, hoping the situation will blow over, and the state highway department is waiting for the clearing up of the right of way matter so that contracts may be awarded. This means that $500,000 worth of construction work is being delayed, the property owners further explain.

The Tri-State boulevard, or route 54, which is to run eventually from Milwaukee to Michigan City, is laid out with a 200 foot right of way.

CHURCH PUTS UP 3,000 CANS OF FOOD FOR NEEDY

A novel scheme for emergency relief work has been devised by the Rev. James G. Jones, young pastor of the Church of the Epiphany, Lombard. It resulted from the fact that the Rev. Mr. Jones is a graduate of Oregon State Agricultural college, where he majored in canning.

The Rev. Mr. Jones, desiring that his church should do its part in the relief program, drew upon his training in college to provide the means. He obtained gifts of a steam cooker and a can sealer from a commercial firm. Then he asked his parishoners to bring vegetables to the church. These vegetables are cooked and canned in the parish hall and in turn distributed to the needy.

Already more than 3,000 cans of vegetables have been provided for unfortunate families in the Lombard community through the efforts of this church.

HOUSE HALF SOLD FOR AUSTIN SHOW TO FEED HUNGRY

Women's Clubs Aid Men Selling Tickets.

Austin is all set for its nine act charity show to be presented Friday evening in Rockwood hall at Austin High school, 231 Pine avenue. Reports yesterday indicated that well over half of the 2,500 seats have already been sold by the service organizations working to make this the biggest event of its kind ever held in the community.

Members of the junior auxiliaries of the Austin North End Woman's club and the Austin Woman's club volunteerod their services last week in ticket selling. The auxiliaries of the Optimist and Kiwanis clubs have taken charge of sales booths at the Austin State bank and the Meier company, 5704 West Chicago avenue, and the Lions club auxiliary is doing general selling.

Legion Post Asks More Tickets.

The members of each of the three men's organizations sponsoring the show, the Austin Kiwanis club, the Austin Lions club, and the Austin Optimist club, have agreed to sell at least 25 tickets apiece. Columbus Park post of the American Legion has already disposed of more than its quota of tickets and is asking for more. More than 100 other community organizations and ministers of Austin have broadcast the news of the charity show, the proceeds from which will help needy people in Austin.

"The commitee in charge of the show wants to emphasize again that all of the proceeds will be used to relieve distress among Austin's own this winter," said P. L. Verschuur, general chairman, yesterday. "After Friday evening a committee representing Austin service clubs will investigate cases reported to it and assist wherever the need is the greatest. The committee will not interfere with established agencies, but will attempt to alleviate suffering that may not have been called to their attention. It will work more as an emergency agency on acute cases where a family is threatened with starvation."

Students to Share in Fund.

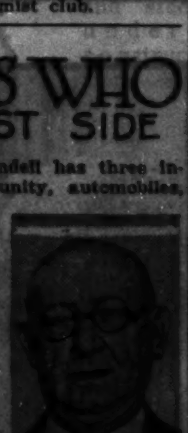
It is likely, committee members pointed out, that some of the money will go into the student aid funds of the Austin elementary and high schools.

As for the show itself, Mr. Verschuur promises that it will appeal to every one from 8 to 80. It is to be an all professional performance with nine varied acts. There will be a piano monologist, tricksters, harmony girls of radio fame, a marionette show, acrobats, a comic cartoonist, and comedians. To carry out the all charity purpose of the show each one of the performers will pay for his own ticket.

Members of the general committee assisting Mr. Verschuur are J. Ernest Shelby, local publisher; Herman Ockenga and William Gawne of the Kiwanis club, George F. Schmidt and Glenn H. Tyrrell of the Lions club, Walter A. Carlson and James A. Tench of the Optimist club.

WHO'S WHO ON WEST SIDE

Matthew F. Blondell has three interests—his community, automobiles, and his eight children and 14 grandchildren. Austin is his home neighborhood and there is little in the way of civic affairs that escapes his attention.



MATTHEW F. BLONDELL. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Mr. Blondell is first vice president of the Central Austin club, director of the Austin Federation of Clubs, director of the Austin District Property Owners' association, a member of the Austin Roque club, and of committee 44 of the West Town Property Owners' Alliance, and dean of insurance adjusters of Chicago. He is also a Mason.

Mr. Blondell was born in Kilrush, Ireland, in 1872 and in 1888 emigrated to America and the west side of Chicago, where he has since made his home. Race horses, he avers, share honors with automobiles as favorite hobbies. Among the west side improvements Mr. Blondell is promoting is the superhighway. He resides at 544 North Long avenue.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, Dec. 7.

Be sure to examine the bulbs that were placed in storage in early autumn for frequently some of them show rot soon. Examine also the potted plants to see that they are keeping in good condition. Vegetable roots such as beets and carrots keep better and over a longer period, if they are completely covered with soil, dry sand, or other litter. Bring hyacinths to the light as soon as they are thoroughly rooted, which may be ascertained by the roots appearing through the bottom of the pots. Lack of thorough rooting is what prevents many bulbous plants from flowering in the house.

Tuesday, Dec. 8.

Cover cold frames at night with boards, mats, or any material. Change the position of house plants toward the light. Keep the leaves clear by syringing or washing. Avoid drafts. If branches grow long and spindly cut them back and try to provide more light to encourage a dwarf or compact growth. Palms, aspidistra, sansevieria, phyllocactus and pandanus will stand considerable shade, but all plants do best when given plenty of light. Watch the terrarium to prevent the moisture from collecting in it over too long a period. Give a rift of air. Many unusual plants are excellent for these interesting containers, the forerunner of which was the Wardian Case. Collect, cut, and bury cuttings of many shrubs to increase the supply. Highbush, honeysuckle, many spirea, mockorange, ninebark, and others may be readily increased by this method.

Wednesday, Dec. 9.

Start more bulbs for indoor use, if they can still be procured from the seedsman. There is nothing quite so satisfactory for indoor ease of growing. Still time to plant hardy lilies, such as Regal's lily, and it is one of the best introduced. In the small greenhouse make successive sowings of beans, spinach, cauliflower, radishes, and parsley. A pot or two of parsley placed in the light of the basement window will give sprigs of fine garnishing material.

Thursday, Dec. 10.

On bright days, pruning may be undertaken. Shrubs, especially, are much benefitted by judicious thinning. The usual method is to keep the center of the plant open for the free circulation of light and air. Old, neglected shrubs should be severely pruned by removing the old, gnarled stems at their base and shaping up the growths that remain. This may be done at any time while the plants are dormant, although the rule is to prune shrubs after flowering to prevent the removal of flower buds which form on wood made during the previous year. The experienced gardener prunes at any time. Dead wood may be removed at any time. Do not overwater cacti from now on; these plants are practically dormant during the winter and little water is required.

Friday, Dec. 11.

Now is a fine time to select and prepare large trees for winter transplanting. These should be moved with a ball of earth to insure success. Dig a trench out from the trunk before severe weather and permit the ball to freeze. This trench may be dug deeper, and under the tree as the weather advances until it is entirely free and frozen. The hole for its reception should be prepared in advance by digging and filling it with manure, which is removed when ready to move the tree.

Saturday, Dec. 12.

Examine trees for cocoons of insects, which should be at once removed. Most plants "winter kill" from the effects of alternate freezing and thawing. It is a good plan to give some protection to prevent such a condition by mulching or by hilling up the plants with snow. If aphids are noticed on the house plants spray them with Black Leaf 40 about once every ten days. The fight against insects must be continuous if the plants are to be kept clean and in good growing condition. Meal bugs are among the common insect enemies. Pick them out of the axiles of the leaves with a toothpick or spray them. Scale insects on palms likewise may be kept in check. Lemon oil is excellent on ferns. White fly is difficult to eradicate but continuous spraying with Black Leaf 40 will keep them down.

Catlin, president of the Illinois Synod of the United Lutheran church. The Rev. Mr. Catlin will be assisted by the Rev. Dr. John M. Bremkamp.

M. J. SIEBRANDT HEADS CRAWFORD BUSINESS LEAGUE

Track Elevation Over 26th Street Sought.

Martin J. Siebrandt, vice president of the Crawford Business Men's league, was elevated to the presidency of the west side civic organization when the annual elections were held last week. Mr. Siebrandt succeeds William H. Lusthoff named head of the group last fall.

In accepting the presidency of the Crawford league Mr. Siebrandt promised to carry forward the program indorsed by the organization in 1931, looking particularly to the elevation of the Chicago and Western Indiana railroad tracks over 26th street at Kenton avenue and the elevation of the Illinois Central tracks over Crawford avenue at 33d street.

Each of the other newly elected officers pledged his support to Mr. Siebrandt in working for these Crawford and Lawndale improvements. John G. Zelesny, president of the league in 1930, will serve this year as vice president. Albert Grubbs is the new treasurer and Edward F. Toepper will continue as secretary. The executive committee, composed of Mr. Lusthoff, Mr. Zelesny, Charles Vetter, and William G. Shane will name the civics, ways and means, membership, and entertainment committees some time prior to the installation of the new officers in January.

Work on Track Elevation.

Elevation of the Chicago and Western Indiana railroad tracks is needed, Mr. Siebrandt pointed out, to permit the extension of the 26th street car line and to relieve present traffic congestion. The league is working with the city council committee on track elevations which is negotiating with the railroad for early completion of the project.

"Business men along 26th street would benefit by the extension of the street car line west from Kenton to Cicero avenue," Mr. Siebrandt said. "At present there is no way to get to Cicero by street car in that district, and thousands of residents of the 26th street and Crawford areas must go to work by a roundabout route."

Inconvenience and delays of from 4 to 45 minutes to motorists and pedestrians are pointed to as further reason for elevation of the tracks. League members explain that there is much switching on the spur tracks of the Western Indiana railroad and the Chicago, Burlington, and Quincy tracks.

Relief Work Emphasized.

Relief work this winter in the Crawford community and construction of recreation parks for children are other projects that hold an important place on the 1931-'32 program of the Crawford Business Men's league. The organization will push a plan for building a playground at the Whitney school, 2815 South Komensky avenue, and installing a new fire apparatus in the school.

The league has also addressed a request to the west park board for the establishment of a public park and playground, to be included in the west park system, on vacant property bounded by 31st and 33d streets and Keeler and Kenton avenues. The nearest public center now serving this neighborhood is Franklin park at 14th street and Kildare avenue.

JOHN HIPWELL, proprietor of a miniature golf course in Maywood, has been notified by Postmaster Henry Oakland that he will have to vacate his location at 5th avenue and Pine street to make way for Maywood's new postoffice, the bids for which will be opened in Washington Friday. Mr. Hipwell has been given 30 days in which to remove his bukers and sand traps, but considering the suddenness with which miniature golf courses have been known to spring up, we expect that he will be firmly established at a new location by the expiration of that period.

Through the coöperation of the Dominican sisters, services will continue to be held at Trinity High school, Lathrop avenue and Division street, until a temporary building is erected in the spring on a site purchased by the Dominican fathers for the parish. This site, located at Lathrop and North avenues, embraces a square block. Mass will be celebrated each Sunday at 8 and again at 10:30 o'clock.

Hope to Build in Two Years.

Units of a complete and modern church plant are to be erected as rapidly as the growth of the church warrants, said the Rev. Father McIntyre. It is expected that within two years a building in harmony with the other buildings of the Dominican fathers in River Forest will be erected.

Members of the new St. Vincent Ferrer's parish will be offered educational opportunities through Rosary college, the Dominican House of Studies, Trinity High school, and Fenwick High school, all schools directed by this Catholic order. Fenwick High school, located in Oak Park, has a faculty of 21 Dominican priests.

Pastor on Rosary Faculty.

The Rev. Father McIntyre is well known in the western suburbs as chaplain of Rosary college and teacher of religion, sacred scripture, and apologetics in this college. He also holds the position of subprior of the Dominican House of Studies. He was educated at University of Illinois, Northwestern university law school, and Kent college of law.

Prior to 1914 the Rev. Father McIntyre edited and published the Rosary magazine, founded the Holy Name Journal, the national organ of the Holy Name society, and held pastorates in Ohio and Tennessee.

WIDOWS CARRY ON AS DEATH THINS RANKS OF G. A. R.

Gen. Willich Woman's Relief corps, No. 124, of Des Plaines, observed guest day at its last meeting, among the visitors being Past Department President Mrs. Della Colman of Chicago, and Department Treasurer Mrs. Eleanora Arps Foster of Palatine, who paid tribute to the Des Plaines corps for its patriotic and welfare activities and for its showing made in the number of memberships. For the last two years the corps has succeeded in its program of adding a member each month.

Gen. Willich G. A. R. post, organized 53 years ago, surrendered its charter five years ago. The ranks had thinned, the meetings in the old town hall could no longer be attended due to the infirmaties of the few remaining civil war veterans. Robert Reed, 92, of Arlington Heights, today remains the only surviving charter member of a once active organization. But the relief corps, given quarters in the American Legion home, carries on the traditions.

Three Civil War Widows.

Aside from the three widows of civil war veterans—Mrs. Sarah Ells, Mrs. Grace Lawrence, and Mrs. Ella E. Obert—the membership of the corps is made up of loyal women, many of them daughters and granddaughters of men who answered Lincoln's call.

The silken flag, cherished by the post and carried in many a Memorial day procession, has found a place in the home of Mrs. Lennie Wolters, daughter of Peter Reiter, who bore the nation's colors in some of the battles that were fought to preserve the Union. The last military funeral attended by the corps was that of G. H. Obert, G. A. R. veteran, who died three months ago.

Mrs. Ella M. Kaufman is now serving the second year of her present term as president of the relief corps, and office which she also held 25 years ago. Mrs. Kaufman's father, long active in the post, died in 1915. Her mother, a corps worker, died in 1912.

Recalls Early Days.

Born in Park Ridge and later moving to Des Plaines, Mrs. Kaufman's earliest memories are linked with the activities of both post and corps. She recalls many of the joint meetings of the two organizations when their members were in their prime, and the old town hall was the scene of "camp fires" where war songs were sung and war stories told.

An unforgettable song of that glamorous period, according to Mrs. Kaufman, was the "Sauerkraut" number given each year by Comrade Thurbush.

Among the recent activities of the corps has been the supplying of large flags for each room of the new junior high school in Des Plaines. These flags are to be presented by Mrs. Alma Hoff, patriotic instructor. The corps has also been engaged in making robes for veterans at the various hospitals.

Other Officers of Corps.

Mrs. Myrabelle Harmon is senior vice president of the corps; Mrs. Margaret Minnich, junior vice president; Mrs. Mary Zaleski, secretary; Mrs. Anna Mueller, treasurer; Mrs. Lillian Haas, conductor; Mrs. Mary Bosworth, guard; Mrs. Hazel Haedicke, assistant conductor; Mrs. Carolyn Jarchow, assistant guard; Mrs. Clara Gale, chaplain; Mrs. Sophia Hildebrandt, Mrs. Mary Coates, Mrs. Minnie Minnich and Mrs. Rose Rosedale, color bearers; Mrs. Ella Obert, press correspondent; Mrs. Alma Hoff, patriotic instructor, and Mrs. Gustine Stellman, musician.

Neighborhood Theaters

If you visit the Paradise theater this week you'll recognize O. Henry's "Old Arizona" carried on into a sequel called "The Cisco Kid." The picture will delight you with its fine scenery and photography and some leading players that were in "In Old Arizona." Though not having the same story possibilities, the sequel goes over with Warner Baxter as the Mexican Romeo. Edmund Lowe plays the tough and chasing Sergt. Mickey Dunn while the girl in the case is Conchita Montenegro.

Marbro Offers Ann Harding.

"Devotion" and "Flying High" are the double bill this week at the Marbro theater. Ann Harding makes the first film a charming picture. Leslie Howard, O. P. Heggie, Allison Skipworth and others contribute their bit to the film's success with their excellent character delineation. The locale of the show is London.

The musical comedy "Flying High" is distinguished by its beauteous ensembles. It's adapted to the screen with Bert Lahr still its leading character. Charlotte Greenwood, Kathryn Crawford, and Charles Winniger do fine work with Lahr.

"Love and War"; "Penrod and Sam."

Charles Farrell, Madge Evans, and Hardie Albright do effective work in "Heartbreak," playing the first three days of this week at the Senate theater. It is a war story, and it places, with its principles on opposite sides in wars, yet sweethearts.

With this picture you'll see the lovable "Penrod and Sam." It's Booth Tarkington's story and the big and little members of the family can see it and enjoy it. Leon Janney whom you may remember from "Father's Son" has one of the leads.

Double Bill at Crawford.

"East of Borneo" has "Skyline" as its running mate this week at the Crawford theater. The first film is concerned with love in the tropics and has Rose Hobart as the wife who travels east of Borneo in search of her errant husband only to attract the attention of a local potentate. Charles Bickford is the husband and Georges Renavent, a slimy oriental villain. "Skyline" tells of skyscrapers and the men who build them. In the cast are Thomas Meighan, Myrna Loy, Hardie Albright, and Maureen Gallagher.

Laurel and Hardy at [illegible].

Another story of love in the tropics is "Road to Singapore" playing today, tomorrow, and Tuesday at the [illegible] movie house with "Pardon Us." William Powell has the part of the rescuer in the first picture with Doris Kenyon the lady in distress. "Pardon Us" is a comedy dealing with the adventures of the team of Laurel and Hardy in prison.

Banks refuse to purchase more warrants, he explained, so that salaries will have to be met by tax money coming in or by the sale of warrants to individuals.

NOISE PROGRAM IS PROPOSED TO LULL INSOMNIACS

Sheep Counting Waits on Television.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Next—the nightly insomnia broadcast! The idea comes from station YMCA, which must have something to do with the Y. M. C. A. Here's the scheme: After the night clubs have gone to bed YMCA will toss out a program designed to help those folks who are still tossing helplessly about to sleep. YMCA is investigating the theory that insomniacs are that way because they miss the noises of daytime. Hence a cacophony of typewriter clicking, elevated thunder, and fire sirens may be put on the air to induce slumber, if this theory can be proved.

If the theory collapses YMCA may have to resort to such tunes as "Baa, Baa, Black Sheep," and "Mary Had a Little Lamb" until television becomes a full fledged reality. Then a constant procession of sheep ought to make the perfect program for insomniacs.

Paderewski, perhaps the greatest of all box office attractions, still refuses all offers to go before the microphone. And that despite the fact that he is under contract with the N. B. C. Artists' service. In England he has just turned down the British Broadcasting company. Paderewski did make a microphone appearance once in England five years ago. He didn't like the experience and has been chary of the ether ever since. The outstanding artist who has never been heard on the radio either in this country or abroad is Fritz Kreisler, the violinist. Rachmaninoff and Heifetz are included in that small coterie of artists still microphone shy.

War as it is at the front may soon be brought to millions of firesides. That wars of the future will be covered by radio reporters has long been predicted. Now Floyd Gibbons has gone to Manchuria to cover the movements there for a press association and it is reported that he will take a microphone with him to the front to describe actual fighting [if any] for American listeners.

The Nizam of Hyderabad, reputed to be the world's richest man, is becoming radio conscious. The Nizam has given his sanction for installing a station at Char Minar mosque from which prayers and sermons are to be broadcast. It is his desire that prominent mosques in every district of his dominions have loud speakers installed so that the prayers will be everywhere heard. The Nizam's government levies a duty of 15 per cent on all radio equipment imported so that the government will soon recoup all the money spent in broadcasting arrangements.

Mildred Bailey, the blues singer, is off two pounds, bringing her to 189, according to a bulletin from the Edgewater district. Mildred is now 12 pounds less than Whiteman, the king. . . . Al Zugsmith, the King's jokesmith, calls Jack Fulton Jr. the Croon Prince. . . . Vincent Lopez was once a stenographer for the president of a milk company at $8 a week. . . Carmen Lombardo held that clarinet note in "St. Louis Blues" 48 seconds recently. . . . If you don't think that's a long time try it. . . . Eddie Thorgersen, the violent announcer, whose name is invariably associated with that certain cigaret, is less violent on his other broadcasts.

Ben Bernie, who holds down the chair of pattering on W-G-N and CBS Tuesday evenings, has acquired a musical rarity in a genuine Savart violin. . . . What's more he didn't find it in an attic. . . . Members of his orchestra discovered it and presented it to him. . . . Seth Parker and his Jonesport neighbors are here for a personal appearance today. . . . Russ Columbo starts playing a violin on his broadcasts tomorrow. . . . Howard Lanin's new number, "Mahatma Gandhi," sounded a little thin.

Was it Sitting Bull or Setting Bull? Juvenile followers of the Lone Wolf Tribe on CBS are making much argument over the name of the Custer massacre leader. A mixed commission of historians and grammarians is sought to settle the question.

Young John Hicks, 9 years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hicks, 7555 South Shore drive, made a big time radio debut last Sunday as the child in the Christmas seal broadcast which featured Rudy Vallee, Jessica Dragonette and other entertainment aces. John was disappointed because Eddie Cantor, though scheduled, failed to show.

DRAMA'S ROLE IN RADIO VISIONED BY RAWLINSON

W-G-N Mystery Star Gives Reaction.

"As an actor of the legitimate stage, the one big thing I miss in radio work is the absence of a theater audience."

That is Herbert Rawlinson's reaction to the presentations of the radio studio.

Mr. Rawlinson is the star and director of the radio production of "Five Fatal Words," THE TRIBUNE'S new mystery story which is being presented twice each week over W-G-N, THE TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel, and once a week in printed form in THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE. Five thousand dollars in cash awards are to be made by THE TRIBUNE for the best solution of the mystery case. Mr. Rawlinson was selected from a long list of stars of the stage and screen to present the dramatization of the murder mystery story written specially for THE TRIBUNE by Edwin Balmer and Philip Wylie, and already this actor has brought his experience of years of association with the stage and screen into the foreground in the radio presentations of the tale of the Cornwall millions.

Contrasts Mike, Theater Audience.

"It's hard to look on that blasted metallic little box and even begin to compare it with a packed house of a theater," Mr. Rawlinson said, surveying the microphone. "We must not forget that the theater is 'a land of make believe.' It is the combination of scenery, lights, costumes and makeup, and the combined ability of the actors in the portrayal of their rôles that go toward the ultimate success of a play. And the audience reaction is a most important factor.

"In the radio studio you apparently are acting to a microphone, a cold, hard, unresponsive metallic object and in consequence the illusion is not there."

Mr. Rawlinson visions a big radio rôle for the drama but he also thinks that what he is pleased to call the "legitimate stage production"—that is the theater with all of its scenery and props never will lose its place as a part of the public's entertainment program.

Another First Night.

"When I made my first appearance over W-G-N in 'Five Fatal Words,' it was another opening night for me," the director said. "But I couldn't help but feel that something characteristic of other opening nights was missing. There wasn't the expectancy of the opening night in the theater. I missed the assistant stage manager calling 'half-hour'; the smell of the grease paint; of dressing the character and then the call—'Overture—First act.' Then that moment of dreadful silence following the final chords of the overture just before the curtain goes up and finally your entrance on the stage. Boy, that's theater.

"But at the radio opening it's different. There's the music all right but that's all. A little red light goes on and you start talking to a 'mike.'

"I can see, however, the tremendous possibilities in producing plays over the air. The field is unlimited. I feel that W-G-N has taken a great stride forward in the presentation of this mystery play. It is a great pleasure for me to work with W-G-N. Miss Jean Conover has done spendid work in writing the radio adaption of the story.

Continues for Six Weeks.

"It is very gratifying to me to observe the results of a broadcast of this nature—a mystery story which everyone enjoys. The mail is pouring in from all sections of the country. To know that our W-G-N presentation of 'Five Fatal Words' is reaching into homes whose people are unable to attend the theaters for entertainment but rely on their radios for amusement is a great source of satisfaction to me."

The radio presentations of "Five Fatal Words" will continue for six weeks more.

QUEEN OF THE AIR

RUTH WENTER.

Miss Ruth Wenter, sophomore at Northwestern university, is radio queen of Chicagoland. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Wenter Jr., 1204 Ashland avenue, Wilmette, and is 20 years old. Miss Wenter is a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority.

Although a member of the university A Cappella chorus, she has had no radio experience and was selected from a group of 51 finalists Friday evening in a four hour audition at the Trianon ballroom. It was held under the auspices of the Radio Wholesalers' association, affiliated with National Federation of Radio associations, and was judged by a group of Chicago radio editors, artists, and talent seekers. Miss Wenter sang "Two Loves." She has a fluent, pleasing voice and undeniable charm and grace. Her beauty is distinctly brunette.

Selected as maids of honor were Miss Virginia Clark, 5434 Kenmore avenue, "personality girl" on WJJD, and Miss Selma Shapiro, 4855 North Bernard avenue, a non-professional. Both have light brown hair and eyes.

Quin Ryan, manager of W-G-N, was master of ceremonies and the three winners went before the W-G-N microphone immediately after their selection.

RITCHIE ADDRESS TO BE HEARD ON W-G-N TUESDAY

Gov. Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland will speak over W-G-N from 10 to 10:30 p. m., Tuesday evening. Gov. Ritchie will be the principal speaker at the thirty-fourth annual dinner of the Illinois Manufacturers' association at the Stevens hotel and W-G-N will carry an exclusive broadcast of his talk. His subject will be "Public Business: Private Business."

HELEN MORGAN WILL SING OVER W-G-N TUESDAY

Helen Morgan, one of Broadway's brightest stars, will sing several of the songs she has popularized in musical comedy when she appears as the guest star on the broadcast from 7:45 p. m. to 8 p. m. Tuesday, over W-G-N and CBS.

Edison Music on W-G-N

Highlights in the life of Thomas A. Edison will be recalled in the musical memories program over W-G-N at 5:30 today.

W-G-N TO START INTERNATIONAL SERIES TODAY

Viscountess Rhondda on CBS Broadcast.

Viscountess Rhondda, one of the few of the British women who are peeresses in their own right, will speak on "The Feminist Movement" from London in the international broadcast scheduled for 11:30 a. m. today through the Columbia network, including W-G-N. THE TRIBUNE station will broadcast the international programs regularly on Sunday mornings henceforth.

Daughter of a South Wales coal and iron master, who achieved international distinction during the great war as food controller in the Lloyd George administration, Lady Rhondda inherited the title by a special provision of the letters patent creating it. In the ordinary way, a viscountess is not inheritable in the female line.

Barred by Lords.

In spite of the fact that she is in this unusual position, however, she is not able to take her seat in the house of lords, since that ultra-conservative body voted only last year against the proposal to admit women who are peeresses in their own right.

Viscountess Rhondda has assumed most of the business responsibilities of her father and is regarded as one of the most able women in England. Her part in the feminist movement has been noteworthy, and she is now actively engaged in the last phase of the struggle, which seeks to break down the barriers against her sex in the last exclusive stronghold of the male sex in Britain.

International broadcasts at this time on Sundays were inaugurated by CBS at the time of the London naval conference in January, 1930, when members of the American delegation and heads of the foreign delegations broadcast first hand impressions of the conference's progress.

Many Notables Heard.

In the two years that have elapsed since then, the scope of these features has been greatly extended, and not only have leaders in British statesmanship, music, art, letters, science, and religion been presented, but the heads of several European states have broadcast from their capitals.

Speakers this year have included Pope Pius XI., heard both when the Vatican radio station was opened and when he outlined his encyclical on labor; the presidents of Austria and the Irish Free State; the prince of Wales; Premier MacDonald of England; the German chancellor; the foreign minister of Poland; Mahatma Gandhi; the Aga Khan; and George Bernard Shaw, whose refusal to visit America becomes meaningless in view of his three broadcasts through CBS.

Opera Is Broadcast.

Both houses of British parliament have been well represented in the list of speakers, including many women members of the commons, and several members of former British cabinets have been heard.

Opera has been broadcast from Covent Garden, London, and from Salzburg, where Mozart was born; scenes from German talkies, with Emil Jannings, Conrad Veidt, and Lillian Harvey were enacted in UFA studios before the microphone connected to the trans-Atlantic circuit.

COMMITTEE FOR BENEFIT RADIO REVUE CHOSEN

Frank Schreiber of W-G-N, Don Bernard of NBC, Walter Preston of CBS, Freeman Gosden, Charles Correll and Ben Bernie have been named as the production committee to arrange the program for the radio revue to be given at the Chicago Stadium, Jan. 8 for the benefit of the Joint Emergency Relief fund of Cook county. Tickets for the revue, at which leading stars of Chicago radio stations and networks will appear in person, are now on sale at the Chicago Stadium, 1800 West Madison street, and at the loop office of the Stadium, 65 West Madison street. Reservations may be made by calling Seeley 5300.

FRIML MEDLEY TO BE HEARD AT 9:15 WEDNESDAY

A medley of the most popular compositions of Rudolph Friml will be sung by a mixed quartet composed of Adele Vasa, soprano; Barbara Maurel, contralto; Bradford Reynolds, tenor, and Lon McAdams, bass, as one of the features of the program to be presented from 9:15 to 9:30 p. m. Wednesday over W-G-N and CBS. The program will open with two numbers by the quartet, "Medley of Stephen Foster Airs" and "In the Gloaming." The presentation will conclude with the medley of Friml hits, which will include "I Want Sympathy," "Only a Rose," "Rose Marie," and "Something Is Tingle-ingle-ing."

REV. E. V. HOOVER WILL SPEAK ON MIDDAY SERVICE

The Rev. Edwin V. Hoover of Holy Name cathedral will be the principal speaker on the midday service program over W-G-N at noon tomorrow. In anticipation of Christmas, he will discuss "The Spirit of the Advent."

Other speakers for the week will be A. B. T. Moore, international secretary of the Gideons, on Tuesday; Dean A. J. Brumbaugh, dean of students in the college division of the University of Chicago, on Wednesday; Dr. Ross C. Gibson, minister of the Woodlawn United Presbyterian church, on Thursday; and Dr. Russell Boynton, pastor of the Bryn Mawr Community church, on Friday.

Dr. John L. Dickson, director of the W-G-N Midday Services, will speak on Saturday.

DOWNEY IS BACK FROM VACATION; TO SING "HOME"

Morton Downey, who has just returned from a two weeks vacation in California, will sing, appropriately enough, the song "Home," as a feature of his broadcast from 6:45 to 7 p. m., over W-G-N and CBS tomorrow. Downey's two other numbers on his first program will be "Kathleen Mavourneen" and "My Song," the latter from the current "George White Scandals." Jacques Renard's orchestra and Tony Wons will also contribute to the presentation.

TED WEEMS TO MAKE BOW WITH SINGING SEXTET

Ensemble on W-G-N Five Nights a Week.

TED WEEMS.

Ted Weems without his orchestra—that's a situation to pique the curiosity of his W-G-N listeners. Weems and his singing ensemble will be heard on W-G-N five nights a week at 10:15 o'clock, starting tomorrow night. The program will feature Weems as master of ceremonies, "Dones" O'Brien at the piano, and a singing ensemble composed of Weston Vaughn, Parker Gibbs, "Red" Ingle, Elmo Tanner, and Country Washburne.

Weston Vaughn was a member of Ted's first orchestra. After several seasons with the band he went to New York and became a favorite radio vocalist. Before returning to Weems he was featured with Guy Lombardo and his Royal Canadians.

Tanner Is Mimic.

Elmo Tanner is known as one of the most versatile songsters in the business. He has achieved outstanding recognition as a crooner and is regarded as one of the best mimics in the entertainment field. His subjects range from hill billy mountaineers and jew's harps to Maurice Chevalier.

Country Washburne represents the boy from the south (Houston, Tex.) who made good in a big way in the city. Country has won fame as a singer, but his talents do not end with his voice. He can play almost any instrument in the band and on occasion has substituted for practically every member.

They call Parker Gibbs "the little man with the great big voice." He's a novelty singer with a unique style in diction and tempo and a personality that draws crowds whenever and wherever he starts to sing.

Phil Baker with Weems.

"Red" Ingles is, as his name implies, the red headed music maker of the Weems organization. He has been with Ted only since he opened his engagement at the Trianon, but already has won a large following. Besides being a singer, "Red" is a violinist, saxophonist, and all around artist.

Ted Weems and his orchestra, Phil Baker and Ruth Lyon, concert soprano, combine their talents in the first of a new program series over W-G-N and the Columbia network from 8 to 8:30 p. m. tonight.

Baker, complete unto accordion and stooge, will act as master of ceremonies throughout the series, sprinkling the program with his individual brand of humor. Miss Lyon, who gives popular ballads the classical touch, will vocalize against the Weems-made instrumental background.

GALLI-CURCI TO REVERSE ROLE; SHE WILL TALK

Amelita Galli-Curci will step outside her usual rôle of great prima donna, when she chats informally with radio listeners on an NBC network at 5 p. m. Wednesday, as the guest of Pierre Key's music treasure box program. Mme. Galli-Curci will not sing, but face the microphone as a speaker. She will relate personal experiences in her musical career.

Salute Japan, Greece in World's Fair Broadcast

Japan and Greece will be the objects of salutations broadcast across the seas in behalf of a Century of Progress—Chicago's 1933 World's Fair—from 3 to 4 p. m. Sunday, Dec. 6. The program will be carried by station W9XAA.

Eastern Talkie Studios Still Going Strong

Rumors of Closing Down Emphatically Denied by Moving Picture Makers

By Tom Pettey.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—All of these reports of the closing of the talkie studios around New York City are as false as the front of a Hollywood bungalow. Just mention the matter to a Broadway film press agent and he will fill your mail box with reasons why the east coast talkie factories are in the business to stay.

A week or so ago rumors were current that Paramount was shutting down in Astoria, Long Island, and that Warner Brothers were tiring of Brooklyn. Investigation reveals that both of these workshops are going right on about their business and full length features, as well as countless shorts, continue to bear the "made in New York" stamp.

Eastern Argument.

This is the story I get from the east coast movie makers: "Any time you hear about the New York studios folding you can look for a Hollywood brand on the story. Those folks out there have been scared stiff ever since the talkies grew up. You see we do not need orange groves and lemon trees to make talking pictures and, for that matter, we can get along without the California sunshine.

"Talkies are put together indoors and we have plenty of juice to make all the light we need in New York. If you do not believe it, take a look at Times square any night. What is more, we have six actors and actresses to the square yard in the east and we can get them in a hurry.

"The business around New York has not begun to grow up yet. Just wait until they yank prosperity from around the corner."

Despite such optimism, statistics show the talkie industry has not been able to set its roots very deep in the eastern soil. Only a fraction of the pictures made in the last four or five years have been turned out around New York. Broadway is more of a vacation place than a workshop for film actors.

Hollywood Will Stay.

There are a lot of reasons why Hollywood will continue to make most of the pictures, regardless of money and the raw material advantages of the east. In the first place, no one expects a fish to live out of water and a real Hollywood actor is as much out of place in New York as a catfish in a cloud. People accustomed to marble swimming pools cannot get along in a bathtub, and a twenty-five room cottage on a hillside cannot be replaced by a five room hotel apartment. Furthermore, New York still bows its best bow to the legitimate stage folks and that burns the film stars.

Great Character Actor

CHARLES LAUGHTON

CHICAGO has just discovered Mr. Laughton, in "Payment Deferred," at the Harris, and the critics are shouting his praise from the housetops. New York discovered him ten weeks ago, and London a few years ago. He is a comparatively new man in the theater, and an astonishing actor. He revives the great tradition of character acting in melodrama.

Movie Fans Turn In Their "Six Bests"

to Mae Tinee

Dubious About the Surprise.

Dear Miss Tinée:

These six are the best of the month,
I say,
And hope you agree with me, Miss
Tinée.

Joan and Clark in "Possessed,"
One of their very best.

Wally and Jackie, little scamp,
Will tug your heartstrings in "The Champ."

"Rich Man's Folly" is one you ought to see.
You'll like Bancroft and pretty Frances Dee.

"Touchdown," Touchdown! Sis Boom
Bah!
Oakie, Oakie, Rah, Rah, Rah!

"Are These Your Children?"
Good grief, don't you know?
O, well, anyhow,
They made a great show.

Bob Williams lives on in memory fond
For his clever work in "Platinum Blond."

And now an awful thought afflicts me. "Something I don't expect!" Two ways o' takin' that. Like the tough kid's, "Shut up or I'll give yu what-cha ain't lookin' for." Something I don't expect. Hm-m-m-m. Well, I hope it isn't a punch in the nose for writing rotten poetry.

PEG ALICIA,
1328 Lake avenue,
Wilmette, Ill.

Editor's Note: Now you know how I feel when I write poetry! [Never know what'll hit me!]

Long Hand No Bar.

Dear Miss Tinée: Haven't a typewriter. Am I barred? What a month of excellent pictures to choose from. Here are my six bests for November. I love trying for the Surprise.

1. "The Champ"—That lovable Jackie Cooper and that fine character actor, Wally Beery, were great.
2. "The Yellow Ticket"—Lionel Barrymore as always was excellent and Elissa Landi gripped me.
3. "Rich Man's Folly"—George Bancroft and adorable little Dawn O'Day went straight to my head and heart.
4. "Touchdown"—What a picture and what a team Jack Oakie and Dick Arlen made. Real, genuine acting.
5. "Are These Our Children?"—I loved it, because those three youngsters were so natural and real: Eric Linden, Ben Alexander, and Rochelle Hudson.
6. "Fanny Foley Herself" — I couldn't leave this out of my list, because it had that grand Edna May Oliver in the cast. She can act and carry any picture to heights. Long may she wave!

MRS. ELSIE SMITH,
[illegible] North Brainard avenue,
La Grange, Ind.

Editor's Note: No, ma'am, you're not barred.

Goes Fifty Miles to Talkies.

Dear Miss Tinée: Here's hoping I am as good a judge as the others who will "get something they don't expect."

"The Champ."—The best picture of the month. It gets you. I wept but loved every minute of it.

"Possessed."—Gripping. I'm that way about Clark Gable. And Joan Crawford's acting was superb.

"The Touchdown."—Dick Arlen doesn't play—he lives the part in this picture. Such a fine story.

"Rich Man's Folly."—A beautiful compelling picture. Fine acting, especially Dawn O'Day.

"Fanny Foley Herself."—I like to laugh at and with Edna Mae Oliver. Perhaps I'm a lowbrow.

"The Cuban Love Song."—Charming, good all around entertainment. Lawrence Tibbett can sing and Lupe Velez can really act. What a couple!

I have to go fifty miles to a larger theater to see new pictures but these were worth the trip.

Yours Sincerely,
MRS. FAYE C. LAWS,
303 E. Broadway, Havana, Ill.

Editor's Note: Now, maybe you'll think those trips were even more worth while. Congratulations!

Selects Best Six.

Dear Miss Tinée: Ever since you started this little game [or whatever you call it] of naming the six best pictures of the month, I have wondered what your little surprise is. I've wondered so much that I decided the best, and possibly the only way to find out, would be to write a letter of my own and tell you what I consider the best six movies of November. So here they are:

"Are These Our Children," "The Champ," "Rich Man's Folly," "Cuban Love Song," "Touchdown," "Possessed."

Well—time will tell the rest.

Very sincerely and hopefully,
AVIAN L. REINEMEYER,
7128 Ridgeland avenue, Chicago.

Editor's Note: Nice game, isn't it!

"The Champ" Heads Her List.

Dear Miss Tinée: Here is my list of November's six best photoplays:

"The Champ." Wistful Jackie Cooper surpasses all child actors of the movies. He gets you.

"Touchdown." Richard Arlen great in convincing gridiron film.

"Rich Man's Folly." A gripping picture. George Bancroft splendid and Frances Dee wins sympathy.

"The Cuban Love Song." Lawrence Tibbett sings gloriously and Lupe Velez is her vivacious self in colorful picture.

"Are These Our Children?" A bang up movie of the jazz age, screened with sympathy and understanding. Excellent acting by the young folks.

"Possessed." Joan Crawford gives a sincere portrayal and virile Clark Gable wins more admirers.

I like your "Historiette," which I clip for a scrapbook, and hope you will continue this feature.

Very truly yours,
MARIE BECKER,
613 East Highland,
Villa Park, Ill.

Editor's Note: With kindest regards I am sending you——?

Liked These Six Best.

Dear Mae: Although November was only an average month for us movie fans, didn't we have "The Champ," with good old Wallace Beery and lovable little Jackie Cooper—what a combination!

Well, Mae, here goes my six best for the month.

"The Champ."
"Touchdown."
"The Cuban Love Song."
"Possessed."
"Are These Our Children."
"Fanny Foley Herself."

Hope I'll be seeing you Dec. 6.

Yours truly,
MRS. E. ALLMAN,
5313 Lake Park avenue.

Editor's note: Here you are, Mrs. A., with your hopes realized!

Names His Choice.

Dear "Guiding Star"—Although out of the city for a few days, I am going to send in my list of six best movies for November. Maybe I may get that "something I don't expect."

1. "The Champ" [the champion of the month]. What an actor this Jackie Cooper.
2. "Possessed." Great work by Gable.
3. "Are These Our Children?" A fine production, and a find in Eric Linden.
4. "The Cuban Love Song." A refreshing talkie, with songs by the great Tibbett.
5. "Fannie Foley, Herself." A clever and talented comedienne, Edna Mae Oliver makes this talkie fifth on the list.
6. "Platinum Blond." Well worth seeing and hearing, because of the splendid acting of the late Robert Williams.

Some supersix, I think.

Yours admiringly,
FRANK LE PIERRE,
Chilton, Wis.

Editor's Note: Maybe.

Found These Enjoyable.

Dear Miss Tinée: Among so many good pictures, it was hard to choose. But these are the ones I picked:

1. "Gold Chevrons" destroys every illusion of the glory and honor of war. It is real war—inspiring, hideous, tragic.
2. "Are These Our Children?" is a finely directed picture with a cast of young people that do marvelous work. It is a horrifying glimpse into the lives of our children that will give the older generation pause.
3. "Rich Man's Folly"—Notable for the fine characterization of George Bancroft and for the appealing performance of little Dawn O'Day. A sad, strong picture, sympathetically done.
4. "The Cuban Love Song"—A lovely, adventurous thing with delightful music and graced by that intriguing pair of players, Lawrence Tibbett and Lupe Velez.
5. "Fanny Foley Herself"—Not a noteworthy picture in itself, but Edna Mae Oliver puts it over in a big way. She is inimitable.
6. "Touchdown"—A classic among football pictures. It is real, believable—packed with punch, suspense, and humor.

Success to you, Mae [and to me too, this time!].

Ever hopefully,
M. E. HOWLAND,
843 Belden avenue, Chicago.

Sends Choice in Rhyme.

Dear Mae Tinée: Long have I read your reviews; equally long have I remained silent, though often would I have liked to squelch some of your knockers. Fortunately, we do not all have the same tastes, but I feel fortunate that there is a reviewer who has likes and dislikes so similar to my own in so far as movies are concerned. I can bank on what you say and forget the rest.

To proceed to my selection of November's six best movies, I would say that the general run of releases this month was not nearly as good as were those shown during October. However, my selection of the leading six proves to be a fairly well balanced order. Recorded in rhyme, such as it is, they are:

"Possessed" brought Love,
"The Champ" a Tear,
"Are These Our Children?"
Was extremely sincere.

"Rich Man's Folly" was good to see.
And "Reckless Living" rang true to me.

This leaves but one, the best of the lot,
"Touchdown" takes the laurels, believe it or not.

Perhaps you will not choose "Reckless Living," but I could not leave it out of my selection.

At last I have spoken.

Sincerely,
E. ROLAND CHOCHARD,
4605 Grand avenue,
Western Springs, Ill.

Editor's Note: And spoken well!

Perseverance Wins.

Dear Miss Tinée: This is the second time I have played your fascinating "six best" game, but true to the old adage, "If at first you don't succeed, try, try, again!" here I am writing to you once again.

My selection this month is as follows:

1. "Gold Chevrons." This picture took my breath away.
2. "The Champ." Human emotions portrayed honestly by conscientious actors.
3. "Possessed." A top-notch story, the likeable Clark Gable plus gorgeous Joan. What more could one ask?
4. "Are These Our Children?" I congratulate all who helped make this splendid characterization of the younger generation.
5. "Rich Man's Folly." Once more Bancroft adds laurels to his crown, and we have another child prodigy.
6. "Touchdown." At last a football story without one shred of mediocrity!

Once more I thank you for your honest reviews.

Study of An Actor Named Mr. Laughton

In "Payment Deferred" He Gives Performance of Amazing Brilliance.

By Charles Collins.

that he is a comedian as well as an expert in terror.

Hobby: Gardening.

Sean O'Casey's "The Silver Tassie" brought him into the drama of Irish fantasy. "French Leave" gave him exercise in farce. These titles bring him almost up to date. Before "Payment Deferred," however, there was an episode that he doesn't care to mention. The play was a melodrama which came to Chicago last spring and lasted only two weeks. But in London, with Mr. Laughton as its heroic villain, it ran for fourteen months. Still, he says, "Let's forget it."

He is married to Elsa Lanchester, who appears in "Payment Deferred," with much plausibility, as his daughter. His hobby is gardening—a pastime said to be good for the waistline if not done by proxy.

This welkin-ringing business can be easily overdone; but I am confident that Charles Laughton will not disappoint any playgoer, even those whose appetite is too delicate for such startling criminology. If you should find "Payment Deferred" appalling rather than fascinating, you will succumb, nevertheless, to the lure of this man's acting. He is extraordinary.

B'way Openings

NEW YORK, Dec. 5.—[Special.]—Four new plays and one revival are on the first night list for Broadway next week. The debut of Hope Williams as a star under the management of Arthur Hopkins will attract attention. Here are the announcements:

"The Passing Present"—Opens Monday night at the Ethel Barrymore, with Hope Williams as star, under Arthur Hopkins' management. Gretchen Damrosch, who has had previous representation in the Broadway theater, is the author of the play, which has a New York locale. In the company supporting Miss Williams will be Morgan Farley, Cyril Scott, Douglas Gilmore, Josephine Brown, Helen Strickland, E. J. Ballantine, Maria Ouspenskaya and Lillian Emerson.

"Little Women"—Opens Tuesday afternoon at the Playhouse. A revival for special matinées of the Marian De Forest dramatization of Louisa M. Alcott's story. Jessie Royce Landis will appear as Jo, Lee Patrick as Meg [Alice Brady's old part], Joanna Roos as Beth and Peg Entwistle as Amy.

"Springtime for Henry"—Opens Wednesday night at the Bijou. A play by Benn W. Levy, who had a couple of them—"Mrs. Moonlight" and "Art and Mrs. Bottle" were the names—on view last season. The players will be Leslie Banks, who will be starred; Helen Chandler, Nigel Bruce and Frieda Inescort.

"1931"—Opens Thursday night at the Mansfield. The Group theater's second offering will be a topical play, dealing with the labor and unemployment crisis, by Claire and Paul Sifton. The cast includes J. Edward Bromberg, Mary Morris, Margaret Barker and Stella Adler.

"The Second Coming"—Opens Monday night at the Provincetown. A play by George Bryant, one of the co-authors of "The Big Shot," which Mr. Woods expects to produce some day. The cast will be composed largely of Negroes.

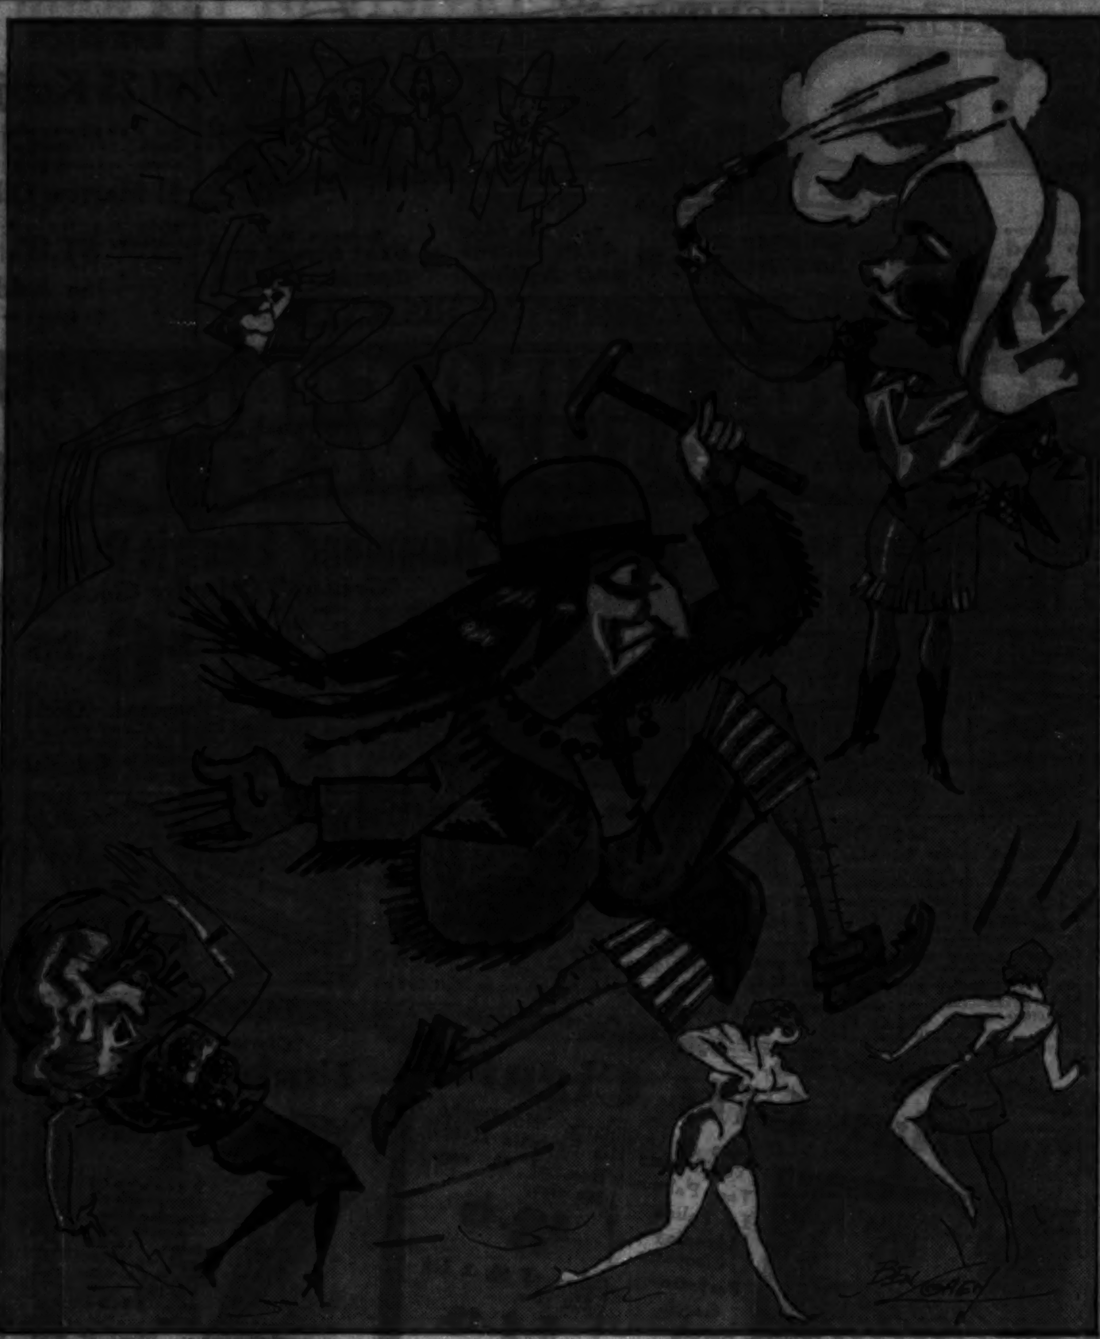
Big Chief Comedian Goes Cuckoo



BENNY RUBIN AND OTHERS IN "GIRL CRAZY"

HERE is a collection of pages from the sketch book of a Tribune staff artist after a night at "Girl Crazy," the musical comedy at the Garrick theater. Benny Rubin, disguised as a Hebrew-Indian, is doing a war dance in the center. Frances Upton is the cow-girl with a six shooter; Vivian Janis is demonstrating "hot rhythms" below, on the left; and in the upper right corner is a glimpse of the Lonesome Foursome, "bidding their time." The production is entering upon its tenth week in Chicago.

Maude Adams' Portia Seen by Veteran Critic

By Burns Mantle.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Dec. 5.—[Special.]—The Belmont scene in the Maude Adams-Otis Skinner traveling production of "The Merchant of Venice," now in Newark, is simply set in a series of arches with draped curtains and played in what seems to be a broad sunlight. When Miss Adams makes her entrance with Nerissa it is through parted curtains back center.

She comes traipsing through, a little nervously [the old familiar entrance], and pauses as the first wave of applause strikes her.

The smile she has been giving Nerissa disappears. She is quite solemn for a passing second, being forced out of character to acknowledge the reception. Then she smiles again.

It is a radiant smile, friendly and warming, touched now with gratitude after thirteen years' absence and six years of wondering and worrying about how "they" would accept her if she did return.

Before that smile the audience in Newark melted quite as swiftly, if not as completely, as the old Maude Adams audiences were accustomed to melt in the old days.

Therefore, I am quick to say that no Maude Adams worshiper need fear a shock in meeting his divinity again. Nor disappointment. Hers is not the charm that years can alter greatly. Its motivation is from within. It has comparatively little to do with externals.

Nor is she greatly changed in appearance. There is added a comfortable middle age plumpness; that's all. When she speaks the voice completes the job of obliterating the thirteen years that have elapsed between the passing of the Miss Thing who loved a policeman in "A Kiss for Cinderella" and the birth of a happy, impish, feminine, maidenly Portia, fearfully anxious about Bessanio and the jewel caskets.

The production as a whole is competent, if quite uninspired, and generously staged, especially in the court scene. I would not be surprised if the Erlangers kept it out of New York for another year at least.

In Vaudeville

THE Palace theater offers the following acts on its new vaudeville program:

Gus Van—The Van of Van and Schenck, who carries on in vaudeville despite the death of his tenor partner.

Puck and White—Sam and Eva, last seen in "Show Boat." Their comic act as show boat actors from that hit is included in their skits.

Hugh Skelly and company—The brother of Hal, and a comedian in his own right. With him a half dozen others in an elaborate sketch called "Honeymoon Troubles."

Geraldine and Joe—Youthful dancers.

Russian Art circus—An animal act done in the Chauve-Souris manner, with M. Marinoff as the trainer.

The program of vaudeville at the Loop End theater this week includes: Freda and Palace, "Ketch On"; Lafayette and La Verne, dancers; Queen, Queen and Queen; Joe de Leir, in "Yours Accordingly"; Dale and Meyers, in athletics; the Six Franklins; Dexter, an Australian ventriloquist, and Dora Early, in "Absurdities."

"Criminal Code."

The Institute Players will give Martin Flavin's play, "Criminal Code," its first Chicago production in the People's playhouse of the Jewish People's Institute Dec. 20, matinée and evening.

Vicki Baum as Hausfrau and Writing Girl

Career of Young Author Whose "Grand Hotel" Is World-Wide Stage Hit.

By William A. Drake.

[Translator and adapter of "Grand Hotel."]

VICKI BAUM has long been a star name on publishers' lists in the German speaking countries. In the United States, until the stage production of "Grand Hotel," which Chicago will see next Tuesday, she was entirely unknown, and three years ago, when her novel, "Ulle der Zwerg," was published, even the astute reviewer of German books for the London Times fancied that Vicki Baum is a man.

The facts of Vicki Baum's career are unusually interesting. Hers is a talent created by circumstance and nourished by adversity. It was not until fame overtook her that she thought seriously of becoming a writer. Although her preceptors at the Vienna Conservatory early discovered in her a fine talent as a harpist, as a girl she apparently cherished no ambition beyond that of marrying a man of her own station and settling down to the life of a middle-class Viennese hausfrau.

It is true that she had some encouragement to aspire higher. She had a knack for composition. When the famous Viennese humorous periodical Die Muskete was founded she submitted some of her stories and poems, and was thrilled and dismayed when the editor not only printed her contributions but expressed an urgent desire to make her acquaintance in order to discuss further contributions. Dismayed because she was then a girl of fourteen in pigtails and pinafores, in desperation she did up her hair, borrowed a dress and attempted to masquerade her extreme youth beneath an air of sophistication.

Love and Literature.

But this early success did not dissuade Vicki Baum from her sensible dream. At the age of eighteen she fell in love with a young writer. Even then she did not lose her head. The young man was questioned and investigated with true middle class thoroughness before the marriage was allowed to take place. But once the step was taken the truth came out. The young husband was indeed a writer. He could even place his stories in various periodicals. But he had no ideas. He was cursed with a complete inability to think up story plots.

So Vicki Baum wrote her husband's stories, and they were published under his name. At the same time, in order to add to the family revenues, she secured a place as a harpist in the orchestra of the Deutsches Theater of Vienna and the Vienna State Opera. Later, consumed with a prodigious energy, she attempted to publish a magazine single handed, writing all the material under various pseudonyms, seeing it through the press and mailing every copy herself. The magazine failed and she lost her savings.

Vicki Baum then renounced literature and in the same gesture she divorced her husband and left Vienna. Removing to Darmstadt, she secured a position as harpist in the orchestra of Hoftheater. In Darmstadt she met her present husband, Richard Lert, music director of the Berlin State Opera.

Novels for Doctors' Bills.

It was not until the starvation days of the monetary inflation after the war that Vicki Baum again thought of writing. She, her husband, and their two children all needed medical attention. Casting about for a means of raising money, Vicki Baum remembered a half-finished novel. She found it, finished it, and, with little hope, sent it off to the great publishing house of Ullstein. It was immediately published.

More important, it brought about a permanent connection with the Ullstein Verlag. Vicki Baum removed to Berlin and assumed an editorial position with the Ullstein periodical publications, in one of which, the Berliner Illustrierte Zeitung, the original novel version of "Menschen im Hotel" appeared as a serial.

"Grand Hotel" Opens Tuesday: Be on Time!

THE GRAND OPERA HOUSE will open its doors next Tuesday night to the much heralded and long awaited "Grand Hotel," which comes to Chicago directly after its fifty-six weeks' run in New York.

Originally written as a novel by Vicki Baum and later turned into a stage success by the same author, "Grand Hotel" is in eighteen scenes and utilizes a cast of more than fifty actors. The play was first presented in Berlin by Max Reinhardt, where it scored an instantaneous success. The American version was made by William A. Drake, who translated and adapted from Miss Baum's manuscript.

Eugénie Leontovich, whom Chicago officially "discovered" when she made her first important appearances on the stage here in "And So to Bed" and "Candlelight," will head the cast. She will be seen as Grusinskaia, the world-weary ballet dancer. Sam Jaffe will appear as Kringelein, the ailing bookkeeper; Siegfried Rumann will be Preysing, the German capitalist; Hortense Alden as Flaemmchen, the sophisticated stenographer, and Albert Van Dekker as Von Gaigern, the impoverished baron and porch climber.

The entire action of "Grand Hotel" takes place within thirty-six hours, and its plot is formed from the chance meetings of these five characters. A feature of the production is its unique staging. Directed by Herman Shumlin, who in association with Harry Moses produced the play, "Grand Hotel" introduces a new type of "platform stages" with which the scene changes are effected in less than ten seconds each. Aline Bernstein designed the settings.

The curtain will rise on the opening and subsequent night performances promptly at 8:30 and on matinée days at 2:30. Because of the character of the drama and its rapid scene changes, no one will be seated during scenes. A formal warning to late comers, announcing the necessity of a twelve minute wait in the lobby for those arriving later than 8:25, has been issued with all tickets.

Broadway Wants Merriment; Serious Plays Out of Luck

NEW YORK, Dec. 5.—(AP)—Sweetness and laughter are the guide lines of Broadway playwrights since audiences are showing unusual preference for the cheering shows.

Of the twenty-five attractions, musical and dramatic, now current, only three are what could be called serious entertainment. The other twenty-two are light, frivolous, romantic and humorous types.

More than a score of serious plays have come upon Broadway this fall and all but two found themselves shunned. These are O'Neill's murder filled "Mourning Becomes Electra" and "Two Seconds," a melodrama telling what passes through a condemned man's mind during those last two seconds he is sitting in the electric chair.

The third drama appealing to those of a serious mind is a holdover from last season, "The Barretts of Wimpole Street." Incidentally, Katharine Cornell reports that there will not be a second company, as she wants to play the Elizabeth Barrett Browning rôle herself on tour.

This was an inactive week in the theater, due, of course, to managers' disinclination to open new shows during the holiday season.

The single opening of note was John Van Druten's new comedy, "After All." The author is a young English professor who has had two previous plays in this country, "Young Woodley" and "Diversion."

Mary Ellis and Basil Sydney, who gave up their plan to bring "Cherries Are Ripe" to town, have found a new vehicle. It is a Hungarian comedy called "The Jewel Robbery."

◆

Diana Wynyard, the English actress, arrived from London this week. She has the leading rôle in Benn Levy's new play, "The Devil Passes." Basil Rathbone and Mary Nash, who played together in "The Command to Love," also are in the cast.

Tito Schipa to Make Debut in "La Traviata"

"Die Meistersinger" Will Be Given Thursday Night by Brilliant Cast.

By Edward Moore.

Is the singer or the opera the more important element in a season such as is now going on at the Civic Opera house? You will find adherents of both theories, but you may have some difficulty in settling the question this week, because a famous singer and a famous opera are both entering the calendar, though on different nights.

Tito Schipa is the singer; "Die Meistersinger" is the opera. He will make his first appearance of the season Tuesday night in "La Traviata," naturally in the rôle of the younger Germont. Claudia Muzio will appear as Violetta, and Cesare Formichi will make his first Chicago appearance as the elder Germont.

"Die Meistersinger," the great Wagnerian comedy, in fact on the authority of no less a person than Paderewski, the greatest opera ever written, is up for Thursday night with the same brilliant cast that sang it in its last performance in Chicago a season ago. Rudolf Bockelmann will be the Hans Sachs, Maria Rajdl the Eva, Maria Olszewska the Magdalena, René Maison the Walther, Oscar Colcaire the David, Eduard Habich the Beckmesser, Alexander Kipnis the Pogner, and Robert Ringling the Kothner. Egon Pollak will conduct.

Shifting of Artists.

It is approaching the time for shifting artists. Jan Kiepura will make his farewell appearance tomorrow night as the duke of Mantua in "Rigoletto," with Noel Eadie, John Charles Thomas and Virgilio Lazzari as some of the others in a notable cast. Miss Eadie will make her farewell on Saturday night as the queen of the night in Mozart's "The Magic Flute."

On the other hand, Mr. Schipa, having just arrived, will stay here for the eight weeks that remain of the season and will sing a number of the rôles that have made him one of the organization's favorite artists. Rosa Raisa will soon return to the company. Her first appearance, Rachel in "The Jewess," is booked for Dec. 31, and she has already begun rehearsals for the performance.

Coe Glade's Rise.

One of the most interesting features of the professional stage is to be found in the development of a young talent. To recognize its potentialities when they first begin to unfold themselves and to watch their development toward true artistry is one of the greatest pleasures attached to the work of a critic.

The Civic Opera has afforded this rare pleasure during the last four years in the progress being made by one of its youthful American artists. When Coe Glade joined the Civic Opera during the last season in the old Auditorium and made her memorable debut as Amneris in "Aïda," one recognized at once that here was an unusually gifted talent. Voice, personal appearance, musical sense, and a sympathetic personality combined to give this young Chicago singer the basis of a real stage career. What she lacked then was experience and routine.

Other young artists almost equally well endowed by nature have appeared during the twenty years of the company's history, and only a few are remembered today. But Coe Glade has made steady progress until today she begins to assume stellar proportions.

Development Watched.

They tell one at the opera company that Miss Glade has been given most careful direction in her work, and that her development along the difficult path to a leading position in the company has been watched with critical eyes. Those in charge of the destinies of young artists have given her their aid as far as lies in their powers. But the principal factors in her progress have been her sincerity of purpose, her willingness to learn and her capacity for hard, grinding work.

Miss Glade is still a considerable distance from reaching full maturity in her chosen field. This is another considerable distance from being a reflection on what she has already done, for it is generally an impossibility for a voice to reach its complete development until the artist is well along in her thirties—and Miss Glade has several years to go before she reaches her thirtieth birthday.

But the progress made during her four years in Chicago would seem to indicate that she will soon be counted among the notable singers of our times. Her musical talent has resulted in vocal triumphs. Her youth, good looks and natural aptitude for the stage have made her portrayals more and more convincing.

During the first year with the company Miss Glade had several important assignments, and she scored successes in all of them. Her Carmen was full of life, fire and vocal beauty. Her Adalgisa in "Norma" was probably the best thing she did during her first year with the company—a vocal success that gave us an idea of what to expect in the future.

La Belle Dulcinée in "Don Quichotte" during her second season began to disclose her development along lines other than purely vocal. It was a beautiful characterization of a difficult rôle; one that had the charm of youth and freshness of voice required by the part, and which bore the stamp of sincerity.

The biggest thing Miss Glade did last year was Mignon, and it was a veritable masterpiece. Her slender, well poised figure created the illusion and her agile mind added to it a piquancy that will be long remembered. The voice reached new depths of emotional color. No wonder that she scored a hit of unusual proportions with the audience. She will appear in this rôle again in the near future.

Success as Azucena.

Now Miss Glade is with the company for her fourth season, and the progress made during the summer is much apparent in her work. Her Maddalena in "Rigoletto" added much to the performance, and her Marina in "Boris Godunoff" was an excellent picture. It remained for Miss Glade, in her first performance of the rôle of Azucena in "Il Trovatore," to give us a real idea of the development of her operatic art. Singing the rôle for the first time with the Chicago company, she revealed a wealth of volume, a beauty of tone and a fire in impersonation that surpassed any of her previous efforts.

Miss Glade seems bound to go far with the company. Up to this season her efforts have been quite rightly bent chiefly toward the musical side. Now she will be able to concentrate more and more on the dramatic values of the rôles she is to portray. For a contralto this is as important as the proper production and correct projection of the singing voice, and the contralto is called upon to give a much greater variety of impersonations than are included in the average repertoire of the soprano. She is at one and the same time leading woman and character woman. Intelligence, personality, good looks and sincerity are demanded in the making of a great contralto, and Miss Glade has all of these in abundance.

Music Notes.

Adolf Busch, a violinist who enjoys an important rating in Europe and bids fair to reach the same point in America, will be the Chicago Symphony orchestra soloist in both the Tuesday and Thursday-Friday programs this week. He is a newcomer to Chicago and the first of the five new artists the orchestra will bring here this season.

He made his American dêbut in Boston last month and he played with the New York Philharmonic in Toscanini's first appearance of the season a few days later. In both he captured some words indicative of high praise from the reviewers. He will be in this country only three months and will play only with symphony orchestras.

Born in 1891, he is a graduate of the Cologne conservatory and has made himself well known on the continent for his accomplishments. At present he is the teacher of Yehudi Menuhin.

On Tuesday he will play the Beethoven Concerto, on Thursday and Friday that by Dvorak, both being the only violin concertos their composers ever wrote. The orchestra program for Tuesday includes Bach's Second Suite for strings and flute and Chausson's Symphony; for Thursday and Friday, Debussy's "Marche Ecossaise," Brahms' Third Symphony, Werner Josteon's "Jungles," a novelty, and two of Dvorak's Slavonic Dances.

John McCormack's program at the Civic Opera house this afternoon will be made up of request numbers. A telegram from D. F. McSweeny, Mr. McCormack's personal representative, states that at the time of going to press the program was not complete, but that it could be authoritatively said that some of the numbers would be "Panis Angelicus," "Kathleen Mavourneen," "The Irish Emigrant," "Bard of Armagh," "To the Children," "Ballynure Ballad," "Rose of Tralee," "Believe Me, if All Those Endearing Young Charms," and "The Last Rose of Summer," all, with the exception of "Panis Angelicus," to be sung in English. Up to the time of sending the wire these were the numbers most in popular demand.

They say that the castanets to be used by Carola Goya in her recital of Spanish dances at the Civic theater this afternoon were those owned and played upon by the famous Carmencita when that artist was the toast of two continents some years ago. They were presented to their present owner last summer in Seville by Manuel del Castillo Otero, the greatest living authority on Spanish dancing. The castanets are made of pomegranate wood and are called an especially mellow toned and vibrant set.

The Friends of Slavic Music send word of a concert from the works of Slavic composers to take place at Orchestra hall next Wednesday evening under the direction of Alexander Savine. The society was organized last February and states that one of its purposes is to promote knowledge and appreciation of Slavic music through the medium of not less than three concerts each season.

The present program will be both vocal and instrumental, solo and ensemble. Its composers are thus grouped: Russian, Moussorgsky, Rachmaninoff, Medtner, Kortchmareff; Polish, Szarszynski, Chopin, Rozycki, Szymanowski; Czecho-Slovak, Suk, Foerster, Krizkowsky; Jugo-Slav, Slavenski; and American of Jugo-Slav descent, Savine. Most of the numbers will be new to Chicago.

They will be performed by Marie Broniarzyk, soprano; Elizabeth Hall, contralto; Leo Podolsky, pianist; Victor Charvalach, viola; Mildred Fitzpatrick, organist; the Slavic trio, consisting of Michel Wilkomirski, Olda Jirousek, and Jasna Bjankini, and the Lyra Singing society, of which František Kubina is the conductor.

Marx E. Oberndorfer's opera "Roseanne" will be presented in concert form at Curtiss hall next Friday evening under the sponsorship of the Chicago chapter of Pro-Musica. Excerpts will be sung by Helen Protheroe, soprano, and Frank Brantley, baritone, while the composer will act as narrator and pianist.

The annual dinner of The Bohemians of Chicago will be held at the Palmer house on the evening of Sunday, Jan. 10, in honor of John Alden Carpenter, the Chicago composer. It is the third in a series purposing to do honor to the notables of the musical world. Two years ago Frederick Stock, as conductor of the Chicago Symphony orchestra, was the central figure; last winter it was Samuel Insull, as president of the Chicago Civic Opera company. Because of his high standing among contemporary composers Mr. Carpenter has been chosen for the coming event.

Because of the serious illness of Henri Verbrugghen, Eugene Ormandy has been appointed conductor of the Minneapolis Symphony orchestra and will appear in that capacity when the orchestra visits Chicago after the first of the year.

Child Prodigy Comes Into Its Own in Gotham

Flowers and Toys Shower Youthful Aspirants to Musical Fame.

By Joan King.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—Chicago and San Francisco provided New York lovers of prodigy entertainment with two occasions for rejoicing during recent days. The first was that of a first recital appearance by Guila Bustabo, feminine runner-up in the ranks of youthful musical phenomena, topped at the moment by Yehudi Menuhin and Ruggiero Ricci. The second was the New York debut of Grisha Goluboff, a boy fiddler of tender years who hails from San Francisco.

Guila, whose violinistic prowess is already known in Chicago, where she made her debut several years ago with the Chicago Symphony, although she is now but 14 years of age, played at Town Hall on this occasion.

She played before a sizable audience, largely comprised of musical notables, including Arturo Toscanini, Fritz Kreisler, Erich Kleiber, and Ernest Schelling—the last named of whom introduced her here as one of the soloists of his children's Philharmonic concerts last season.

She played a taxing program, comprised of such show pieces as the Tartini Sonata in G minor ["The Devil's Trill"]; the Jules Conus Concerto in E minor, the Paganini Concerto in D major [Cadenza by Emile Sauret], and a group of short pieces by Rubinstein, Elman, Ernest Schilling, and Eugene Ysaye. She played upon an instrument selected, tried in recital, and approved by Kreisler himself, and she was accompanied by her teacher, that renowned pedagogue of youthful violin stars, Louis Persinger.

Thus equipped, and heralded in advance by the favorable impression which she made here last season, Guila made a decidedly good showing, as a whole, in her debut recital. There was a good deal to be desired in her bowing, but her finger technique was brilliant indeed, and she displayed no lowly interpretative ability. Especially was her performance of the difficult Sauret Cadenza of the Paganini amazing. The audience was completely won, and floral tributes were exceedingly plentiful as well as sustained and enthusiastic applause.

The nine year old Grisha Goluboff was introduced to his musical metropolis as the soloist of the second concert of the new National Orchestral association at Carnegie hall. As is usual hereabouts with appearances of the very young, the small, chubby lad received immediate and enthusiastic acclaim, flowers, toys, and repeated recalls.

Beethoven and Debussy Music on New Records

Berlin Philharmonic Orchestra Plays First Symphony with German Tradition

By Edward Moore.

TWO albums, indicating complete sets, are recent arrivals in the record deliveries. One is Brunswick's number 34 of the Hall of Fame-International importations with Beethoven's First Symphony, three records long, 90204-90206. The other is a set of Debussy selections, orchestral or transcribed in Victor's M-116, four records, or more accurately, three and one-half, 7453-7456, the fourth side being filled with the Gavotte from Ambroise Thomas' opera, "Mignon."

Both are interesting and for that reason worth having. The Beethoven composition is recorded by the Philharmonic orchestra of Berlin, under the direction of Hans Pfitzner, the Debussy works by Leopold Stokowski and his Philadelphia orchestra. The names are enough to indicate that they are authoritative, and if one should desire to grow philosophical and comparative, it is possible that a case might be made out for the difference between European and American ideals of performance.

Certainly the Pfitzner performance is highly able, one that lives up to most of the German traditions and yet does not grow lost and tired among them. Everything is firm, well proportioned, well rounded, and with tempos showing that this conductor believes Beethoven was writing some highly entertaining music. Also, the Berlin Philharmonic is a good orchestra and the mechanics of the recording have been well handled.

"Clouds" in Debussy Set.

The Debussy set contains the nocturne called "Nuages" [Clouds], then Mr. Stokowski's own transcription of the piano work named "La Cathedrale Engloutie" [The Engulfed Cathedral], and finally the two dances, Sacred and Profane, which blend into one single number. Because of a blank side to fill, Victor included the "Mignon" Gavotte, though its four-square tunefulness makes a somewhat violent contrast with Debussy.

It is in pieces of the Debussy order that Stokowski and his marvelously brilliant orchestra have established a good bit of their reputation. He is the greatest showman of the conductors, pursuing effects with great imagination and gaining them with certain hand. Wherefore, it is not entirely surprising to find that when he transcribes for orchestra he goes to Debussy's full lengths and perhaps even exceeds them at times. The cathedral bells clang, the smaller instruments shriek at the tops of their registers. It is a glittering performance, even though at times one wonders whether Debussy with his fondness for pastel colorings and half shadings would not have produced his effects with less spectacular means.

The two dances indicate the presence of a remarkable harp soloist. They were first written as solos for chromatic harp, then for piano, and finally back for harp with string orchestra. The name of the harpist is not made public, but he is an artist of parts.

Show Capital Is Reduced to Fewer Theaters

Ten Plays Fail in One Week; Now There Are Only Thirty Stages in Use.

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—For the first time in a lot of years the theater capital of the world is down to thirty first class showhouses. Thirty active showhouses, that is to say. There were about forty until last week, when ten additional plays gave up the struggle.

A year ago we averaged probably forty-five; two years ago, fifty odd. And in 1928-'29, when stocks were up and prosperity's millennium beckoned from just around the nonexistent corner, we boasted sixty-five and seventy filled mostly with indifferent entertainment, worth no more than half the price it was selling for.

Which reminds me that if I were a newspaper proprietor I should suggest to my chief editorial writer that he do a piece entitled "What Is Prosperity?"

Just how far back do we have to go to be happy again? Upon what condition is this persistent prayer of ours for a return to prosperity fixed? Must we have sixty-five theaters on Broadway to bring theater conditions back to normal? Or will we be content with a decent improvement?

Thirty Theaters Enough.

Thirty theaters are enough for any community if they are filled with thirty good entertainments. Of the ten plays that quit last week, not more than three or four really deserved a greater success than they won. I was sorry to see Paul Green's "The House of Connelly" in any discard. But it did get seventy some performances.

The fairly radical revival of "Hamlet," with the Norman-Bel Geddes setting, and the young Raymond Massey in the name part, lasted four weeks, which is pretty good for any "Hamlet" on Broadway. Ethel Barrymore got only three weeks out of her revival of "The School for Scandal," due partly to the economy urge and partly to "The School for Scandal." Jed Harris' "Wonder Boy" spoofed the movies amusingly, but it also was cheaply and deliberately vulgarized and I cannot feel sorry that it went under after six weeks.

There is a chance for "The Good Companions" and "Payment Deferred" in western theater centers, the first because of its book following and general good humor; the second because in it Charles Loughton, an English actor new to America, does give a remarkable performance of the conscience-haunted murderer.

New Molnar Comedy.

Of new plays coming in one likely to register is "The Good Fairy," which Gilbert Miller has produced with all the Miller flourishes at the Henry Miller theater. This is a typical continental comedy, written by Ferenc Molnar, who will be remembered for his "Liliom" and "The Play's the Thing." In it Helen Hayes is forced a little arbitrarily to pose as one of those Molnar heroines who is not quite sure of her social status—is she a trollop or isn't she? Because she is Helen Hayes she is able to do this with benefit to the rôle.

Miss Hayes' part is that of a girl named Lu who has been an usherette in a motion picture theater. Now, having lost her job and the flashlight that went with it, she describes herself as "an unemployed glowworm."

Lu is being pursued by a big business man. A big and amorous business man. She is not averse to surrendering, but, knowing movie heroines as she does, she would much rather be a good fairy and make many people happy.

Also, to add a touch of real romance to the adventure, she tells her pursuer she is married; that her husband is a lawyer and very poor, and that if she gives all she will expect much in return. The big business man thereupon agrees to make Lu's husband an attorney for his firm at a handsome salary. Having no husband, Lu has to produce one.

She selects a lawyer from a telephone book, a Dr. Sporum by name. Next day she calls on Sporum to warn him and finds him middle-aged, poverty-stricken, unhappy. Within the hour the business man has arrived and filled the amazed lawyer with dreams of his future success. The bargain is to be completed the next day. But that night Lu runs away with a head waiter for love, and all the business man's promises are angrily canceled.

Epilogue Provided.

"The Good Fairy" has not come to much at this point. The first act has been bright with wit. The second act at the lawyer's is forced but amusing. In the third everything goes to pot. At which moment the manager (it was Mr. Miller in person the opening night), steps before the curtain to explain that there is to be an epilogue. Mr. Molnar has written to say that inasmuch as audiences always want to know what happens to a play's characters after the play has ended, he will show them.

The scene of the epilogue is the same hotel dining room in which the play began. The time, ten years later. Lu, bedazzled with diamonds, is giving a dinner in honor of her tenth wedding anniversary. All the men of the cast are guests—the big business man, the now prosperous attorney, the head waiter—and the husband. The man Lu finally married, it now appears, is an Austrian diplomat who was a little drunk and not at all conspicuous in the first act.

Helen Hayes, prattling innocently of parting with her virtue for the happiness of mankind, and of her proper status among the harlots, is highly amusing to the public that revels in sophisticated comedy. I happen to be one who does not believe it possible to bend her essentially simple and wholesome type to these uses with any continued success. She plays Lu with such naive charm as circumstances warrant.

Wynn Stages Own Show.

I caught up with Ed Wynn's "Laugh Parade" last week. It is, I think, the best of the current musical plays, so far as fun goes. This, naturally, presupposes your belief in Mr. Wynn as the most gifted of the professional zanies.

He has written and staged "The Laugh Parade" himself, with music by Harry Warren. He also performs the greater part of it. Being his own boss, his own director, his own financial backing, his own everything, he can do as he jolly well pleases.

Individualistic comedians should have a free hand. At least, they should have a free hand if they happen to be as intelligent as Mr. Wynn. I don't believe Frank Tinney could ever have organized his own show, even if he could have written it. I doubt if Al Jolson or Eddie Cantor could do it. But Wynn knows what he himself can contribute most successfully to an entertainment, and is willing to do that and no more. He is also wise in knowing that he must have a proper setting and proper support.

Armchair Playgoer

By Fanny Butcher.

"GRAND HOTEL" comes to Chicago after a long run in New York, and offers to armchair playgoers assorted thrills. The script of the play has not been published, as far as I know, but those of us who sit by the fireside and imagine the rising of the curtain have all the material of the play to our hands in the novel.

VICKI BAUM.

The story of that novel and its author is thrilling. Vicki Baum had been writing for years serials for daily newspapers, thrillers frankly conceived to snare wandering attention. She would have been the last person to think of herself as Germany's leading woman novelist. She didn't even think of herself as especially a popular one, in any vast sense of the word.

Then, she wrote "Grand Hotel." It was made into a play by a discerning person who saw in it a supermelodrama, and, suddenly, Europe was talking about a new star which had risen in the literary firmament of Germany.

The play was translated into English before the novel, I believe. It was produced in London and created a furore. The play was bought for American production, and enterprising publishers sought out the novel and published it in translation.

Oddly enough, those who read the novel before they see the play always think the novel is much the better piece of work, while those who see the play first feel that the novel is a let-down from its thrills. The truth is that the play and the novel, while they use the same material, are two almost entirely different artistic creations. They are both superb melodrama, but the play is so episodic as to throw the emphasis upon the individual characters and the book is a flowing picture of the soul of a vast hotel [if that does not sound too grandiose for an excellent piece of interpretive fiction].

From the novel you get the feeling of the transitoriness of not only life in an enormous hotel, but of life itself in a larger sense. Readers are wont to do a good deal of philosophizing about "isn't life, after all, just a hotel in which we make our casual and transitory visit?" The play gives its audiences no such feeling.

It is extremely interesting to see how the same material exactly used in almost the same manner—that is, melodramatically—can create two such different illusions in those to whom it is offered.

If you're fat—first remove the cause! KRUSCHEN SALTS is an ideal blend of 6 mineral salts that help your body organs to function properly.

When your vital organs fail to perform their work correctly—your bowels and kidneys do not throw off that waste material—fat tends to accumulate—before you realize it—you're growing hideously fat.

Take one half teaspoonful of KRUSCHEN SALTS in a glass of hot water every morning—in three weeks get on the scales and note how many pounds of fat have vanished.

Notice also that you have gained in energy — your eyes sparkle — you feel younger in body—keener in mind. KRUSCHEN will give any fat person a joyous surprise.

Get an 85c bottle of KRUSCHEN SALTS from any leading druggist anywhere in America (lasts 4 weeks). If this first bottle doesn't convince you this is the easiest, safest and surest way to lose fat—if you don't feel a superb improvement in health—so gloriously energetic — vigorously alive — your money gladly returned.

Note: When taking Kruschen for overweight you can reduce more swiftly by going light on potatoes, pastry and fatty meats.

In two weeks Mrs. M. C. Taylor of Lewisburg, W. Va., reduced her weight from 175 to 158½ pounds—Her headache is no more and shortness of breath is gone—"Thanks for such a good remedy," she writes.

Bennett Girls Keep Up Their Clothes Spats

"What's Mine Is Mine," Is Prevailing Rule of the Family Wardrobe.

By Rosalind Shaffer.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal. — Barbara Bennett has come to Hollywood and gone, and still there remains the mystery of the origin of Constance Bennett's wedding trousseau.

It seems Barbara [Mrs. Morton Downey] recently entered the clothing business. Perhaps that is a crude way of saying it. At any rate, she operates a New York gown shop. When Connie was preparing to wed the Marquis de la Falaise she took a run to New York and spent several days with Barbara shopping at the New York wholesale place where Barbara does her buying.

Thus Connie acquired Hollywood's smartest recently seen wedding outfit at a fraction of what other such new brides as Gloria Swanson [Connie's predecessor with the marquis], Dorothy MacKaill and Marjorie Rambeau paid for their honeymoon outfits.

Of course, the credit reflected by Connie's smart appearance on Barbara's gown business would be expected to prove good advertising for Barbara's shop. But when Constance got off the train here at Pasadena and was asked about her fetching clothes the reply was languidly that they were only "a little thing I designed myself" and "one of the things I had made in Paris."

No Borrowed Wardrobes.

It recalls an amusing story related about the two sisters a couple of years ago when Barbara was not Mrs. Morton Downey, wife of the $6,000 a week entertainer, but was struggling to put up the smartly dressed front that is part of the stock in trade of an actress.

As that story is told Barbara itched to wear one of Connie's things to gain a particularly desired effect. But Constance, like countless other big sisters, couldn't see little sister borrowing from her wardrobe, and her answer to Barbara, according to one of the latter's friends, was "You know how I got my clothes—get yourself some the same way."

For her wedding, an afternoon affair, Constance wore a star sapphire blue crêpe gown with pearl motifs and blue hat to match. Her jewels were a string of pearls and she carried a bridal bouquet of orchids and lilies of the valley. Her other sister, Joan, attended Constance. So did Eileen Percy, formerly an actress and now a movie fan writer, and Mrs. George Fitzmaurice [Diane Kane], in whose living room the wedding ceremony took place.

Barbara Bennett was in the party. So was Gene Markey, who has succeeded John Considine as Joan Bennett's omnipresent escort; Marion Davies, Mr. Fitzmaurice, Neil McCarthy, an attorney; Richard Bennett, the girls' father, and Henri Didot, French consul at Los Angeles, who stood with the marquis.

Exchange Platinum Rings.

The bride and groom exchanged plain platinum wedding rings as Appellate Judge Lewis R. Works performed the brief ceremony.

The wedding reception which followed the affair was marked by an exchange of "compliments" between two of the lady fan magazine writers of Hollywood. One of them who sends out daily articles from Hollywood took offense because she was invited only to the wedding reception subsequent to the wedding, while the other was singled out with an invitation to attend the exclusive wedding ceremony itself as well as the reception afterwards.

Mrs. John Miljan says her birthday, celebrated recently, was the most interesting she ever remembers, due to the activity of waggish persons at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio, where her husband works. Miljan's friends at the studio loaded John's automobile with gifts the nature of which were masked with clever wrappings.

Thus, when Mrs. Miljan unwrapped one package she found a photograph of her husband bearing this signature: "Love and kisses. I hope you like my photograph. [Signed] Pete Smith." Pete is the gag man who puts the funny dialogue in M. G. M's short reels on athletics.

Another gift to Mrs. Miljan was an elaborately wrapped giant corkscrew. The accompanying note suggested her husband would teach her how to use it. Other gifts were a pamphlet on "How to Train a Husband," a can of coffee, a chorus girl's lipstick, a sample bottle of perfume, a caricature statuette of Ramon Novarro, and an ornate jewel case from her husband, which proved, when opened, to contain no bracelet, but a sheet of paper inscribed "I love you." Another sheet of paper hidden in a homely envelope proved to contain friend husband's sizable birthday check.

Ina Claire Grieves.

Ina Claire was prostrated when telegrams acquainted her with the sudden death of Robert Ames in New York. Miss Claire was attended by Hedda Hopper. The report had been that Miss Claire and Ames would be married when Ina's divorce from Jack Gilbert became final.

Carmel Myers' name in private life is Mrs. Ralph Blum, but she has so much trouble getting persons on the other end of a phone wire to understand it that she decided to take steps to stop her friends' maids saying "Mrs. Blurb? I'll see if madam is in, etc." Recently, Carmel decided to adopt a phone name that nobody would miss. So she called Rosabelle Laemmle [Mrs. Stanley Bergerman], and told Rosabelle's new butler "This is Mrs. Umpqua calling."

The horrified English servitor gasped: "Mrs. Umpqua? Beg pardon, ma'am, the name sounds like Umpqua." "So it does," said Carmel, and the butler thereupon notified his mistress. It meant nothing at all to Rosabelle, but she answered the telephone. Carmel explained her new name, and now the two get the titters whenever they think of the horror-stricken butler.

House Beautiful

THE Dramatic League of Chicago announces that the fourth play in this season's subscription series of seven new works will be "The House Beautiful," by Channing Pollock, who has not been represented on the Chicago stage since, in 1923, "The Fool" had a run in the league's theater, the Harris. "The House Beautiful" was among last season's long run successes in New York, and the New York cast, headed by Mary Phillips and James Bell, will be seen here. Miss Phillips is well remembered in Chicago for her acting in "Two Girls Wanted" and with George M. Cohan in "Gambling"; while Mr. Bell scored a hit here a year ago in "The Last Mile."

Last Half Dozen Bell Ringers of Year Are Listed

Lots of Movie Productions Were Crowded Into a Busy Thanksgiving Month

By Mae Tinee.

and actresses have become just ordinary people. . . . Mystery, a trite word, best describes the why of the former illusion," she continues. "Few persons in other years realized that actors were human beings; they knew that they were a happy-go-lucky lot, with no inhibitions. That the player would carry on as no righteous and straightlaced nonprofessional would do. These very things made the actor a mysterious person, and a source of wonderment to his audience.

"Now, with personal appearances of actors at premieres, at breakfast clubs and women's clubs and talks over the radio, you can take all the mystery they represent and put it, with room to spare, in your right eye. There is only one really successful person in the movies now who retains the air, and though she isn't really a bit mysterious, her fans are firmly convinced that she is something not of this earth. Which undoubtedly adds a great deal to her popularity."

See you tomorrow.

The Voice of the Movie Fan

If you would like your letters printed in this column please write on ONE side of the paper ONLY. If you want a personal answer send stamped, self-addressed envelope—PLEASE!

Finds Movie Routine Boring.

Dear Miss Tinée: I feel chatty this morning; hope you won't mind if I pick on you? And since people who indulge in chats are usually catty, I believe now is the proper time to get a few feline remarks out of my system.

Did you ever know of anything more unreasonable than this idea so many movie fans seem to have that all pictures should be of first class, A No. 1 quality? Seems to me common sense would tell them that such a demand is impossible. With all the best fiction writers laboring at the task and all the really good actors and actresses working overtime there still wouldn't be enough fine pictures produced to supply all the movie houses in this country with a first rate film every day. We don't expect it of the stage—two or three fair to middlin' plays in a season satisfy the most sanguine hopes of the followers of the footlights.

What burns me up is the habit producers have of making actors go through the same antics, picture after picture. How I wish I could see Greta Garbo in a story where she has a chance to be other than an innocent girl "gone wrong" through force of circumstances. If Ruth Chatterton should, through a happy chance, be cast in a rôle where she didn't have to have hysterics, I believe, the shock would be one of the pleasantest I ever have experienced. That goes ditto for Joan Crawford. And as for poor little Janet Gaynor, I could weep when I remember those wonderful, beautifully acted parts she used to get, and then see her in the sticky "lived happily ever after" affairs they put her in now.

O, well, let us live in the hope that the makers of motion pictures will some day realize that the public is capable of appreciating a good actor and of recognizing him, or her, in parts other than the ones in which they made their first hit. Until then, we can rejoice over such gems as "Bad Girl," "Street Scene," "The Last Flight," and, to go back a little, "All Quiet on the Western Front."

I'll not say any more today, on account of having a lot of things to do. It's nice of you to have borne with me this long—if you have!

Sincerely yours,
ROSE INGAMELL.

Editor's note: It's nice of you to take so much interest! Producers, actors, writers—and I—should be glad of folks like you! [We are.]

* *

No Misplaced Admiration.

Dear Mae: Many thanks, you're a dear,
'Twas a thrilling surprise, and I fear;
I could call you a honey,
But that would sound funny,
So I'll just call my thank you, sincere.

Keep up the good work, and I'll bet
You'll have those queer "knockers," friends yet;
A Mae Tinée Fan,
For a fifteen year span,
That's me, and I have no regrets.

Editor's Note: Is my heart happy! ! !

Good Picture Material.

Dear Miss Tinée: What book would I like to see filmed? PICKWICK PAPERS! With Sydney Chaplin as Sam Weller, and as good cast and direction as were given "The Better 'Ole." In fact, I should like to see it made into a series of pictures.

Next, I should like to see some of the stories of dear Frank Stockton. I think they would be perfect for the talkies, especially "The Magician's Daughter" and "The Casting Away of Mrs. Lecks and Mrs. Aleshine," and perhaps "The Story of Viteau" and "The Merry Chanter."

Next, I should like to see some of Marguerite Clark's fairy plays. "The Seven Swans" and "Snow White" done as talkies. Do you remember those? They were charming.

Next, I should like to see "The Better 'Ole" done as a talkie, with just the same cast if possible.

In my opinion, your just, thoughtful and kindly criticism has done much to raise the standard of the movies. May you long continue to write your column, for my day is never quite begun without your cheery "Good Morning."

Your affectionate reader,
M. W.

Editor's Note: You know—I like the "affectionate reader." It makes my heart feel all warm and glad! Your suggestions are splendid.

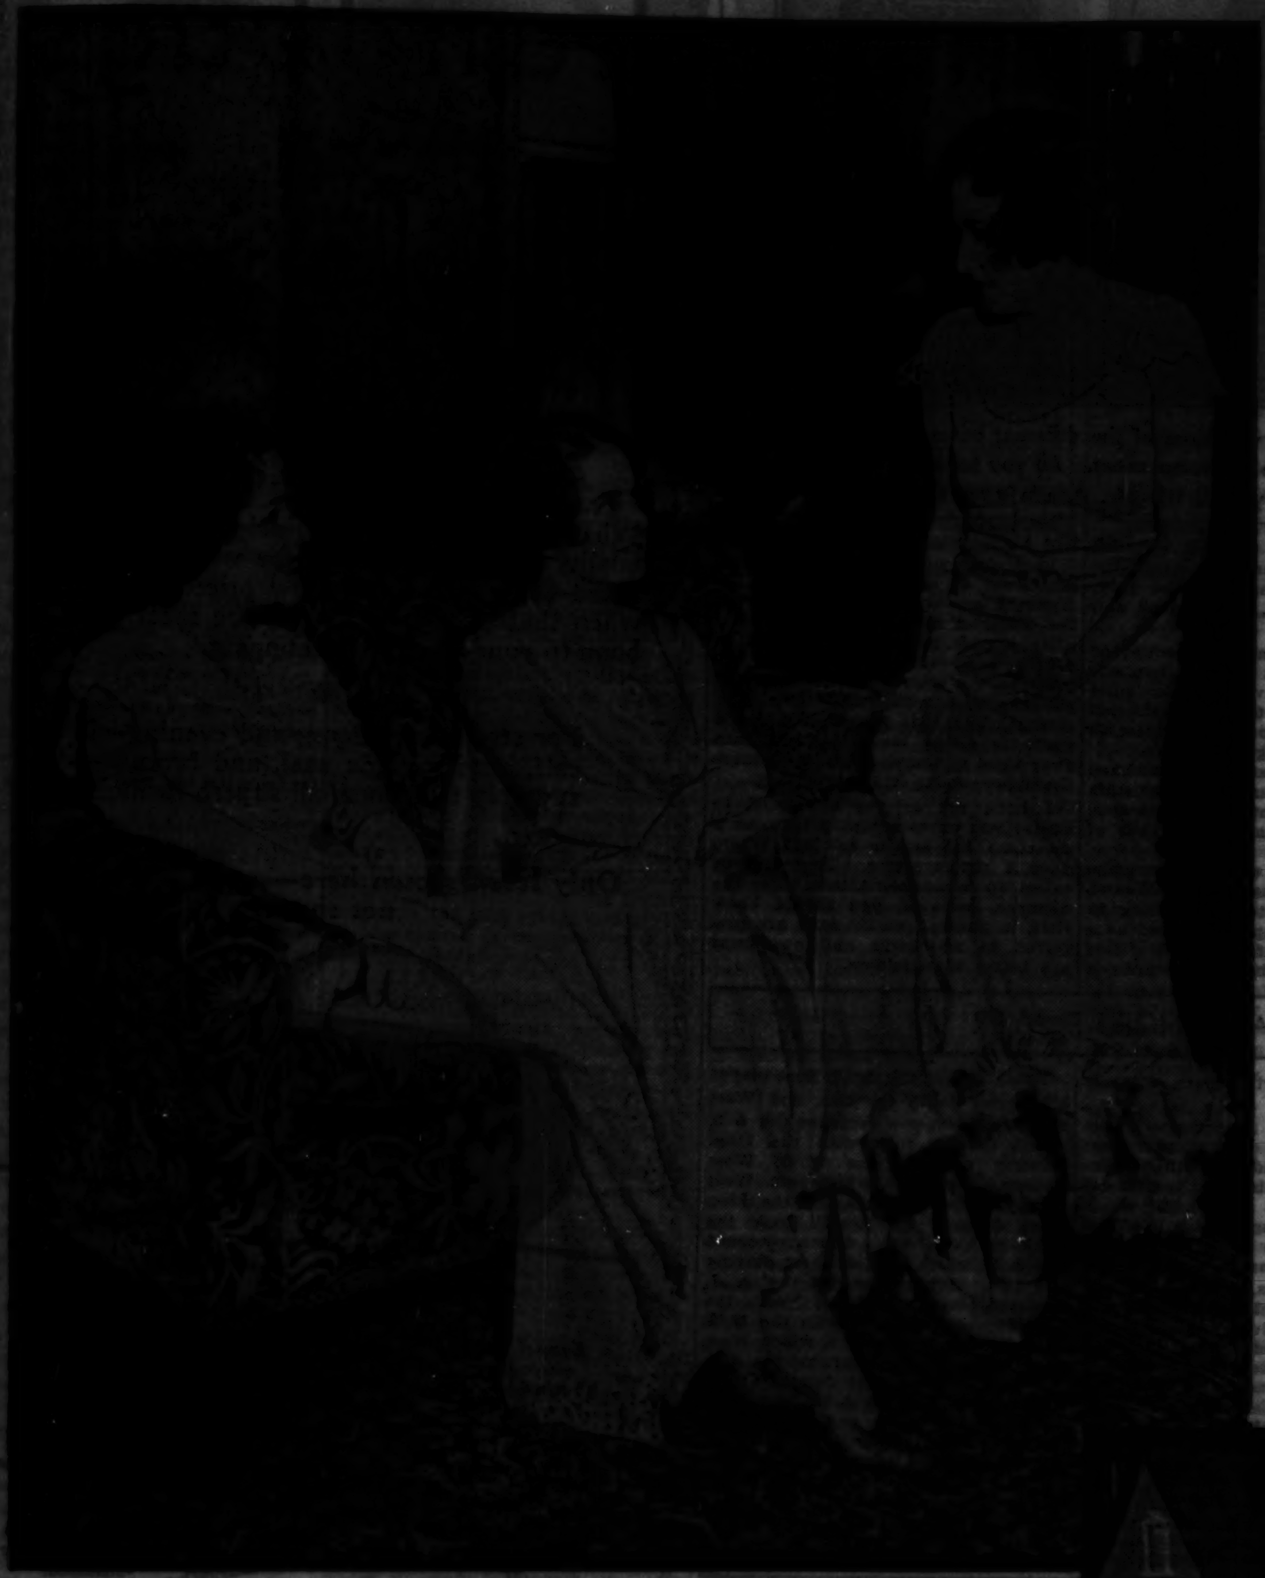
Part 8 SOCIETY TRAVEL

Chicago Sunday Tribune
THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

DECEMBER 6, 1931.

Cousin Eve Roberta Nangle
Eleanor Jewett
Charles True Adams

when society goes in for charity



Miss Mary Jane Caldwell, Miss Anna May Richards, and Mrs. George W. Griffiths were among the merrymakers at the ball held on Nov. 28 at the Bendix galleries for the benefit of the Arden Shore camp. The ball always is one of the gayest parties of the season, with carnival features and a fashion revue in which some of the prettiest young women in society act as mannequins.

Mrs. Kingsley B. Colton of 3202 Sheridan road must feel amply repaid in the work she did as a member of the committee in charge of the Arden Shore ball, for she was the lucky person who won the cunning Dobermann Pinscher puppy donated to the committee. Mrs. Colton was Miss Dorothy Peacock and is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Peacock of the Drake.

Old Auditorium Theater Again Will Be Scene of Charity Ball

By Cousin Eve.

THE moment has arrived when one really must settle down and speak a piece about the forthcoming charity ball. With all the names and committees and this and that, it is quite a piece. This, then, is the plot. Time, Dec. 12. Place, the dear old Auditorium theater, full of memories. The protagonist or girl, Mrs. Potter Palmer, chairman. Playing opposite Mrs. Palmer is Howard Gillette, general chairman, here. Stage manager and general artistic director, Mrs. John A. Carpenter. Chairman of boxes, Mrs. Joseph T. Ryerson. [And the boxes are about gone.] The floor tables are in charge of Mrs. William Mitchell and Mrs. Newton Perry. Mrs. Walter Brewster has the tickets to distribute and Mrs. Edward Brewer the social list of the invited.

Mrs. Morris Johnston controls publicity regarding the ball, and Mrs. Arthur Meeker furnishes souvenirs of the good old days of the last charity ball, when she sold the first box to James H. Moore at a premium of $790. Mrs. William McCormick Blair assembled the patronesses, and Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank and Dorothy Schmidt have the side shows, chamber of horrors, fortune tellers and surprises. Miss Eleanor McCormick is chairman of a committee of lovely young things who will badger the dancers into buying cigarets, bouquets, etc.

Takes Place of Assemblies.

Thus is the charity ball of 1931, after an absence of twenty years, to be revived from its trance and carried forward. Taking the place of the Assemblies, the Bachelor and Benedicts and the Twelfth Night balls, it is given for the benefit of unemployment relief and will be a very beautiful party.

According to Mrs. Carpenter's colored sketches, before me, the interior of the Auditorium theater will be floored over, as in the past, covering the chairs and continuing to the stage. Here the famous decorator is creating an effect of garden with blue sky, green hedges, benches, urns full of flowers and original lighting.

On either side of the proscenium arch will be a tall, gayly colored canopy. Under these will be seen the two bands. Back of the arch the lighting is to come from huge suspended balloons in violent colors, yellow, flame, green, blue, giving a strong white light. All around the stage will be set supper tables and the center of the stage and main floor will be left clear for dancing.

These supper tables are selling well. More tables will be grouped on a platform in front of the lower boxes as the sale goes on. High up above in the boxes in their bronze gilt frames and brown velvet draperies will sit an imposing array of prominent Chicagoans who will bring with them gay, interesting parties. Some of these box holders will occupy the very boxes they held twenty years ago, or that their families had before them.

Will Sit in Former Boxes.

Of those who will sit in their former boxes are Mrs. Potter Palmer, Mrs. P. A. Valentine, Charles Schweppe and Mrs. Kersey Coates Reed, Joseph Ryerson in his father's, Edward L. Ryerson's box; Cyrus McCormick, Walter B. and Solomon A. Smith, Edward L. Ryerson Jr., Henry H. Porter, in his father's box; A. B. Dick, William O. Goodman, R. Hall McCormick and Walter Ayer in the box of Mr. and Mrs. R. Hall McCormick, Mrs. John Jay Borland, Edward Swift, Mrs. Ogden Armour, and Martin Ryerson.

On Mrs. Palmer's committee are these women: Mrs. A. Watson Armour, Mrs. Waller Borden, Princess Michael Cantacuzene, Mrs. Edward L. Cudahy, Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman, Mrs. C. Morse Ely, Mrs. Stanley Field, Mrs. Max Epstein, Mrs. Howard Gillette, Mrs. Henry Hollis, Mrs. C. B. Goodspeed, Mrs. Samuel Insull, Mrs. Morris L. Johnston, Mrs. Nevins Johnson, Mrs. Garfield King, Mrs. Harold Howard, Mrs. George T. Langhorne, Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick, Mrs. R. R. McCormick, Mrs. R. H. McCormick, Mrs. Chauncey McCormick, Mrs. Robert McGann, Mrs. Charles Pike, Mrs. William R. Odell, Mrs. Arthur Meeker, Mrs. Bertram Winston, Mrs. Barrett Wendell, and Mrs. Warren Ripple.

On Howard Gillette's committee are Lester Armour, Rosecrans Baldwin, Ernest Byfield, Keith Carpenter, William Clow Jr., Joseph Cudahy, James H. Douglas, Russell Forgan, Charles Y. Freeman, Morris Johnston, Roy Keehn, Eames MacVeagh, Benjamin Marshall, Cyrus McCormick Jr., Robert R. McCormick, Potter Palmer, Newton Perry, Philip Reed, Wayne Chatfield-Taylor, Joseph Ryerson, Harry Wanner, Lee Wormser, Barrett

Mrs. John V. Farwell III., Mrs. Charles C. Haffner Jr., and Mrs. Stephen Y. Hord are among the young women interested in a dinner dance to be given for the benefit of the Eli Bates Settlement house at the Casino Friday, Dec. 11; Mrs. Haffner is chairman of the committee in charge. This picture, in which they seem to be making out a list of those to be invited to attend the benefit, was taken at a meeting of the committee at Mrs. James H. Douglas' apartment at 1500 Lake Shore drive.

Mrs. William McClellan Drake, Mrs. Charles K. Foster, and Miss Marion Clow were among the saleswomen at the Christmas gift and toy sale held Friday at the White Elephant Rummage shop, which is run for the benefit of the Children's Memorial hospital at 27 East Ohio street. Mrs. Drake was in charge of the toy department and Mrs. Foster managed the gift section. The doll house pictured above was given by Mrs. Patrick A. Valentine.

Mrs. Stewart Blair Peacock and Mrs. Charles D. Peacock were two of the attractive young society women at the Arden Shore ball.

Palm Beach Residents to Open Homes

Mrs. George A. McKinlock Predicts Lively Season, in Spite of the Depression.

PALM BEACH, Fla.—[Special.]—Depression or no depression, the boards are being taken down from the windows of the great homes here earlier than usual, with dozens of the regular old line residents already in them and many more arriving this week.

A variety of reasons being advanced by Mrs. George A. McKinlock seem more plausible than most. Mrs. McKinlock, who probably is Chicago's chief representative here, says many of the wealthy are coming early to get a breathing spell before the season gets into swing in January and that they find the tropical settings of their Palm Beach homes ideal places for resting before the social flurry begins.

This corresponds with reports that a good many persons with Palm Beach homes either are not opening their northern town houses for the early winter or are opening them for shorter periods than before and are coming to their places here sooner. The returning wanderers are predicting that the round of fashionable events in store for the winter will differ very little from past brilliant seasons and that, if some of the coming dinners and parties are not as pretentious as those of the past, there probably will be a greater number of smaller festivities.

Red Letter Dates.

Some of the events that always are red letter dates on the winter's society calendar have been announced far in advance. Mrs. McKinlock recently set Feb. 19-21 as the date for the annual flower show of the Garden club, of which she is president. And Mrs. Elisha Hyer Hubbard, the former Muriel McCormick, is reported in New York busily engaged in selecting a cast for another twelve week dramatic season at her playhouse here.

In so doing she is allaying fears of some of her friends that her marriage last summer might in some way bring an end to her ambitious plan of introducing and popularizing the drama hereabouts—a plan which won society's full support when it was launched last winter.

Hotels to Open Soon.

The Breakers, chief center of fashionable hotel life, is preparing to open Dec. 23, its usual date, and the equally famous Royal Poinciana and Whitehall will open in January, as usual. And indications are that the Everglades club, the Bath and Tennis club and other gay rendezvous of the

New York Debutante Dances to Be Gay But Not Expensive

By Nancy Randolph.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—As you may have gathered from recent remarks, the debutante season is now in full swing, and though the callow undergrads are gone back, protestingly, for the short stay in the halls of wisdom until the "little vac" at Christmas time, the winter's buds are finding sufficient stags to line the dance floor. The young men are only too anxious to accept dance bids these days. It relieves the strain on the pocket and fills an otherwise empty evening. And I include the young men of family and standing.

Every one has agreed it is a jolly good thing that debuts are not being curtailed. Of course, there will be none of the frightfully extravagant parties of other winters. No fifty-thousand dollar dances, and certainly none of the lavishness that made a two winter's ago hostess bring in a noted orchestra for just two hours' playing, between their theater appearance and their night club appearance, and pay over three thousand dollars for the honor.

But the dances are jollier than ever. Society seems determined to wake up. The resignation of Mr. Kahn from the board at the Met and the appointment of Messrs. Dillon and Cravath seems to make assured the building of the new opera house, presumably in Radio City, and the notables are taking it as a sign of a rebirth of social activity.

Heads Racing Association.

There is much more entertaining going on than last year, though the debutante march hides all the actions of the older folk. Park avenue dinners are more frequent and little circles are growing up within the great big one of society in general.

Another pleasing event was the re-

When Chicago Was Young

By Herma Clark.

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend, Julia Boyd of New York.

Chicago, Jan. 2, 1879.

DEAR JULIA:

Another year has run its course and I am writing 1879 at the head of this letter. We had a quiet but happy day yesterday. The society columns call it a stupid New Year's day, but I enjoyed it. In the morning Will and I went for a sleigh ride on Michigan avenue, behind Dexter the Fourth, as Will calls his favorite driving horse. The snow had begun to fall by 10 o'clock, but we enjoyed being out in the storm. All the horse lovers were on the avenue, which, with West Washington street, is one of our favorite drives.

We saw Henry W. King behind his handsome black carriage team, his vehicle being a comfortable double sleigh. The family coachman piloted the equipage. Fred Eames was driving his fine chestnut mare, and Scott Linn was a picturesque figure behind his white mare, Puss, while Ernest Heath, son of our mayor, was driving a dashing gray team to a double cutter.

Calling seemed this year to be more honored in the breach than in the observance of the custom. Just after the fire people revived the fashion of New Year's calls. I suppose every one felt more social in a time of calamity. But each succeeding year there has been less of it. It was something of a question this year whether to receive. I felt it would be pleasant to have Martha meet our older friends, and I talked with many people about it. But there has been so much complaint about the drinking at these receptions that we all decided against it. I think an editorial in a Chicago daily newspaper furnished the final blow to the plan. I am going to copy a little of this editorial for you:

"It is singular that refined society should, under any circumstances, permit itself to condone so beastly an offense, or that it should in any way become a party

Mrs. I. Newton Perry, Mrs. Joseph T. Ryerson, Miss Dorothy Schmidt, and Miss Eleanor McCormick were among those at a meeting of the women's committee for the charity ball. The meeting was held at Mrs. Howard F. Gillette's apartment at 1301 Astor street last week. The proceeds will be turned over to the benefits division of the Joint Emergency Relief fund.

Loved by All the World.

All the world loves a good ball as all the world loves a good wedding. The matter of who shall lead the grand march with Mrs. Potter Palmer is still on the knees of the gods. Many dignitaries have been mentioned, including Mayor Cermak, but the question is still open. Mrs. Palmer is a charming woman, with prematurely gray hair, large blue eyes, much admired.

Her mother-in-law was considered a great beauty in her day. Rather small, she had black eyes, a huge mass of slate gray hair and the smooth, handsome features of the Honoré family. I can remember very well her lovely smile and perfect teeth.

Looking backwards reminds me that the other day I passed a beautiful stone house in Washington on 16th street. It turned out to be the residence of Mrs. Marshall Field. The widow of the original Marshall Field, founder of one of Chicago's greatest fortunes, was formerly Mrs. Arthur Caton, a dashing and handsome Chicago woman and a brilliant hostess. Mrs. Field has been ill for several years.

Last week she sent for a Chicago friend who was staying in Washington. Mrs. Field was receiving visitors in her boudoir, an ornate and rosy room after the French manner. Propped up on a chaise longue with lacy pillows and a profusion of beautiful flowers all round her, she presented much of her own old magnificent appearance—hair very black, eyes sparkling, high color, in a regal negligee.

Away so long from Chicago, Mrs. Field seemed to remember little of our life here, but when her friend and neighbor, the celebrated Miss Mary Patten, came in she showed a quite vivid interest in that Washington world and all its ramifications, so foreign and gay. Mrs. Field seems to think she is finished with and not long for this complex world, but her friends feel that she has made a marvelous rally.

Mrs. Field's Chicago parties, with mise en scene the old red brick Prairie avenue house of Marshall Field, had a suddenness and dash. Guests invited over the telephone for luncheon with music would find Fritz Kreisler, or perhaps Paderewski, or some famous string quartet. After a divine matinée musical, small tables exquisitely set would be whisked in, and then a perfect luncheon served. Or again it would be a luncheon for thirty or forty. And everybody carried en masse to an amusing play. Those were the good old times!

A Week of Hospitality.

This is a week of hospitality. Sharing the honors of a perfect furore of entertaining with Mr. and Mrs. Herman Gade, here from Paris, Mrs. Walter Dillingham of Honolulu arrived on Tuesday and is the guest of Mrs. Charles B. Goodspeed in Lake View avenue. Before her marriage Mrs. Dillingham was Louise Gaylord, a great Chicago belle, blond, tall, wonderful looking rather than beautiful. A daughter of Mrs. Charles Adams, she is a first cousin of all the Mitchell children, of Kathleen Hammond [Mrs. Gardiner Hammond] and also of the Chauncey J. Blair children. She made her debut with her cousin, Italia Blair, a ravishing brunette, now Marchesa de Soriano, once of Madrid. I hear she and her daughter, Inez, are out of Spain and out of pocket as a result of the Spanish revolution.

Louise Gaylord married the great beau of the Sandwich islands, Walter Dillingham, and has lived ever since in Honolulu in a beautiful climate, glamorous surroundings and unceasing, splendid hospitality. Her mother, Mrs. Adams, is now established there as well, and there are three handsome Dillingham boys and one girl, Elizabeth, educated in America and abroad. Indeed, Mrs. Dillingham passes this way often with and without her children.

She arrived last Tuesday and the Philip Armours gave a dinner in her honor that night. Wednesday she was a guest at the rehearsal of the Thornton Wilder plays and the supper chez President Robert M. Hutchins and Mrs. Hutchins. Thursday Mrs. Borden had a dinner and opera party for Mrs. Dillingham, and Robert Allerton, Mrs. James Ward Thorne, Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick and Mrs. William Odell all followed with dinners. Then, the luncheon hostesses are Mrs. Joseph Adams, Mrs. Barrett Wendell Jr., Mrs. Howard Linn, Mrs. George T. Langhorne, the Ralph Hamills on Sunday and Mrs. C. Morse Ely.

This leaves a daily breakfast with their guest for the Barney Goodspeeds. And also a vacant Sunday afternoon, today, when they will be at home informally in their charming apartment in Lincoln park. Exit Mrs. Dillingham to New York on Tuesday.

Many Parties Today.

This afternoon is full to overflowing with cheerful parties. Rafael Sabatini, a European writer of hair raising fiction, will speak in the Palmer house for the Town Hall series, where last Sunday we heard those English singers in madrigals and cansonets of the 16th century. How delicate those love songs of Elizabeth's time after what we have to hear on the radio!

Then, the American Opera society is having a program at the Fortnightly followed by a tea.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Bissell are at home today at 49 Cedar street for Mr. and Mrs. Herman Gade, and Mr. and Mrs. Frank B. Mulford are having a party at 5 o'clock, and Dr. and Mrs. Wilhelm Ludwig Baum inaugurate the first of four December Sundays when they stay in and receive their friends.

Looking backward I met the past again last week when I saw Mme. Valentine Thomson, noted French political writer, who came from Paris with M. Laval, for she was the image in certain poses of the late Mrs. Hobart Chatfield-Taylor. But Mrs. Taylor was a great beauty, whereas Mme. Thomson is a great blue stocking, or bas bleu, it sounds better in French!

The distinguished foreigner spoke at the foreign relations luncheon [but I did not hear her there], on the European hash, minced meat, or what have you? A résumé of her entire conference amounted to this, that she thinks the Germans will meet their obligations in the merry month of December, as expected.

Elegant and Detached.

A dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. Ira Nelson Morris for Mme. Thomson Sunday night showed her to be tall, dark, elegant and detached, and not the small, weedy, darksome lady one expected a French political writer to be. Daughter of a French cabinet minister, a friend of Aristide Briand and married to an exciting man who seems to be doing movies in Africa, she is in the spellbinding class. Indeed, this dinner was one where people sat afterward and talked, and Mme. Thomson told in a thrilling way the finally accepted story of the mysterious death of the Archduke Rudolf, heir to the Austrian throne. On a recent visit in Hungary at the castle of Count Hoyos, who was at Meyerling the night of the tragedy, so many years ago, the story was retold to her. Indeed, it is now a matter of open record in the Austrian archives.

If the current depression does no other good, it is at least reviving the lost art of conversation.

A Fiery Talk.

Another political writer who was here last week was young Henry Cabot Lodge III., grandson of the famous Senator Lodge who helped keep the United States from diving headlong into the league of nations. A tall, handsome political writer he is, on the New York Herald Tribune. His talk was before the women of the Contemporary club at the Fortnightly.

The members had lunched daintily at small tables beforehand and were hardly prepared for the strong meat that young lecturer Lodge produced by way of dessert. In his early twenties, he was a fit running mate for that fiery young Randolph Churchill the same club had engaged last December, a 19 year old youth who was camping on the trail of the Labor government.

Henry Cabot Lodge III. was camping, apparently, on Secretary Stimson's trail, for the young man made the bold statement in his lecture that Henry Stimson had assured Japan through Mr. Debuchi, Japanese ambassador, that America would not boycott them, and that for a fortnight the Japanese papers had been printing this news, of which the American papers were in ignorance. When all the time an American observer was sitting in with the league of nations, and all the weapon those poor darlings had was the boycott. So, young Mr. Lodge was pouring out phials of cool Bostonian contempt upon those open covenants, secretly arrived at, and forecasting, in the most direful manner, what was likely to take place at the February naval conference.

Politics Popular.

Before me lies the Contemporary club program for tomorrow. Quincy Wright of the University of Chicago will speak on "The Issues of the Disarmament Conference," after the usual luncheon. While this is a rather dry subject, it is certain that Mr. Wright will electrify it thoroughly, and that the attendance will be great.

Never has my head buzzed so with politics as at the present moment. Everybody believes that at least one of the great conventions will be held here in June and perhaps both. Robert F. Carr, home from Baltimore, where he made a prolonged and successful rest cure at Johns Hopkins, is having a most interesting dinner tomorrow night at the Casino. The guest of honor will be Gov. Ritchie of Maryland. It came to pass that the governor was very attentive to Mr. Carr while he was at Johns Hopkins, and now Mr. Carr is presenting the popular executive of Maryland to a large group of his friends.

Gov. Ritchie, who has visited here before with the Stanley Fields, is handsome, witty, and has great qualities of leadership and initiative. He is also "a wet." In Washington they say there will be only two parties for the forthcoming national elections, the wets and drys. I do hope that is true and we can settle the question once and for all time, and have some other national topic of conversation.

Lecture on Persian Art.

Henry Field of the Field museum, "than whom," as they say at banquets, there is no more popular man in Chicago, has set the New Orient society walking on its baby legs. The dinner Wednesday night in the red lacquer room of the Palmer house ought to have a lot of snap. For, that great star of wisdom and charm and one of Chicago's most cherished possessions, Prof. James H. Breasted of the University of Chicago, will preside.

He will introduce Sir Denison Ross of London, professor of Persian in the University of London, who will lecture with lantern slides on magnificent examples of Persian art, as recently shown in the Persian exhibition. Patrons of the dinner are many and include Mrs. Waller Borden, the Breasteds, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Chadwick, Mr. and Mrs. William J. Chalmers, Gen. Charles G. Dawes and Mrs. Dawes, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Field, Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Goodspeed, Mr. and Mrs. Hamill, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Insull, Mrs. Spoor, Mrs. Howard Shaw, Col. Albert A. Sprague and Mrs. Sprague, Mr. and Mrs. Walling, and Mr. and Mrs. John Wentworth.

Junior Charity Ball.

On Friday evening there will be a Junior charity ball at the Casino for the young and pretties who have been out a few years, and for whom there seems to be no dancing this season. It is, however, a dinner dance. Gordon Kelley is doing the musical end, and Mrs. Charles C. Haffner Jr. is general chairman. The publicity is done in an enlivening manner by Mrs. John V. Farwell III., and it sounds like a good party.

Perhaps I should have said in the beginning that the Eli Bates settlement will benefit when the small expenses of the dance have been deducted. The committee is large and includes various groups in and out of town.

William Monroe has had a cable from his wife, Anna Hamill Monroe, now in Shanghai, that she is well and sailing tomorrow for Vancouver. She expects to arrive Dec. 21 and be home for Christmas. Mr. Monroe has cabled that he will meet her at Vancouver if she will spend the Christmas holidays on the Pacific coast with him. No answer as yet.

If this comes to pass, for the first time in many years the Monroes and all the younger branches of the family tree will not be at home on Jan. 1 at 64 East Elm street. Of all Chicago institutions this is one of the most popular. In fact, I can't imagine New Year's afternoon without it.

Mrs. William Calhoun writes from Peiping that it is a relief to be in China, for there is always depression there and nobody talks about it!

AIKEN, S. C.—[Special.]—Mrs. Eliphalet Nott Potter is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. George Galt Bourne, who have opened their home here for the winter. Others already here include Mr. and Mrs. Louis C. Clark, Frances L. Livingston, Mrs. Henry Worthington Bull, Betty Neilson, and Jane Clark.

Charles True Adams on Contract

Bids of No Trump at Contract and What You Must Hold to Make Them.

By Charles True Adams.

A GOOD many years ago I was playing (or, rather, trying to play—my golf is not so hot) the course at Lake Placid with a friend who played a really fine game. There is one hole there—I forget which one—where the tee is at the top of a tall, steep knoll and the green is at the top of another hill with a small valley lying between. It was not a long hole, but long enough for the best of drives. My friend teed his ball, waggled his club once or twice, and smacked out a ball that sailed all the way across and landed on the green.

I said "What a drive!" or made some equally intelligent remark, whereupon my friend said, "If you think that was a long one, watch this." He thereupon dropped another ball and smacked it again. This one went over the side of the hill opposite us.

Now I feel a little the same way about the Official System as I did about my friend's driving ability. I think that the Official method of valuing both the original and the responding hands for suit declarations is the easiest and withal the most accurate ever devised.

Today I shall take up no-trump valuations and no-trump bidding. And —if you think the other was easy—just listen to this.

Count your aces as 4, your kings as 3, your queens as 2, and your jacks as 1. Or—turn it the other way round —say to yourself "J, Q, K, A—1, 2, 3, 4." That's all there is to it.

Now if you are considering the bidding of a no-trump say to yourself, "Does my hand count 13 or more?" If it does and at least three of the suits are stopped you may bid one no-trump, provided that the fourth suit contains at least two cards. You cannot bid a no-trump with a hand void of a suit or containing a singleton unless that singleton is the ace.

As you undoubtedly know, a suit is considered stopped when it contains the ace; the king and one small; the queen and two small, or the jack, ten, and two small, or the jack and four small.

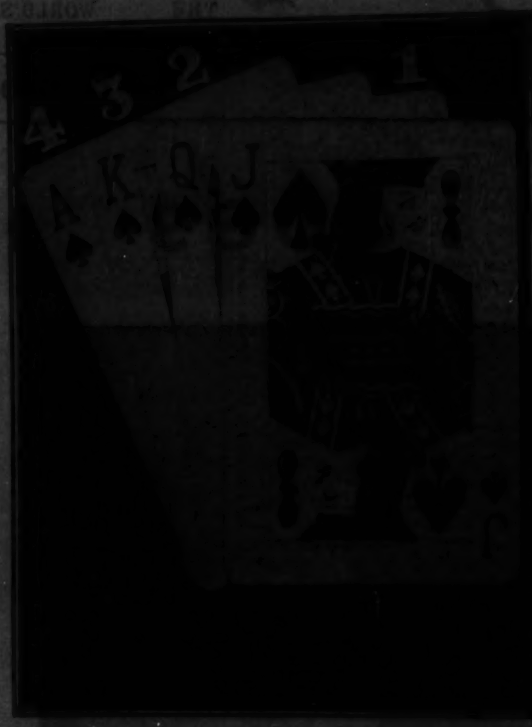
If your hand contains a count of 17 you can bid an original two no-trumps if you have all four suits stopped. With only three suits stopped you must have a count of at least 19 to make an opening bid of two.

If you are fortunate enough to have a hand which has all four suits stopped and it counts to 21 or better, you may make an opening bid of three no-trumps.

Your opening bid of three no-trumps is not a game demand bid. Offhand, I know of no system of bidding in which any no-trump bid is used as a game demand or forcing bid. This type of hand is always shown by a suit bid and not with no-trumps.

In giving you the above requirements for an original bid of one no-trump I am assuming that you are the dealer or are sitting second hand after a pass by dealer. A third or fourth hand original no-trump bid must have a count of at least 15 and should have sufficient major suit strength to assure you of defeating a game in either major suit in case your third or fourth hand bid induces the opponents to join the bidding.

I have not as yet attempted to advise you as to a choice between a no-trump bid and a suit bid where such a choice arises. That will be taken up in another article. For the moment, however, you should know that, in general, major suits are preferred to no-trumps and no-trumps are better than minors.



Here are the valuations of the different honor cards in figuring the no-trump count. All you have to do is add. Easy, isn't it? Mr. Adams explains it.

A HAND FOR THE ADVANCED PLAYER

Last spring I was walking home from the office more than usually weary. My mind was running over the incidents of a long drawn out case in the hope that I could convince myself that the jury had been impressed with my presentation. Suddenly I was rudely awakened from my reverie by a scream issuing from a small boy on the other side of the street. A moment's survey showed conclusively that a small boy from my side of the street had thrown a stone at the lad on the other side and hit him squarely between the shoulder blades with it. Since this procedure seemed to me a bit unnecessary, I asked the boy in front of me why he had done it.

"I wanted him to look at me," he said.

"Couldn't you have whistled?" I asked.

"Yes," said the lad, "I could have whistled, but he might not have looked around."

Many a contract bridge player, in endeavoring to call his partner's attention to a certain bidding situation, lacks the directness of the small boy. A month or so ago the following hand was played at a duplicate match:

NORTH
♠—A,9,8,7,6
♥—10,4
♦—8,7,6
♣—10,9,8

WEST
♠—K,3,2
♥—A,Q,J,3
♦—3,2
♣—Q,J,6,4

EAST (Dealer)
♠—4
♥—9,8,5,2
♦—A,K,J,5,4
♣—K,5,2

SOUTH
♠—Q,J,10,5
♥—K,7,6
♦—Q,10,9
♣—A,7,3

East dealt and bid a diamond and South passed. Many Wests thereupon bid no-trumps. In other words, a weakly whistle to the partner. Their bid simply said, "Partner, I have got some strength in two of the other three suits and maybe a little in the third." After North's pass, what is East to do?

He might raise his partner's no-trumps, although such procedure would be risky, indeed, with his singleton spade and his weak hearts. He might rebid his diamonds, which would be safe enough, but it left West with precisely the same information with which he started.

The better Wests, however, realised that the predominant information that should be given concerned the heart holding. And so they gave this information definitely and forcefully. They bid two hearts. Of course, North passed and now East is no longer in a quandary. He has four hearts, a singleton spade, and three high card tricks in diamonds and clubs. This makes a total of five supporting tricks. East promptly bid four hearts.

The play of the hand, while not complicated, is somewhat interesting. North opened the ♣ 10, East played the three, South the two, and West the jack. West now returned the ♦ 3, which dummy took with the king. Dummy returned the ♥ 2, West finessing the queen, which held. West then led the ♣ 4, playing the king from dummy, and South took the trick with the ace. South returned the ♠ Q, which held, declarer playing the two. South then led the ♠ J, declarer played the king, North the ace, dummy trumping with the ♥ 5. Dummy then led the ♥ 9, which West took with the jack, returning the ♠ 3, which he trumped with dummy's ♥ 8. Dummy returned the ♣ 5, which West took with the queen, and then led the ♥ A, clearing the suit. West then led his good ♣ 6, followed by the ♦ 2, which he took in dummy with the ace. He then returned the ♦ J, trumping it in his own hand with the ♥ 3, making his game and one extra.

MRS. CHARLES P. SCHWARZ is president of the Chicago Woman's Aid, an organization boasting of 1,200 members. The club has its headquarters in the Medical and Dental Arts building. Mrs. Harry C. Stickler is chairman of a card party to be given by the Woman's Allied Drug club on Tuesday at the Morrison hotel.

Chicago Junior Hadassah, of which Jeanette Eisenstein is president, will hold its annual dance next Sunday evening at the Drake. The scholarship department of the Southern Woman's club, under the chairmanship of Mrs. George Hanley Nippert, will give a program devoted to Berea college on Thursday following a luncheon at the Drake hotel. The club gives an annual scholarship to Berea.

Its Current Calendar Gives Cross Section of Varied Program That Is Carried on Throughout Year.

By Roberta Nangle.

YEAR in and year out the Chicago Woman's Aid accomplishes such a vast amount of civic, educational, and philanthropic work that it is difficult to emphasize any one branch of its departmental activities over another.

The weekly calendar of the club, which has its own quarters in the Medical and Dental Arts building, is a cross section of a busy program that is carried on from week to week during the official club season, and even well into the summer vacation period. The schedule for this coming week, for instance, includes an art and literature luncheon on Tuesday, with a talk by Dorothy Aldis entitled, like her recent book of poems, "Everything and Anything," a tea to be given by the civics and philanthropy department for its hearing aids committee on Thursday; a program sponsored by the child study committee of the educational department on Friday at 11 o'clock, when Mrs. Ruth McCarn will discuss "Growth of Independence of Honesty, Money and Education." Mrs. McCarn's lecture will be followed by a breakfast at which Dr. Helen Koch, associate professor of the University of Chicago, will speak on "The Development of Responsibility."

Daily Sessions Scheduled.

Besides these three outstanding meetings this week there will be daily sessions of departments and committee groups intent on carrying on the all-year-round routine of the club. The frequent club and departmental programs with eminent speakers are given in addition to an ever increasing amount of work which the Chicago Woman's Aid has carried on for half a century. Having begun with a small group of women who sent flowers to hospitals, this organization with a present membership of 1,200 women now looks toward its fiftieth birthday next year as one of the largest of the metropolitan departmental clubs in Chicagoland.

The club has always contributed generous funds to every current emergency. Last year its members raised $11,000 for city food relief and thus far this year they have raised $8,000 for the Joint Emergency Relief committee of Cook county. It has also coöperated in such civic activities as a relief station for the daily assistance of the unemployed under the emergency relief committee.

Action in Many Fields.

The club's philanthropic projects are far too numerous to mention. It has a child committee working on problems of weight, nutrition, and daily supplementary feeding of 700 undernourished children. The same committee maintains a birth control clinic. Another committee works at the Industrial Home for the Blind and gives special assistance to two blind students.

The club also assists deaf and dumb children; its cardiac clinic coöperates with the Chicago Heart association; it maintains mother's clubs for foreign-born women in five schools; conducts citizenship classes and teaches English; maintains summer school vacation centers, and supplies Chicago Symphony children's concert tickets to underprivileged children.

The hearing aids committee members, under the chairmanship of Mrs. Louis Pelton, who will be guests at the civics and philanthropy tea on Thursday, has been actively engaged in a campaign to ameliorate conditions of Chicago's deafened school children. Among its recent achievements are the following:

1. Religious training is made possible for every deaf and deafened child who wishes to attend Sunday school in his own denominational house of worship.

2. A campaign is in operation whereby every child in the public school is having a hearing test made by members of a special committee appointed through the Laryngological and Otological society in coöperation with the board of education.

3. Five hundred speaking tubes were "manufactured" in the Chicago Woman's Aid club rooms and are being distributed by the teachers of the deaf-oral departments.

Aid School Children.

4. Five schoolrooms have been equipped with electrical hearing devices. It has been discovered that a great percentage of children who heretofore were considered totally deaf have residual hearing, and with the aid of electrical devices these children are being reëducated. They are learning to hear and speak—one word at a time.

5. Obsolete radios and headphones have been secured through a public appeal and are being reconstructed by students at Sheldon branch of Lane Technical High school and at the Radio Television institute.

6. The first reconstructed combination model assembled by students was presented to the Beidler school, 3151 Walnut street. The outfit accommodates eight children and by means of a microphone these deafened pupils hear not only radio programs but their teacher's voice as well.

7. The second model will be on display in the clubrooms at the tea on Thursday, at which time Dr. Martin Hayes Bickham will speak on "Preparing Handicapped Citizens to Share in the Nation's Work." Miss Clara Newlee, head teacher of the deaf-oral department at the Parker Practice school, will speak on "The New Method of Educating Deaf-Orals," and Dr. Leo Kallen will address the meeting on "Residual Hearing in Deaf Mutes." William J. Bogan, superintendent of schools, will be a guest.

Club Ethics

By Maude Swalm Evans.

"WHY, Mary Hindle, what are you doing here at this time of day?" The house chairman greeted her friend as she came into the Civic club lounge. "Come over here and sit down. You know all these girls. Are you having your vacation?"

"An enforced one," Mrs. Hindle answered. "Some one had to go from our office and I was the only one who had a husband, so here I am."

"I should think your passing the bar examination would have saved you," voiced the librarian.

"Mr. Buchanan would have kept me if I'd agreed, but the sentiment in the office was too marked against it for comfort, in spite of the fact that some of the girls are living at home and have fathers and brothers working."

"O, well, you deserve a good rest," the house chairman consoled her.

"I'm working harder than I ever did before," returned Mrs. Hindle. "I've had to let my maid and my laundress go and I'm making over our clothes instead of having my seamstress do it, or instead of buying new ones. I've stopped the children's music lessons, too, and I'm trying to keep them going. But to tell the truth, I don't enjoy it all nearly as much as I did my office work."

"And our whole trend of education is to encourage the student to select the thing for his life's work in which he is most interested because he'll do that thing best," pointed out the education chairman.

"That applies particularly to 'he,' not to 'she,'" commented the art chairman. "'She' is supposed to keep house if she's married, whether or not she likes it."

"It sounds like an endless chain," reflected the house chairman. "Because you lose your job, your maid, laundress, seamstress, and music teacher lose their jobs and as a result each one stops buying necessities and luxuries from which still others derive their living, and the still others stop."

"And efficiency and happiness in work is sacrificed all along the line because general sentiment is against a married woman doing the thing she likes best," interrupted the education chairman. "Let's have tea."

Question.

"We have a ruling that a chairman can vote only when her vote will decide the outcome. Does not this do away with the secrecy of the ballot?—J. L."

Reply.

Yes, in this case, but the question before the house must be decided one way or the other.

A New Exhibit at the Art Institute

Third International Show of Lithography, Wood Engraving on View Until Jan. 24.

By Eleanor Jewett.

THE Art Institute will hold a number of interesting exhibitions within the next few weeks. The first of importance opened last Thursday and will continue to Jan. 24. It is the Third International Exhibition of Lithography and Wood Engraving. The two we have already enjoyed have been very much worth while. There is good reason to suppose the present effort is equally satisfactory. Five prizes are awarded in this show: the Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Logan three prizes of $100 and a bronze medal, $75 and $50, and the Walter S. Brewster prizes of $50 for the best wood block print, and $50 for the best lithograph.

From approximately 2,000 works submitted, about 300 were chosen. The committee on prints and drawings of the Art Institute made the selection. The committee is composed of Walter S. Brewster, chairman; Robert Allerton, Frederic C. Bartlett, Chauncey McCormick, Alfred E. Hamill, Melville E. Stone, Thomas E. Donnelley, and Mrs. Charles Netcher, with Robert B. Harshe, director of the Art Institute, as ex-officio member. The countries represented in the exhibit include Austria, Belgium, Canada, China, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, France, Germany, Great Britain, Holland, Italy, Japan, Mexico, Norway, Sweden, Spain, Switzerland, Russia, and the United States. The prints are for sale at moderate prices and are suitable for Christmas gifts.

Paintings by Young Mexicans.

The exhibition of paintings by Mexican children in the Children's museum of the Institute is rather delightful. It may be considered in the light of a more formal exhibit of Mexican art which will open in the Institute Dec. 22 and continue to Jan. 17. Where the children are unconsciously naive, we will find the older painter consciously so. The primitive, the unsophisticated and the natural are close cousins to the modern sophisticate of every country. Mexico is not behind the times in its drawing or use of color.

The modern Mexican painter is as apt in the patter of Van Gogh, in his Maya tradition, in this and that use of simplicity and awkwardness, as is the modern Chicagoan. The Carnegie last spring had a representative exhibit of contemporary Mexican art. This may be the same I saw then. It was curious and ugly, primitive and forceful. It had little of grace and beauty or fine painting to commend it. Italy many centuries ago gave the world Giotto and Cimabue. In many respects Mexican art is no further advanced today, judging always by the naiveté of this contemporary recital.

Two Exhibitions.

The Chicago Artists' exhibition this year, as announced by the Art Institute, will be held Jan. 28 to Feb. 28, 1932. Paintings and sculpture by artists living within one hundred miles of Chicago are eligible.

Another exhibition to open earlier at the Art Institute is that of paintings from various provinces of Sweden, collected by Miss Florence Dibell Bartlett on several trips, to be shown beginning Dec. 22. These paintings are known as peasant "Bonader." Back of the brilliant coloring and romantic style of these decorations is the Scandinavian feeling for three essentials to living—nature, religion, and husbandry. The exhibit promises to be most interesting.

A curious pair of dueling pistols is one of the exhibits to be seen in a wall case in Hutchinson wing, Art Institute. They recall early times in America, when the "code" was still in force, the code of honor by which any insult or discourtesy could find its best answer on the dueling ground. After the tragic death of Hamilton, young America's great secretary of the treasury, the code fell into disuse.

The pistols are part of a group of interesting objects in the case, the contents of which are lent by Mrs. Fred Mandel of Chicago. Other curious things are "traveling services," work boxes, apothecary's cases, toilet sets, "Coffret de Voyages," architectural tools, and so on. The exhibit will remain on view until Jan. 1.

A former dean of the Art Institute school, Theodore J. Keane, has settled near Custar, O., and gradually built up a little art school, with the children of the countryside for pupils. He has given much thought to the contemporary exhibit, and an idea of his is not at all bad. He suggests that two juries be appointed, one jury to judge modern art and the other to judge standard art, as he calls it.

A conclusion of his is this: "Art today is not unlike religion—so many faiths and beliefs clamoring for attention. Well, anyway, I suppose it is beneficial to our livers to get stirred up once in a while." So the next time your temper gets out of hand at sight of some of the frivolities and mendacities hung in galleries in the name of art think of the good you are doing your health by keeping a taste that rebels against them.

Returns to First Love.

This question of juries and their actions is eternally amusing. It has been brought to my attention recently that a good human interest story is attached to one of the paintings the jury permitted to pass them in the current American Paintings and Sculpture exhibit at the Art Institute. The painting is "Klavala Klopatoff, a Dream of Old Russia," by Mary Searle.

Mary Searle is today an old lady, near if not in her seventies. About forty years ago she went to school with Lorado Taft and was much interested in art. She studied for a little while in his studios after her college days were over. Then her brother's wife died leaving him with five little children. Miss Searle gave up her ambition, dried her brushes, closed her paint box, went to her brother's home, and brought up those children.

Now that they are grown and do not need her constant and loving care any longer she has gone back to her first love. She has resumed her smock and made up her palette. She exhibits at this and that little town show and frequently takes a try at bigger game. She hit the target in the present case.

The American jury, which turned down countless professional and practicing painters, accepted her picture. It was a great pleasure to her. It is delightful for all those who know about her self-sacrifice that she should now be given honor. Yet, does it not seem just the slightest, the merest bit odd that the jury should have discovered her talent and forbade talent in, say, Paul Trebilcock, who, it is understood, submitted a magnificent portrait to the show?

Old Lady Given Place.

Last year, in similar fashion, the jury of an Art Institute show found grace in another old lady's painting. She lived somewhere in the west and had reared her children well and then turned back to the paints which had amused her when she was a girl.

Her son, a young man, brought a few of his mother's pictures to Chicago and showed them to the director of another of our galleries. The director said: "They are good, fresh, with a certain flavor and charm about them, but I think she should study." One of these paintings, a little Negro boy eating a huge slice of ripe watermelon, was passed by the jury and hung in the institute. Why study? Why not raise families and then paint for fun? It seems a good way to win recognition.

There is another picture in the present American show that raises a question. Rifka Angel last year and the year before had a one man show at Knoedler's. She used to be a model in New York and one of the men for whom she posed discovered her talent for painting and suggested she become an artist. She went abroad for a while, not a long while.

She came back and Knoedler gave her a show. It was just that easy, from all the accounts one hears. Her painting was naive. That is the big standby of the modernist. Without that adjective a lot of modernism would flop. Her painting was naive. It was a bad mixture of Nura and Buk. Still, her paintings sold. Last winter she reported again in the Knoedler gallery, and her pictures were bigger, still naive.

Jury Accepts Picture.

This year she tried for the American paintings and sculpture exhibit, the most important staged by the Chicago Art Institute each year. The only thing that could surprise us more than her presence on the wall is to learn that she was invited. She may have been, as incredible things have happened.

We will, however, take for granted that in this case the authorities did not act, but the jury did. They took the portrait "Betty," by Rifka Angel. They turned down Paul Trebilcock, one among many good painters on whom also "thumbs down" was said. Trebilcock offered a good portrait (those of you who know his work can scarcely doubt it).

"Betty" is naive. She is very naive. She would fit very well into the "Haunted House" to which the Logan $2,500 prize was given. That also is naive. It does not seem that a jury could go much further. This jury put a premium upon everything, apparently, except good draftsmanship, technique, brilliance of color, trueness of color, inspirational content, sincerity, strength, vitality, and beauty.

Many Paintings Invited.

Not many paintings passed the jury. Most of the pictures in the show were invited. Perhaps it should not seem as strange as it does that there is so little color in this show that is in any way big. We heard the word "cute" applied to a number of paintings one afternoon. Imagine "cute" being the best American art can be today! The term is like the cut of a whip on raw flesh. Yet it is true. There are a number of "cute" pictures present. There is not one outstanding painting.

It is a pity and worse than that, a serious reflection on the jury that the average is so low, the ordinary picture in such evidence, a premium put on mediocrity. Maurice Fromkes' (and he is dead) "Angelita and Her Husband" comes the nearest in the paintings to giving one a thrill on the score of execution. It is well done.

One must turn to the sculpture to see really good art. Here there is fine and brilliant work. There is little that is naive about the sculpture. Even the prize group, "Mother and Child," by Zorach, is not naive. It is primitive, sober, robust. But look at the passionate sculpture of Szukalski! There is something to lift you out of your ordinary self. And look at the exquisite, the tenderly beautiful "Woodland Baby," by Ruth Sherwood; a fountain figure so graciously modeled, so alive and responsive, so shy and winsome; it sings in your heart. Can you refuse that soft little palm?

Then, look at the charming portrait head "David," by Emory P. Seidel; and at the gentle and beautifully modeled "Figure for Children's Park," by Sylvia Shaw Judson. Look at the spirited goats, "Bill and Nanny," by Edith Boynton, and the virile "Three Hissing Geese," by Heinz Warneke, and the lovely "Forest Idyll," by Albin Polasek. Nor forget the four large figures in bronze in the first gallery; without them the room would dwindle to little importance. Nor overlook the "Swimmin'," by Chester Beach, a fascinating and adorable figure of a child.

If the painters who insist on muddy color and muddy outline and a general confusion of technique, aptly naive, would learn from the sculptors precision, clarity, purity, and a few more of the essentials to good craftsmanship our next exhibit could be anticipated with livelier expectation than any aroused by the sight of the current show.

Morse Rummel Plans Visit to United States

By May Birkhead.

PARIS.—[Special.]—A well known American pianist who has long made his headquarters in Paris will visit Chicago and other American cities next autumn. Walter Morse Rummel, composer as well as executant, has seldom played here during the last few years, being much in demand in the larger cities of France outside the capital and in many of the principal musical centers throughout Europe. He also fills many engagements in north Africa and has a considerable following in South America, where he annually makes a tour of several months.

Recently Rummel began a series of Sunday morning recitals here at the Elysée Gaumont theater in the Champs d'Elysées, which have been attracting such musical, mundane, and political notabilities as Mme. Claude Debussy, widow of the illustrious composer; Mme. Waldeck Rousseau, widow of the well known statesman; Mme. Adolph Brisson, who conducts literary and musical lectures in connection with her publication, "Les Annales"; Edouard Herriot, former French premier and biographer of Mme. Recamier and Beethoven. Also, Philippe Berthelot, who has long been Aristide Briand's right hand man, having perhaps a greater knowledge of foreign affairs than any man in France; Joseph Paul-Boncour, lawyer, parliamentary orator, and French representative at Geneva; and many others, including numerous Americans.

At Work on Concerto.

Rummel, who has transcribed Bach for the piano, and who has composed many songs and other pieces, is now at work on a concerto or two for piano and orchestra to commemorate the centenary of his grandfather, Samuel Morse, discoverer of the telegraph.

The inventor hit upon this idea in the year 1832 while en route from Havre to New York, and some years later, 1838, he induced the French government to grant him a patent six years before he was able to send his famous first message from Washington to Baltimore. Rummel is weaving into his composition some of the rhythms of the Morse telegraphic code.

Luncheon Honors Marshal.

One of the most brilliant social affairs was the luncheon given by Ganna Walska recently at her home on the rue de Lübeck, in honor of Marshal Lyautey, the great Moroccan proconsul and soldier, and the organizer of the Colonial exposition, which has just closed its doors. Mme. Lyautey, his handsome and distinguished wife, was also a guest of honor as were Prince Nicholas of Greece and his wife, who bears the title of Grand Duchess Helen of Russia. Others included the Polish ambassador, Dr. Alfred Chlapowski, and his wife; the Austrian ambassador, Dr. Alfred Grunberger; Philippe Berthelot and his wife; Mme. La Roche, wife of the French ambassador to Warsaw; Mrs. Elsie Stern; and Mme. Sert, divorced wife of the well known Spanish painter.

is one of the most debasing of practices. Of course, society does not expressly intend to make any one drunk, though perfectly aware that such a result is inevitable. . . . There is no question that many a confirmed drunkard got his first taste of and liking for liquor at the hospitable sideboard of a kind New Year hostess. This fact alone is enough to damn the practice.

"Apart from moral considerations, there are others which condemn the vinous hospitalities of New Year's day. A young lady who on that day 'sets 'em up' for her visitors is, for the time being, unpleasantly like a barmaid, whose vocation does not rise above the cocktail mixer who labors behind a bar. Moreover, to many people who are invited to 'take some refreshment,' the whole thing is a nuisance. To those who are fond of a good glass at the right moment the mixing which results from driking at different places is an abomination, not only to their taste, but to their stomachs."

So we were glad to hang a basket outside our door as an indication that we were not at home to general callers. We found most of the people we know best had done the same thing.

We invited the Joseph Kirklands for high tea and to attend the theater. Maj. Kirkland and Will are very congenial, as they have common ground in their army experience, while Maj. Kirkland is studying law and expects to be admitted to the bar soon. Will says he has a fine mind and should be a great success. It is remarkable that he had the courage to begin his studies at this time, for he is a man in middle life. He had been in business before, but felt inclined to the law.

He is literary in his tastes and does much writing. He has in mind a story of early Illinois, which I do hope he will have published. I was fascinated with his conversation yesterday. Mrs. Kirkland, too, is lovely and interesting.

We are planning to give a dance for Martha in February, and I think we shall make it a "German." Don't you think it offers an agreeable change from the ordinary dancing party? I bought a new book last week which gives instructions about planning such an entertainment. Will makes great fun of it, but Martha Jr. and I pore over it and find it useful.

Will loves to pretend he is a book agent selling it, and last night, when the Kirklands were here, he amused them by giving a talk something like this: "Madame, are you the lady of the house? May I enter and explain to you the puppus of a little work which I am offering to the public? Thanks. This volume which I hold in my hand is entitled 'The German; How to Give It; How to Lead It; How to Dance It.' This great work meets a long felt want, indeed, is a public necessity. The authors [for it is the joint production of several minds, the subject being too vast and important to be compassed by a single person] deplore the fact that the German is as yet without a history or a literature. But they have remedied the defect. No longer shall this reproach exist, to the shame of the U. S. A." [Here he seats himself beside me, wipes his mouth with his large handkerchief, twirling it about before replacing it in his pocket, and, licking his thumb, leafs over the pages.]

"You have probably had" [he glares about here] "a most inadequate idea of the importance of a leader of the German. Here is a definite catalog of the rare, the SUBLIME, qualities necessary for this august personage to possess in order that he may exercise, even passably, the functions of his high office."

Then, clearing his throat loudly, he reads the chapter on "The Fish Pond Figure."

"Each lady is given a number. Place a large tub of water at the end of the room. Decorate it in any way you like. This is a grave responsibility to put on the shoulders of the leader, but if he is of the right metal he will rise to it. Place in the water as many hollow toy fishes as there are couples in the room, each fish to have a number attached to it. Procure a couple of miniature nets on the end of a rod. Now signal for gentlemen to come forward and fish. As each is successful the leader hands him a piece of ribbon and a pin. He bears off his prize and, attaching it to the dress of the lady having the corresponding number, he dances with her."

We were all in giggles before he had finished. Well, I know the German does sound silly when you read about it, but it is really quite pretty and amusing when done by attractive and well dressed young people, and I think our party for Martha must take this form, since it is all the rage.

Happy New Year, dear Julia!
Your loving friend,
MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

Footnotes.

Maj. Joseph Kirkland and Mrs. Kirkland, who had "high tea" with Martha and Will in 1879 were parents of Miss Carolyn Kirkland ["Madame X." of THE TRIBUNE], of Mrs. Victor Sanborn of Lake Forest, and Mrs. John Kirkland of 25 East Walton place. Maj. Kirkland wrote a novel, "Zury," which gave a very accurate picture of Illinois life of an early day. He also wrote a history of Chicago.

Chicago had its society drinking problem in the '70s, as will be seen by Martha's letter.

"The German" raged like an epidemic at this time [the late '70s], to be succeeded later by the cotillion.

An interesting letter from George E. Sanford of Berwyn, Ill., tells of seeing Lincoln, who was going to Washington for his inauguration. This was at Erie, Pa. Says Mr. Sanford: "The train came in and father took me on his shoulder, where I could see. I saw a very tall man step from the train and walk up the steps to the platform. What made this tall man look even taller was the fact that he had on the tallest stovepipe hat I ever saw, and another thing was that he was followed by a very short man, with his hat off. This short man was about three steps behind Lincoln, and therefore three steps lower down, which emphasized the difference in their height. It was Stephen A. Douglas."

[Has any other reader a memory of seeing Lincoln?]

C. H. MacAulay writes a delightful letter from Homewood, Ill., about early Sunday school days, when Miss Joan Pinkerton [Mrs. William J. Chalmers] was an adored teacher. Mr. MacAulay also tells of a choir singer of early days named Nellie Leonard, who had a delightful voice and was popular with the young men. She later became a world famous beauty and comic opera star and was known as Lillian Russell. Mr. MacAulay used to pump the organ for Dr. Louis Falk when he was organist of the Union Park Congregational church.

[Has any other reader pumped a church organ? Send in your story about it.]

Marion Lawton Bushnell sends an epitaph she found on a tombstone in a New York state cemetery:

"Death it is my portion;
Physic was my food,
Christ was my physician
When the druggist could do no good."

Answer to question No. 21: The Second Presbyterian church, which stood at the corner of Wabash avenue and Washington street in the '50s and '60s, was known as "the spotted church," because of the black liquid which had oozed out on the white stone. After the fire this church built its present structure at 20th street and Michigan avenue.

Question No. 22: What Chicago pioneer, an employé of the American Fur company, first saw Chicago in 1818, when the only buildings here were Fort Dearborn, the home of John Kinzie, a tumbledown shanty occupied by a French fur trader? This pioneer lived much with the Indians in his early days, and could outrun many a redman, his endurance being remarkable.

Send proverbs handed down in your family, epitaphs, or old songs and contributions for "Beloved Home Town" corner, to Herma Clark, care of THE CHICAGO SUNDAY TRIBUNE, Chicago.

Palm Beach Residents to Open Homes

wealthy will be running full blast again by next month.

A few small parties already are being given. One such recent event brought together members of one of the Chicago groups that includes Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Hayes and Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Hall. Mrs. Hayes recently returned here after the Caribbean flight with Lindbergh on the American Clipper.

Among residents of Chicago and vicinity either here or expected soon are Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Marx, who have been having Mrs. Marx's sister, Miss Marie Klein, as their guest; Mrs. E. F. Norton, who has occupied an apartment; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Harrington Chadwick, whose new residence was completed here during the summer, and Vincent Bendix, who also will occupy a newly built house.

Early Arrivals.

Mr. and Mrs. Phil H. Sawyer of Oshkosh were early arrivals, but they have been considering leaving in January on a trip to Honolulu and the orient. Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Fatio with their son, Maurice Pierre, also are back after spending part of the summer abroad. Mrs. Fatio's mother, Mrs. Charles Curry Chase of Oshkosh, has been expected from Chicago where she has been visiting friends.

Mrs. Samuel Cole has opened her home, as have Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Garris of Grand Rapids. Mrs. George A. McKinlock is planning to have Mrs. Harry Shearson and Henry Farnum of Philadelphia as guests during the holidays. Mr. and Mrs. Frank O. Butler, Mr. and Mrs. George Rasmussen of Chicago, and Mr. and Mrs. John S. Pillsbury of Minneapolis plan to arrive early this month.

Mme. Louise Homer, Mrs. Arthur Hammerstein, the former Dorothy Dalton, Harold S. Vanderbilt, the Hon. Mrs. Frederick Guest, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Somers Roche, and Walter P. Chrysler are a few of the many others who recently arrived or have announced dates when they will be here.

New York Debutante Dances to Be Gay But Not Expensive

ent election of F. Ambrose Clark to the head of the United Hunts Racing association. "Brose" is perhaps the best liked man in society today, and he has given the love of outdoor sports more support than any other man since Reggie Vanderbilt. With the genial "Brose" as president of the Hunts, the gatherings at Belmont will take on much more of that informal brilliance which spells success for such events, and you may be certain he will lead in the fostering of pre-meet luncheons and post-meet dinners.

Just as splendid a thing was the appointment of John Hay Whitney and A. C. Bostwick to be directors of the United Hunts. Both "Jock" and "Pete" are very young men, and both are foremost in their love of horses. There isn't any doubt that one, or both of them, some time in the future will head the Hunts, and their presence on the board will assure a continual betterment of the one race meet in the metropolis that is exclusively the property of society.

Countess Changes Plans.

It isn't quite certain now that the countess of Granard and her daughter, Lady Eileen Forbes, will make their annual visit to New York. They were scheduled to arrive early in the year and be the fêted notables in Lady Granard's home town. However, since the announcement of the engagement of Lady Moira Forbes to the marquis de Brissac, son of the duc de Brissac, all plans have gone by the board.

If Moira and Eileen have a double wedding in Westminster cathedral on Jan. 12, there will hardly be time for Lady Granard to come to New York. Certainly the event, with Eileen becoming the bride of the earl of Dumfries, and Moira of the marquis, will be the most brilliant in England since the war, and the most brilliant Anglo-American affair since Consuelo Vanderbilt became duchess of Marlborough, and that is way back in the age of innocence. Already countless New York notables are preparing to attend the ceremony, and the chances are that Lady Granard will return to New York after her daughters have gone off on their honeymoons.

Monday Musicals Resumed.

With Albert Morris Bagby safely ensconced in the New Waldorf, and the first of this year's Monday musicals starting the new series already held, another sigh of relief went up. In the old Waldorf one always saw every matron and maid of standing, and every type of coiffure imaginable, from Mrs. Twombley's Victorian to Mrs. Bonaparte's decidedly unclassifiable. The dapper Albert Morris is deep in the hearts of the less frivolous members of the smart set.

Included among those at the concert were Ida Adams, Mrs. George E. Dunscombe, Mrs. Alfred P. Sloane Jr., Mrs. Daniel G. Tenney, Mrs. Wendell Phillips, Mrs. George Quackenbush, Edith J. Merrill, Mrs. William A. Simonson, Mrs. Samuel Pryor, and Mrs. W. Orr Barclay.

Having deserted the old Waldorf, the Charity ball seems determined to cling to the Ritz. For the last few years the endeavor to crowd as many people as possible into the ballroom has been abandoned, and the ball, I think, will never be the grand function of the season, as it was from 1887 right up until several years ago. This season the ball takes place on Jan. 17 and many dinners will be given before the traditional grand march takes place.

Junior Assembly Friday.

That staidest and most exclusive of debutante dances, the Junior assemblies, had its first staging at the Ritz on Friday. None but the elect are permitted to nominate their daughters or kinswomen as members, and woe to the poor deb who fails of election! She might just as well hang up her party frocks and refuse to make her bow.

Each girl has the right to choose one partner and an extra one is endowed her by her sponsor, thus giving her two, and only two, cavaliers. And the dance, consider, ends very shortly after 1 o'clock.

World Cruise Leaves Orient for Home Port

Closing Days of Tour Carry Sightseers Through Japan and Hawaii.

[This is the fifth and final of a series of articles describing a typical world cruise.]

As you proceed to Japan your ship stops at Miyajima, where you will discover the most beautiful spot you have ever seen, with a wealth of marvelous natural scenery. The natives will group themselves about you, frankly taking you in, and, judging by their laughter, finding your height and clothes highly amusing. Your first impression of these gayly dressed little people scuffling along with their absurd wooden clogs over stone pavements will last throughout your stay in Japan. The island of Miyajima is sacred and abounds in temples and shrines.

Your ship sails away for Kobe, a city now thoroughly westernized with foreign influence apparent everywhere. You will go to Kyoto, the ancient capital of Japan, viewing the more outstanding of its 900 temples, passing through a city whose palaces, gardens, quaint shops, and bazaars fill you with delight. It is here you will witness the famous cherry blossom dance and will learn that at cherry blossom time the whole nation is en fête, a period when all the most splendid clothes are brought forth and the people are in their gayest and most attractive mood. It will be your privilege to witness a series of native dances given in a great auditorium—not a dance simply arranged for your benefit, but the real thing, with a small section of seats held for you and the rest of the audience the enthusiastic Japanese themselves. The performance is lavish and entrancing.

Along Shaded Avenues.

The following morning you set out by train for Nara, where rikshas will take you to the deer park. There you will witness odd performances of old Japanese plays, carried out by two or three actors, with plots that are easy to follow. Your riksha boy will take you along shaded avenues to the various temples.

The next day you will proceed to Yokohama and from there to Kamakura, Tokio, and Nikko. Tokio is a complete surprise and seems more like America than the far east.

Nikko is beautiful; there is a Japanese proverb: "Never use the word magnificent until you have seen Nikko."

Leaving Japan, you proceed to Hawaii, with your first stop Honolulu, where you discover a group of natives are serenading you with the soft, sweet music of the islands. You are greeted by native girls carrying hundreds of flower necklaces or leis—truly a charming welcome. Here a drive over the Island om Cahu, especially to the Pali, a gigantic precipice 1,600 feet high, and to Waikiki beach enthrall you. The Royal Hawaiian, where you have luncheon, is one of the most attractive hotels in the world.

Your ship leaves Honolulu for Hilo and you start off for a long drive up to the rim of the great crater Kilauea, 4,000 feet above sea level. Luncheon is served at the Volcano house and afterwards there is native dancing.

The End of the Trail.

After leaving Hawaii it is hard to believe that your next port is in America. You arrive at San Pedro, proceeding to Los Angeles. Then you go on via the Panama canal, stopping at Balboa, with an interesting morning ride through the city and over to the ruins of old Panama. For the passage through the canal a buffet luncheon is served on deck so that you will not have to miss any of the wonders.

Your next stop is Havana. After your other varied experiences you will perhaps feel a little more at home as you enter the smaller streets of its picturesque old town whose houses are guarded by iron studded doors. These are suggestive of the romantic days when Havana was a stronghold of the Spanish power in the new world.

Perhaps it is just as well that the next two days are filled with so many things to do, with every other person you know giving a farewell party, in which quantities of names and addresses are exchanged. Soon you have landed at New York, and away you go with all the amazing paraphernalia you have collected in the last four and one-half months.

Down Goes the Cost of a Trip to Southland

LIKE almost every other commodity, the cost of Florida sunshine and Cuban novelty has been materially reduced. There never has been a time when a winter tour through the southland could be made more reasonably.

One of the largest tour agencies will demonstrate this fact by means of a nine day tour the coming holiday season. It will take its patrons down to the tip of that long finger of land which Uncle Sam extends toward the tropics, and it will give them the opportunity of enjoying a four day trip to Cuba and spending New Year's eve in Havana. And the total expense, including all necessities—rail and motor car transportation, meals and hotel accommodations—will be no higher than the expense of living at home.

Members of the party will spend Christmas at home, leave Chicago by special train at 9:20 a. m. Dec. 26, and will be enjoying the air of Jacksonville in less than twenty-four hours from that time. Thence, after a round trip expedition to St. Augustine, the route will lead across the peninsula to Tampa, Tarpon Springs, Clearwater, and St. Petersburg, on the west coast. Recrossing the state from Tampa, the itinerary will include Plant City, Lakeland, Winter Haven, Mountain Lake—where the Bok tower, with its carillon, is situated—Palm Beach, and Miami. From Miami the travelers may extend their tour to Cuba.

The return trip will start Jan. 3.

Afghans Enlist Medics.

PARIS.—(AP)—European doctors, dentists, and pharmacists are being engaged here to go to Afghanistan as part of a new modernization program for that Asiatic kingdom. A mission to the United States is to study American hospitals.

Good Roads and Good Ads Bring in $62,000,000

NEW YORK.—Good roads plus good advertising took more than $62,000,000 in new wealth to the province of Quebec, Canada, in last summer's resort season. This was learned here from A. J. Lallemand, official representative of the provincial highway ministry, which has charge of the work.

Mr. Lallemand said the summer of 1931 saw all tourist records fall. He related that traffic to Quebec exceeded that of a year ago by more than 17½ per cent and he revealed statistics showing the arrival in the province of 1,261,000 travelers.

"Good roads plus good advertising is what did it, we are convinced," he said. "We are spending a lot of money on both and we intend to continue. It's not every investment that returns $62,000,000 to you in one summer."

Paris Eating Less Meat.

SAINT-LO, France.—(AP)—Andre Tardieu, minister of agriculture, told a recent meeting of stock breeders here that Paris consumed 2,250,000 tons less meat in 1931 than in 1912 and the farmers are worried over the capital's loss of appetite.

Finland Cuts Arms Cost.

HELSINGFORS.—(AP)—Finland has trimmed her defense budget by 73,000,000 Finnish marks, equivalent to $1,825,000.

Suez Canal Leads Panama in Total Freight Tonnage

BALBOA, C. Z. (AP)—As an engineering feat the Panama canal stands unequaled, but as a carrier of freight it still lags behind its rival, the Suez canal.

Only once since the Panama canal was opened in 1915 has its tonnage eclipsed that of the strait between the Mediterranean and the Red sea.

In 1923, when the first burst of oil from the United States west coast poured through Panama en route to east coast refineries, traffic through the western waterway was 2,000,000 tons heavier.

Yet Panama canal transits in 1923 and in every year since 1925 have been more numerous than at Suez.

Hindu Is Granted Permit to Dig for Legendary Hoard

LAHORE, India.—(AP)—An attempt will soon be made to recover treasure said to be worth $600,000,000 at Dorawar in the Punjab.

This village is supposed to have been the capital of a wealthy kingdom centuries ago, and fantastic legends about this fabulous hoard have been handed down from generation to generation.

A Hindu, Dewan Lakhmichand, claims to have had the secret divulged to him by a hermit in his family. He has signed a contract with the Nawab of Bhawalpur whereby Lakhmichand pays for the digging and takes seven-sixteenths of any treasure found.
